Many Notables Among Guests At Ceremonies

By Chuck Hauser
RALEIGH, Oct. 9—Gordon Gray, former Secretary of the Army and special assistant to President Truman, will officially go to work for his native state this morning when he raises his right hand and is sworn in as the second president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina.

Gray will succeed Senator Frank Porter Graham, who resigned the post to take an appointment as North Carolina's junior member in the United States Senate.

Graham, who was perhaps the number one force behind the move to consolidate the three branches of the Greater University, took over as president of the newly consolidated institution in 1932 after serving for two years as president of the University at Chapel Hill.

Gray, who has led a brilliant career in the federal government, will be sworn in as president by Governor Kerr Scott in the William Neal Reynolds Coliseum on the N. C. State College campus here.

The day's activities will officially begin at 10 o'clock this morning with music from the State College Memorial Bell Tower. The procession of marshals will be led by Karen Carlson of Woman's College, J. C. Lyons of the University, and William N. Wood of State.

The academic procession will march into the Coliseum, where Greater University Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., who has been serving as Acting President, will preside over the ceremonies.

Greetings will be extended by a group of North Carolina college leaders, including Chancellor Harry Woodburn Chase of New York University, who immediately preceded Dr. Frank Graham as president of the University at Chapel Hill.

A combined band from Carolina and State will play a prelude and the Star Spangled Banner, which will be sung by Norman Cordon. The invocation will be by Rev. J. H. ...

UNC Host To 300 At Ceremonies Here

By Don Maynard
The University at Chapel Hill played host to over 300 delegates and their wives, representing colleges and universities over the nation, in its part of the inauguration of Gordon Gray as President of the Greater University held here yesterday.

It was a busy day for the delegates as they attended two convocations, a buffet luncheon and dinner in Lenoir Hall and a reception in the Morehead Planetarium.

However, it was not crowded in Memorial Hall, where the two convocations were held. Seats gaped in the rows, where somewhere near 1,000 spectators sat in the 1,600-seat capacity auditorium.

Present in the audience were such outstanding figures in the national light as Sen. Frank P. Graham, Secretary of the Army, and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, and Tracy Voorhees, former Undersecretary of the Army under Harry Woodburn Chase, former

Army Buddies Re-Visit Gray At Ceremony

Yesterday morning, Chancellor Robert B. House of the University here presided over the convocation which featured Dr. James Lewis Morrill, president of the University of Minnesota, speaking on "The Responsibilities of the State to Its University."

Dr. George Dinsmore, president of the University of Illinois, scheduled to appear at the morning convocation, was forced to speak at the afternoon. His plane had been grounded and he arrived here too late to participate in the morning program, a spokesman said.

At the afternoon convocation, Dr. Dinsmore spoke on "The Responsibilities of the University to Its State," and Dr. Lee Alvin Dubridge, president of the California Institute of Technology, followed him with a discussion of "Science and the Spirit of Freedom."

UN National Troops Under American Plan

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Oct. 9—(UP)—The United States today urged the United Nations to apply the lesson of Korea and adopt the American plan to earmark national troops that could be used to keep peace by the veto-free General Assembly.

Russia, adopting a more conciliatory tone than expected, said it found some good points in the revolutionary U. S. plan, but opposed the "general tendency" of the measure. This almost certainly meant Russia opposed the key provision that would allow the General Assembly to meet in 24 hours and act against aggression if a veto paralyzed the Security Council.

Work will begin on the project as soon as the lamp posts arrive, says the Operations office. New cables have already been received.

The new system will complete a campus wide circuit of street lamps. It will aid fans who go to basketball games and will give light to an area that was formerly equipped with few street lamps.

Pace, Voorhees Collins Attend Events Held Here

A trio of Gordon Gray's top-level Washington Army buddies came here yesterday to see part of Gray's inauguration program. Frank Pace, Jr., who succeeded Gray as Secretary of the Army, flew down from the nation's capital with Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff.

Tracy Voorhees, who resigned as Undersecretary of the Army at the same time Gray left the secretary post, was here as a delegate from Rutgers University. Collins smiled at reporters who asked him about his trip here.

"I just came down to see my old boss," the General remarked. "He sure is a wonderful chap. I wanted to be here for part of the ceremonies at least."

Pace declared that "North Carolina is getting a wonderful president."

"From time to time," he added, "we may be imposing on the University of North Carolina to get some advice from Mr. Gray."

Pace and Collins flew back to Washington last night, and will be unable to attend the formal installation today.

