Final Plans Ready For Duke Parade

Final plans for the "Beat Dook" float parade, scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, were announced today by Charlie Smith, chairman of the parade.

The parade will begin at Woolen Gymnasium, proceed up Raleigh St. to Franklin St., turn left at Columbia St., thence on Cameron Ave. to Pittsboro St., to a left turn on McCauley St., back to Columbia St., and up to Cameron Ave., where the parade will turn and pass in front of South Building, back to Raleigh St., and finally to the Gymnasium. The floats, Smith said, will be judged at the gymnasium before they start the parade. Trophies will be awarded to the best float entered by a fraternity, sorority, and men's and women's dormitory. The trophies which will be presented are now on exhibition at the "Y" and at Wentworth and Sloan's.

Judges for the floats will be Jack Horner, sports editor of the Durham Herald, Bob Hazel, president of the Duke student body, William Meade Prince, noted artist, and Josephina Niggli Chapel Hill novelist. An additional judge, Smith said, will be announced tomorrow.

Dean Brandis Speaks Tonight

Dean Henry P. Brandis, Jr., will speak at a reorganizational meeting of the World Federalists tonight at 8 o'clock in the Institute of Student Government.

A member of the National Executive Council of the United World Federalists, Dean Brandis is scheduled to talk on "Recent Progress in the World Government Movement."

Fleming will give the details on the forming of an active chapter of World Federalists here.

Rescued Student Rests, Talks Of Sailing Again

WILMINGTON, Nov. 16—(AP)—Archibald Yow, 33-year-old amateur sailor who drifted five days off the Atlantic coast before being rescued, rested here today as he contemplated continuing his voyage southward.

Yow, staying at the Cape Fear yacht basin on Middle Sound, said he suffered no ill effects from his experience in battling high seas in his 24-foot homemade sailboat, The Elysia.

The small craft sustained some damage from the pounding seas and high winds, however. Towed to the yacht basin, preliminary examination showed she was leaking badly and the mast appeared weakened from excessive strain.

Yow, student at the University of North Carolina, said he intended sailing the Elysia down the inland waterway to Southport. There he may take her out of the water, make permanent repairs and continue southward.

Yow told a story of setting out from Morehead City last Wednesday with sufficient food and water aboard for a short sail toward Swansboro. He had no watch, compass or charts aboard. There was little wind when darkness fell and he went to sleep.

Later he was awakened by the sound of a pounding surf and he headed back to sea. When he awoke again, he was out of sight of land. Not knowing what time it was or where he was, he waited for night to sail by the stars.

However, a strong northwest wind drove him across the Gulf Stream. He tried to make the coast again but the wind drove him back. Once he sighted a freighter but his efforts to attract attention failed.

"Sunday morning about 8 o'clock I saw a faint ripple on the water which, in a few hours, grew into a heavy gale," he re-

Merchants Set Meeting Here Today

Nearly 150 North Carolina merchants, secretaries of local Merchants' Associations, and friends of North Carolina business will gather here today at a 1 o'clock luncheon in the Morehead Planetarium to launch a drive to raise $200,000 as an endowment for a special chair in retailing in the University School of Commerce.

An overall program for increasing and improving University services to retailers, of which the current drive is a part, is being sponsored by the North Carolina Merchants Association.

A proposal for such a program was first presented to the Association at its 1948 annual convention by Louis Lipinsky, prominent Asheville merchant. The Association appointed a special committee with Lipinsky as chairman, to work with officials of the University and the Business Foundation of North Carolina in drawing up a plan.

This committee recommended that a $200,000 endowment be raised to serve as a source of income for increasing the number of courses in retailing offered by the University School of Commerce. This plan was adopted by the Association at its annual meeting last May.

Since then Lipinsky's committee has been working out the details of such a drive, and the plan will be presented at the conference here Friday.

The state has been divided into 76 local areas. The endowment to be raised in each area will be in the same proportion as the retail sales in that area are to all areas. Each area has been invited to send the secretary of the local Association or the Chamber of Commerce and a leading merchant to the conference.

Charlie Fox Nominated By SP For Junior Head

Charlie Fox will head the list of Student Party junior class officer nominees in the December elections, the SP announced yesterday.

In accepting the nomination for president of the Junior Class, Fox called for greater class unity and the utilization of the class fund.

"The junior class gets a $500 appropriation every year, but strangely enough, the juniors never see or hear of this money since in the past the $500 has been allowed to revert to the general fund," Fox said.

He said he would work for a class program that would "properly utilize the facilities afforded us for a better class spirit."

A native of Roanoke, Va., Fox is a member of the campus service fraternity Alpha Phi Omega, in which he serves as fellow-ship chairman. He serves also on the NSA Committee and as YMCA conference chairman. Fox is a member of the Delta Psi fraternity and the local NROTC unit.

Other SP nominees are Pat

Bowie, vice-president; Sandra Riach, secretary; Jim Hamrick, treasurer; and Noah Wilson, social chairman.

