Court Asked To Dismiss Eisler Plea

Bail-Jumping Red Wanted in Prison

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(UP)—The Justice Department today asked the Supreme Court to dismiss fugitive Communist leader Gerhart Eisler's contempt of Congress appeal so he can be clapped in jail the moment he is returned to the United States.

In a memorandum filed with the high court, the Department said the bespectacled little, bail-jumping German is a "fugitive from justice" and has forfeited any right to further consideration from the tribunal.

Eisler, often called the number one communist in the United States, fled the country May 6 aboard the Polish steamer Batory while his Supreme Court appeal was pending.

He was taken off the ship at Southampton, England by British authorities who are holding him for a hearing on this government's request that he be returned.

In addition to the contempt of Congress charge, Eisler has been found guilty of making false statements in a request to leave the country. He had been free on bond pending appeals from both charges.

A federal district court judge here has declared $20,000 of Eisler's $23,500 bond forfeit since he skipped the country.

His conviction on the contempt of Congress charge, carrying a one-year prison sentence and $1,000 fine, has been sustained by a circuit court of appeals. The Supreme Court agreed to consider an appeal from that decision and has heard arguments from both sides.

The Justice Department said the high court could use its own "sound discretion" about hearing appeals and urged it to reverse its action now and throw Eisler's appeal out.

The Department argument was that Eisler has no further right of appeal because he "took advantage of his freedom on bail, which was only possible because of the additional time required for proceedings in this court."

If the government's request is granted, Eisler would go to jail and begin serving his one-year sentence the moment he is returned to the States.

Student Advisers To Meet Tuesday

Roy Armstrong, director of admissions, and Dean of Students Fred Weaver spoke at a meeting of student advisers Thursday night in Phillips Hall.

Part of the spring training program for advisers, the meeting was the final one attended only by coeds. At a meeting Tuesday night at 7:30 in 206 Phillips, men counsellors will meet with the coed advisers in order to better integrate next year's program.

Armstrong spoke Thursday night on the value of the testing program, and Dean Weaver discussed coeducation and leadership. "Your job," Weaver said, "is to make the level of womanhood on the campus not medium high, but superior high. If you have done this, you will have helped not only your Alma Mater, but yourself."

Her Capps Always Off

It's A Lonely Life For MC's Wife He Gives Her The Air Every Night

By Wuff Newell
"When Jimmy goes off the air in June for a three months vacation, it'll be just like a second honeymoon for us."

That, briefly, is how Aimee Capps, wife of WPTF's unofficial matrimonial bureau head summed up the life of a radio family.

"We were married two years ago last March, but with Jimmy working every night I hardly feel as if I ever see him," she explained.

Jimmy Capps will be on the campus tomorrow night with a special program of "Our Best to You" designed and planned for Carolina students. The WPTF Cupid will play records on the front porch of Graham Memorial from 9 until 11 in conjunction with the University Club's Music under the Stars.

Aimee, who is about five feet tall and looks as if she might still be in college, graduated from Furman in 1945. After graduation she went to work for a radio station in Greenville, S. C. The following year Jimmy joined the staff and a year later they were married.

"And in the two years we've been married, we've had eight dogs. Don't you think that's a remarkable sized family for a couple married such a short time?" Aimee laughed.

In Greenville Aimee was a continuity writer. She still feels that radio is the most fascinating work there is.

"But marriage and radio can't mix," she explained. "Besides, WPTF has a rule that only one person in a family may work on the station."

Aimee still is on the inside of radio, however, for she is keeper of the scrapbook in the Capps family. Jimmy saves many of his

ANNE MARTIN as Portia, and Martha Gratton as Nerissa in a scene from "The Merchant of Venice," a Carolina Play-makers' production playing in the Forest Theatre tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30. In case of rain, the show will be played the next clear night.

Fraternities Warned Of Sex Movie Thief

Police Tell Frats to Watch for Man Who Raided State College Last Week

Campus fraternities have been warned by the Chapel Hill police department to be on the lookout for a thief who raided several State College fraternities last week-end.

The thief is reported to pose as a seller of sex movie films which he uses as a front to get into the houses. After showing his stock of sex films in the fraternity houses he returns later in the night and loots the houses. State College fraternity men lost several wallets and cameras after a visit by the "film merchant" last Saturday.

So far, the thief has not visited the University but State college students stated he had asked several of them how far it was to Chapel Hill.

After the presentation and acceptance, Dr. Hardre will address the group of North Carolina school children attending the ceremonies. Hardre was educated in public schools in France.

The Thank-You Album, a limited edition bound in leather, includes a letter from the president of France to the chief executive of the United States, 10 water color and crayon drawings by French children, eight letters from French children, and five recordings of French provincial songs.