$100 Prize Offered For Best Essay

Prof. Norman Foerster is offering for the second time a $100 prize for the best critical essay submitted by a student at Carolina or at Duke University.

The contest is open to undergraduates and graduates engaged in resident study in any department in the year 1950-51 or in any quarter of the year. The winner will be announced and the prize given at the 1951 commencement exercises here this June.

Rules of the contest require that the essays be examples of theoretical or practical criticism. That is, they must deal with general literary questions or with specific writers or writings of any period from antiquity to present.

There is no condition as to the number of words but 1,000-4,000 word essays are prescribed. Only one essay may be entered by each contestant.

All manuscripts of Carolina students must be sent to Prof. Clifford P. Lyons, head of the University English Department, 104 Saunders Hall. Deadline for all entries is March 31.

Judges for the contest are Robert Penn Warren, novelist, poet, and critic; G. R. Elliott of Amherst College; and Robert E. Spiller, editor of Literary History of the United States and professor at the University of Pennsylvania.

A Duke student won the prize when it was first offered last year. Three runners-up were from Carolina. They were Paul F. Ader, Edward H. Gibson, and F. H. Moore.

Last year's judges commented on the high standard maintained in the essays.

McMullan Pleased At Court Decision

RALEIGH, Oct. 9—(AP)—Attorney General Harry McMullan was pleased when informed late today that Federal Judge Johnson J. Hayes had ruled that North Carolina is providing substantially equal facilities for Negroes as for whites to study law.

Ruling Makes NC First Such State In South

GREENSBORO, Oct. 9—(UP)—Federal Judge Johnson J. Hayes ruled today that North Carolina offers Negro law students equal educational facilities and said he would not order the University of North Carolina to admit four Negroes to its law school.

4 Denied Access To Law School; Appeal Expected

When asked about the decision, President Gordon Gray would make no comment. He said that he wanted to read the statement by Hayes first.

Henry Brandis, Dean of the Law School, said that he assumed that the case would be appealed to a higher tribunal. He also stated that he was happy to see the case turn out the way it did.

If appealed, the case would be heard by the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals which seats in Richmond.

The order made North Carolina the first Southern state to win such a ruling.

The suit was brought by students at North Carolina College in Durham. They contended the Negro college's law school was not equal to that at the University and demanded entrance to the University at Chapel Hill.

At one time, the number of plaintiffs numbered eight but had dwindled to four by the time the hearing began in August. They were Sol Revis, Floyd B. McKissick, James Lassiter and J. Kenneth Lee.

State Atty.-Gen. Harry McMullan, who argued for the State that N. C. College offered equal facilities, said "Our success in winning the case was due to the fact that North Carolina has had a long-range policy of carrying out the provisions of the Federal Constitution for equal but separate facilities for education of the two races."

However, the plaintiffs had brought in witnesses from other Universities, including Dr. Erwin Griswold, Dean of the Harvard Law School, to argue that facilities were not equal.

Griswold had testified that "It is impossible for any two schools (See NEGRO, page 4)

New Streetlights Due For Part Of Campus

By Walt Dear
A new system of street lights will be constructed soon to light up the South Campus area from the east gate to the Country Club Road and along the Raleigh Road to the west gate.

Work will begin on the project as soon as the lamp posts arrive, says the Operations office. New cables have already been received.

The new system will complete a campus wide circuit of street lamps. It will aid fans who go to basketball games and will give light to an area that was formerly equipped with few street lamps.

The University recently installed new cables in the area around South Building, replacing worn-out and weather beaten cables. Other construction projects are underway. A new brick walk starting from Cameron and Raleigh Avenues and ending on the Raleigh Road is nearing the completion mark.

During the summer, a major job of the Operations office was the addition of several new brick paths throughout the campus. The area and paths around Hill Hall leading to Graham Memorial, and beginning the sidewalk on Raleigh Street, were entirely replaced with bricks.

Bricks used for these projects are specially prepared for the University walks.

Prof Flunks

MEDIA, Pa., Oct. 9—(AP)—A professor turned witness today and told how he bet on the numbers—and lost.

Professor Herbert W. Allison of the Pennsylvania State College Center at Swarthmore, testified at the trial of 25 men arrested in gambling raids that he spent all last summer working as a private investigator for the District Attorney.

Judge Henry G. Sweney asks Allison, whose work led to the arrest of the 25, if he ever won on the numbers.

Said the professor: "Not once."