Bowie, a journalism major from Cumberland, Md., is a member of the Executive Cabinet and vice-president of the Pi Beta Phi pledge class and works with the University Club. She was elected Social Service Committee of the YWCA.

At Stephens College she edited the handbook and was a member of the Publications Board.

Another Stephens alumna, Sandra Riach, will run for the office of secretary. While preparing for a medical technology degree at Stephens, she was initiated into Phi Theta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity, and Delta Sigma, honorary science sorority.

Since coming to Carolina, she has pledged Pi Beta Phi. The SP nominee for treasurer, Jim Hamrick, is a commerce major from Shelby. He is a member of the Orientation Committee and the Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

Legislature To Consider Money Bill

Measure Seeks $446.37 to Meet Pamphlet Costs

A $446.37 appropriation bill to meet half the printing cost of Tom Eller's pamphlet, "Student Control Since 1795" is, at the moment, the only business scheduled for consideration by the Student Legislature when it meets tonight at 7:30 in Di Hall.

According to Attorney-General John Sanders the bill meets a "moral obligation" brought about by an informal agreement between student government and the Dean of Students office.

The agreement, made orally this summer between the Orientation Committee and Dean of Students Fred Weaver, was that if Weaver would have printed 2700 of the pamphlets, instead of the 1000 he had planned, the Committee would meet some part of the price. The extra 1700 were to be used for orientation.

The money in the bill, if appropriated, will go to the general administration budget of student government.

Tonight's session of the Legislature is the last regular meeting of the group for the Fall Quarter. The first meeting of the Winter Quarter will be the opening session of the eighth assembly of the Legislature. Assemblies are numbered from each election.

Thirty-five of the seats in the 50-student organ of campus government will be contested in the December elections. They include 25 seats with a year-long tenure, and 10 for six months.

More than a dozen legislators have resigned and been replaced by presidential appointment since the beginning of the seventh assembly last spring.

NSA Holiday Is Scheduled For Students

Today has been set aside as International Students' Day by the National Students Association to commemorate the death of 157 Czech students who lost their lives while resisting Nazi occupation troops Nov. 17, 1939.

According to the NSA, today students in all parts of the world should dedicate themselves and their generation to the construction of a lasting peace through constructive international student cooperation.

Bill Mackie, student body president, commented on the observance of the day by saying "It is very important that students throughout the world reach mutual understandings concerning the problems which have made peace impossible for so many years."

"We are getting closer to the solution of the dilemma of international peace by trying in every way possible to make contact with students representing other cultures, to learn more about world problems and to take an active part in international affairs."

Bulletin

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—(AP)—A trustee committee charged with picking a new president of the University of North Carolina conferred here today with Dr. William Clyde DeVane, Yale dean, considered a leading candidate.

In New Haven, Mrs. DeVane said her husband would have nothing to say on the conference when he returned. "Any statement will have to come from the trustees," she added.

However, Mrs. DeVane said, she had learned that nothing definite was settled at the conference. DeVane, 51, is a native of Savannah, Ga.

Neither Dr. DeVane or the trustees were available for comment tonight.

by newspaperman who for the last four years has served as a member of the American Council on Education for Journalism, includes John W. Harden of Greensboro, public relations director for Burlington Mills and alumnus of the University's Journalism Department; Steed Rollins, executive editor of the Durham Herald-Sun Papers; W. E. Horner, publisher of the Sanford Herald, and Leslie Thompson, editor of the Whiteville Reporter.

Several contributions of $1,000 each have been made or pledged to the Foundation, together with a bequest of something over $5,000 under the will of the late W. Carey Dowd, Jr., former publisher of the Charlotte News, who was greatly interested in the project to provide more adequate facilities and funds for supplementing the state salary scale in the University Journalism Department.

The Foundation is a non-profit, charitable and educational corporation. Its charter was drawn by William C. Lassiter, general counsel for the North Carolina Press Association.

The Foundation proposes to raise this year and next, if possible, the $100,000 endowment project. University officials have pledged themselves to enlarge the department into a School of Journalism and to get for it more adequate housing if the Foundation carries through its endowment purpose.

Phi Favors Government Of World

World federal government was favored by an 11-10 vote Tuesday night in the Phi Assembly.

Debate was led by Speaker Graham Jones who left the chair to come out in favor of the bill. "Since the Soviet Union has acquired the atomic bomb we feel less secure and more in need of a limited but effectively powerful world government," he said.

Jones joined Senator Frank Graham in calling for revision of the United Nations charter to abolish the veto power because of its misuse by Russia. He also recommended an international police force and a world court. "To vote against tonight's bill would be to vote against peace and to favor a return to the days of inaction in the twenties," he declared.

Opposition to the bill came from Phi Representatives Hamilton Horton and George Rodman. Horton reported that the State Department believes a world federal government enacted now would result with Russia's withdrawal. "This action would lead to a formation of two hostile camps, and a third world war would be the outcome," he asserted.

Rodman told the Assembly that the United Nations cannot, as a world federalism medium, prove adequate to serve the needs of the world. "No world federation is practical or possible," he said, because it would progress to a domination by one power and too great a centralization.

