

Polio Hits Two Times In Orange

Father of Victim Is UNC Employee; Both 2 Years Old

In reporting the appearance of two cases of polio in Orange County, Dr. O. David Garvin, district health officer, asked citizens of this area to maintain a calm and sensible attitude toward the outbreak and, at the same time take the necessary precautions against the spread of the disease.

James Dixon, 2-year-old son of University employee Clarence Dixon of Chapel Hill, Route 2, and Judith Strowd, 2, daughter of E. N. Strowd of Chapel Hill, are the two cases reported. Both are undergoing treatment at Watts Hospital in Durham and it is reported that neither of the children are crippled and that no complications have appeared in either case.

Garvin said that the outbreak "was not unexpected," but added that in both cases the attack was so mild that had the old type diagnosis been used, the illnesses would probably not have been recognized for what they were. "In the past," he stated, "a diagnosis for polio had to await paralysis."

During the month of June, 1948, 295 cases were discovered in North Carolina, but for the same month this year only nine have been reported. So far this year Durham, Chatham, Caswell and Person Counties have had no known cases of polio. The other county bordering on Orange—Alamance—has reported a single case.

Last year's totals for the entire state showed that the number of polio occurrences declined after July.

Dr. Garvin requested that citizens of the county avoid chills and fatigue, keep clean, and stay away from polluted water. He also pointed out that the danger of picking up polio was increased by traveling.

The competition, which is jointly sponsored by the Encyclopedia Britannica Book of the Year and the University of Missouri School of Journalism, is believed to be the largest and most inclusive of its kind, and serves as a forum wherein news photographers of the world evaluate their year's work, and honor and reward the best examples of it.

The pictures on display are included in the annual book of the Missouri-Britannica competition, "The Great Pictures — 1949."

Featured in the exhibition are the top-prize winners in the sixth annual competition which was judged in five categories: picture portfolios; picture sequences; news, sports and feature photographs.

Highest award in the show, and the title of "News Photographer of the year," went to Barney Cowherd of the Courier-Journal and Louisville Times.

French Award Is Given Here By Instructor

A scholarship valued at $150 a year has been endowed by Edward T. Draper-Savage, an instructor in French at the University. The scholarship, which is to be administered by the French House, is a memorial to the professor's mother, Effie Draper-Savage.

In a letter to Hugo Giduz, director of the French House, Mr. Draper-Savage said that it is his desire that the scholarship be given to "that student who, in the opinion of a committee named by you, will have shown, at the completion of the course, an outstanding interest in France, her culture and civilization, and a corresponding ability and prom-French spoken language, as well as in his, or her, mastery of the as of French literature."

The first award of the scholarship was made to Johnny L. Young, a graduate student from Salisbury. Young received the award at the annual French House dinner celebrating Bastille Day. Guest speaker for the occasion was Jean Pierre Benard, first secretary of the French Embassy in Washington.

Botto Runs SG Board This Term

Appointments Go To Sanford, Allen For Two Boards

Larry Botto of Brandenton, Fla., took over the reins of student government at the beginning of the second session of summer school as acting president of the student body.

Botto succeeds John Sanders of Four Oaks, who held the post during the first half of the summer. Bill Mackie of Chapel Hill, now on a Navy cruise, was elected president last spring to hold office for a year, but could not be in school this summer.

Other appointments announced were Patricia Denning Sanford, appointed to the Government and Appeal Board, and Betty Allen, who fills a vacancy on the Women's Honor Council. The new officials were approved by the Government and Appeal Board, headed by the acting president.

Orientation of 22 new men students entering in the second session was conducted under the direction of Charles McRae, who discussed student government, the Honor and Campus Codes, and the Carolina way of life with the new men. The six men who were entering college for the first time were given special discussion sessions.

At a summary meeting, the students were welcomed by Botto and were given information on the Honor and Campus Codes by Men's Honor Council Chairman Roy Holsten. All the new students signed the Code pledges.

Orientation of new coeds was chiefly handled at the dormitory level in house meetings. The Codes and the House Privileges Board Visiting Agreement was explained in those meetings.

A final orientation meeting was held Tuesday night. Dean of Men Bill Friday, Dean of Women Katherine Carmichael, Women's Council Chairman Gayle Hancock, and Botto spoke at the meeting.

Chairman Victor S. Bryant of Durham refused to comment on how many candidates were stricken from the list. He said, however, it probably will be "many weeks" before the committee narrows the field down to the final recommendation, which will be presented to the full Board of Trustees.
