

Honor Group Dismisses Two, Refuses To Let Two Re-Enter

Two General College students were suspended from the University for indefinite periods of time and another was refused readmittance for Honor Code violations in recent action by the Men's Honor Council, Clerk Buddy Vaden announced yesterday.

In other cases, six students who had been suspended for Honor Code violations were readmitted to the University after being suspended for at least one full school term.

In one suspension case involving three students, the suspended student admitted copying from another person's paper on a math examination. The other two students had no knowledge of the violation and were exonerated.

In the other suspension case the student admitted copying from the person next to him on a Spanish examination. The guilty student said he was certain the person he copied from had no knowledge of his doing so.

In another case one student who had been put on probation for fighting charged another with instigating the fight. The student charged was exonerated after testimony revealed that the student bringing suit had been drinking and was unable to remember whether he had struck the first blow after he had remembered clearly all other details of the fight.

The Honor Council warned that students found guilty of violating the Honor and Campus codes faced possible suspension from the University for an indefinite period, pointing out that such action is recorded on the student's transcript in Central Records office.

They further stressed the importance of signing and adhering to the honor pledge on all examinations.

fair and accurate. But everyone thinks their story is the most given the highest and most space.

Other people are working against me for minor reasons, such as the fact that their item in Campus Briefs was mislaid one day by the reporter (usually new and inexperienced) who typed up the column. One group, I understand, is out of sorts because a story of theirs was misplaced in the office on an afternoon when I was not even personally on the desk, but was tied up in Publications Board and Budget Committee meet-

EAST LANSING, Mich., April 6—(AP)—A burning desire for sustained shoulders to go with strapless dance gowns put three Michigan State College coeds under sun lamps today.

But they stayed too long and got blistered backs instead. One girl was hospitalized.

So their faces wouldn't be any redder, college officials refused to give the coeds' names.

selor, but it will most assuredly be a consideration when the Orientation Committee makes its selections.

Around 150 counselors are expected to be chosen to "teach the ropes" to next fall's incoming students.

The committee which worked out the plans for the training program was appointed by president Bill Mackie, John Sanders, Don VanNoppen, and Toby Selby.

Charles MacRae, member of the Orientation Committee, conceived the idea and did much of the work toward planning the program.

berg introduced a similar substitute measure which was defeated after much debate and Parliamentary maneuvering.

Senators Jack Tripp and Bob Clampitt both introduced amendments to the main motion which carried different connotations on certain provisions of the bill of the evening. Senator Tripp's motion was defeated after a short debate while the Clampitt motion died for the lack of a second.

Senator Jim Lamm, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said, "The Ways and Means Committee, in order to garner suggestions for the solution of the parking problem, submitted the most distasteful bill possible."

Prof Defeats Fast Muskrat By Foul Play

MT. PLEASANT, Mich., April 6—(AP)—A college professor and a muskrat staged a race down a street by the general Michigan College campus last night. The professor won, but hardly by fair means.

Nicholas L. Cuthbert, assistant professor of biology, said he was glad there were no spectators.

"I must not have looked very dignified," he explained.

Let the professor tell the story: He was quietly reading about 10:30. All of a sudden, he heard a loud commotion. Going outdoors, he saw a cat tugging with a muskrat. Back into the house the professor dashed and got himself a large cardboard box.

Then he took out after the muskrat. It was a fairly close race for a while, but the muskrat started to pull away from the panting professor.

The professor, who had been running with the box held in his upraised hands, gave the box a heave. Much to his surprise, it fell plunk right over the muskrat. The critter was his prisoner.

Prof. Cuthbert lugged it to the college biological laboratory. He's going to keep it there for use in biological experiments.

Tiff With Prexy Brings Tenn. College Waikout

HENDERSON, Tenn., April 6—(AP)—A steady stream of "angry" homeward-bound students left Freed-Hardeman Junior College nearly deserted today.

A majority of the little Church of Christ school's 385 students were sticking to their threat to quit and go home—the climax of a series of tiffs with President N. B. Hardeman.

And half of the school's faculty of 14 has resigned in sympathy with the walkout. There was no comment forthcoming from Hardeman or other college officials.

It was impossible to determine exactly how many students had left the campus. Authorities were mum, but a lonesome coed said the women's dormitory was "as bare as a skeleton."

Classes were due to resume Tuesday, barring an unexpected shutdown.

The walkout was approved Friday night at a mass meeting of students in the auditorium. It was the second uprising against Hardeman's administration.