Fellowships Will Be Cut, Senator Says

Doctor Will Lose Funds for Study

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(UP)—Chairman Brien McMahon, D. Conn., of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee said today he would move to shut off federal funds for Dr. Isador S. Edelman of Brooklyn because the physician was denied security clearance for atomic research.

Edelman is taking non-secret studies at the Peter Bent Brigham hospital in Boston under a fellowship provided by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission. His name was brought into Senate appropriations subcommittee investigation of the fellowship program after Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal said three alleged Communists have received the government grants.

It was not clear whether Lilienthal meant to count Edelman among the three alleged Communists. He told the subcommittee Edelman was denied clearance for secret research and steered into non-secret medical work because of "derogatory information that he either was a Communist sympathizer or had associations with Communists."

In Boston, Edelman told reporters he attended a few Communist meetings in 1943 "out of curiosity" but was "quickly disillusioned." He asserted vehemently that he is now an "anti-Communist."

While Lilienthal mentioned no other names, presumably one of the three persons he had in mind is Hans Freistadt, avowed Communist student at the University of North Carolina whose $1,600 fellowship touched off a Senate investigation of the whole program.

McMahon said his committee will question Edelman at a public hearing Monday. It has already quizzed Freistadt. He said that in addition to Edelman and Freistadt, there are "several other cases" the committee will investigate in closed sessions.

Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, R., Ia., told reporters he knows of "three or four others (holding fellowships) whose background or record of associations makes them (See FELLOWSHIP, page 4)

"I know that you will agree with me that the fathers and mothers of our State do not want their children taught by Communists," the letter said. "Likewise, the taxpayers would not want tax money used in paying a Communist teacher."

Freistadt is a part-time instructor and graduate assistant in the University's Department of Physics.

Bryant was out of town, and could not be reached by telephone late yesterday afternoon.

The full Board of Trustees will meet in Chapel Hill Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock, a spokesman from South Building said. This will be the regular spring meeting of the full board.

Tom Clark Says Unwanted Aliens At Large in U. S.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—(UP)—Attorney General Tom C. Clark advised Congress today that 3,300 "undesirable aliens," mostly from iron curtain nations are at large in this country because of loopholes in immigration laws.

He indicated that many of them are engaged in subversive activities. Clark revealed the data as Arnold Johnson, legislative secretary of the American Communist Party, was telling a Senate hearing that party members will "go underground" if Congress passes a law requiring them to register.

"We wouldn't register," the Communist leader said. "We would not abide by a law that violates the rights of the American people—the Bill of Rights and the Constitution."

Clark wrote the House Judiciary Committee urging approval of a bill to tighten immigration laws and prevent a repetition of Gerhart Eisler's bail-jumping escape from the United States.

The measure would authorize the Attorney General to hold undesirable aliens in jail without bond and deport them to any country that will take them. Under present law, they must be released on bail until they are deported and can only be sent back to their homelands.

Pointing out that Eisler was able to stow away on the Polish ship Batory only because he was free on $23,500 bond, Clark said the No. 1 Communist would not have been able to escape if the proposed legislation already were in force.

Miller and Giles Receive Mention In Annual Event

By Margaret Gaston

Charles Dixon, senior from Belmont, won the Willie P. Mangum medal in oratory Tuesday night when he spoke on "Outlawing of the Communist Party in the United States," Dean E. L. Mackie of student awards and scholarships said yesterday.

Bill Miller of Greenville, S. C., received first honorable mention for his oration on "A Citizen's Duty," and Robert Giles, from Chapel Hill, was awarded second honorable mention. Giles spoke on "Institutional Bondages."

The contest, second since the war, featured seniors delivering original orations. The contest was sponsored by Dean Mackie, who presided over the program. Mackie said that "all the speeches were very good."

Judges for the event were Gerald Barrett of the Economics Department, Earl Wynn, director of the Communications Center, and E. J. Woodhouse of the Political Science Department.

Other seniors competing for the medal were Sam Manning, speaking on "Jefferson and Hamilton;" Bob Ormand, "The Ivory Tower that is Carolina;" Emily Baker, "Is There Freedom in America;" and Marion Woodbury, "Student and the Communist."

Last year's winner was Robert Coulter of Chapel Hill. Faculty members who have won the award in the past include Fred Weaver, Dean of Students, and Dr. Albert Coates, director of Institute of Government.

In his oration, "Outlawing of the Communist Party in the United States," Dixon spoke as if he were addressing the United States Senate on the question, "The issue facing us now is not to choose between these rival ideologies but to decide upon the wisdom of passing this bill which would make it a punishable crime to become a member of the Communist Party," Dixon said. He pointed out that the bill "undoubtedly amounts to a restriction of freedom of speech."

Dixon then said that "a small (See MANGUM, page 4)