In an executive session following the debate, the Phi approved four candidates for membership. They are Neil Glenn, Burlington; David Rae, Rock Hill, S. C.; Dennis Webb, Cliffside; and Bob Hennessee, Burnsville.

Open Film Club Meets Tonight

The newly-formed Film Classic Club will have its first program of the year tonight at 8 o'clock in the Roland Parker Lounges of Graham Memorial.

Included in the program will be three short primitive German films and a German expressionistic movie. The shorts are: "Don Juan's Wedding," "Misunderstood," and "The Golem." "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" will be the main feature.

Subscription rates are $3.50 for the entire series.

Virginia Snubbed, Carolina Students Termed 'Gentlemen' In Hotels' Talk On Weekends

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 16—(AP)—Philadelphia hotelmen disclosed today they are considering their own Mason-Dixon line to keep University of Virginia football fans out of town when Virginia plays here.

Bennett E. Tousley, president of the Philadelphia Hotel Association, declared Virginia backers showed "they certainly were not Southern gentlemen" ten days ago when the Cavaliers upset Penn 26-14.

Tousley asserted that Virginia students and alumni who checked in to two downtown hotels were "steamed up on whiskey and waving Confederate flags," and went on a vandals' spree.

A meeting with members of the hotelmen's Association, Tousley said, unanimously decided that if Virginia plays here again, "We won't take reservations from anyone south of Chester"—15 miles from Philadelphia.

Tousley disclosed that the hotelmen would seek an appointment with President Colgate W. Darden of Virginia College to work out a "cooperative plan" against "any tremendous damage again."

President Darden said at Charlottesville he was "distressed at the damage done in Philadelphia," and called it "inexcusable."

In New York, however, hotelmen said they would roll out the welcome mat any time for the host of North Carolina students who showed up last week for the Tar Heels' rout by Notre Dame.

James A. McCarthy, executive secretary of the Hotel Association of New York City, said the North Carolinians "were very fine young gentlemen," adding "definitely we would like to invite them back."

McCarthy said he had "heard nothing from any hotel but the highest praise for their conduct. We were glad to have them and we'll be glad to welcome them here again."

Several thousand University of Virginia students, old grads and rooters came to Philadelphia for the Nov. 5 game. The Virginia fans made the Adelphi and Benjamin Franklin Hotels their headquarters.

Tousley said visitors wrecked considerable equipment when Virginia played Penn here in 1947, he said. (Penn won that game, 19-7).

Tousley had no estimate of the damage this time. Here are some of the things he said some of the visitors did:

Annoyed elevator operators; threw beer in the face of a young Negro elevator girl; ran around halls all night long, tore down fire hose, smashed signs and broke every sand jar in the Adelphi, ripped down glass-edged signs in the lobby.

Asked for his own estimate of the number of visitors, Tousley replied:

"Too many."

"A lot of schools play here and we have many visitors for many games, but we never saw anything like what happened here Saturday before last," Tousley added. He said a letter would be sent today to Darden and a similar one to officials at the University of Pennsylvania. "We feel that the situation is serious enough to discuss with officials of both institutions," he declared.

He declined to say if the association would seek damages. "The general riotous nature of the visit is far more serious than the monetary loss," Tousley said.

Frat Murder Is Taken Over By Prosecutor

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 16—(AP)—Prosecutor Ralph J. Bartlett took personal charge today of the slaying of 21-year-old Jack T. McKeown, an Ohio State University senior.

Bartlett said he would handle the first-degree murder charge against 20-year-old James D. Heer of Euclid, O., a university freshman, before the Franklin County Grand Jury and in court.

Heer is accused of shooting McKeown in the wild aftermath of a gay homecoming party at the Delta Tau Delta fraternity house. McKeown was shot, said Detective Sgt. Lowell Sheets, when he tried to take from Heer a pistol the Delta Tau Delta pledge was brandishing.

Heer is held without bond in Franklin County Jail. The prosecutor said the Heer case probably will not reach the grand jury before week after next. Bartlett said the docket is too crowded next week.

In any case, said Prosecutor Bartlett, Heer will not go on trial before Jan. 1, 1950.

Bartlett conferred with detectives today as a prelude to preparing his case against Heer.

McKeown, managing editor of the Lantern, Ohio State University student daily newspaper, was buried in Cincinnati yesterday.

Funeral services were held at Saint Peter and Paul Catholic Church in his suburban home city of Norwood.

Students Wait

DURHAM, Nov. 15—(AP)—More than 200 Duke students camped in the Duke indoor stadium last night so they could buy tickets for Saturday's Duke-North Carolina football game.

Some 300 tickets were placed on sale to be bought by Duke students for their guests. Each student was allowed to buy two tickets and all were sold in 30 minutes.

The line began forming at the indoor stadium at 8 o'clock last night, and at midnight it was estimated more than 200 students were in line. They brought sleeping bags, coats and blankets and books, typewriters, cards and radios for the long vigil.

For the general public, tickets for the game have been all sold out for several months.
