Entry Of Chinese May Stretch War

TOKYO, Nov. 4—(UP)—The entry of Chinese Communists into the Korean war, whether constituting official intervention or not, has transformed the fight from a quick United Nations mop-up campaign to a battle which could last for months, informed sources said today.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters was silent on the presence of Chinese Reds in the fight, but an 8th Army spokesman in Korea made the first official announcement that two divisions had moved down from Manchuria to battle against United Nations troops.

A brief statement was issued at 7 p.m. tonight, saying: "The 8th Army confirms that Chinese Communists in contact are in sufficient numerical strength to be the equivalent of at least two Divisions."

Truman, Stassen Campaign Ignites

By The Associated Press
 The 1950 election campaign erupted in bitter conflict over Korea and Communism last night with President Truman and his Republican critics hurling charges and counter-charges across the nation.

In an all-network radio and television address from St. Louis, the President declared that "vote-hungry Republican politicians" are undermining their country in time of peril, and asserted: "A vote for isolationism in this election would be a vote for national suicide."

For the Republicans, Harold E. Stassen charged that Truman appeasement of Chinese Communists now is costing U. S. forces in Korea their heaviest losses since the fighting began. Stassen spoke by radio from New Haven, Conn., in reply to Truman's single avowed political speech of the campaign.

President Truman listed isolationism and "strength and prosperity" as the chief campaign issues.

Jet Fighters Easy To Fly, Say Pilots

Jet fighters are easier to fly than the conventional piston-engined aircraft, according to two jet fighter pilots who will be here in the YMCA library tomorrow through Thursday to interview prospective aviation cadets. Controls react faster there are fewer gauges to watch, and the whole list of procedures is simplified, they pointed out.

You don't need the rudder to make perfectly coordinated turns as was so difficult in the T-6 trainer, one of the pilots stated.

It also was pointed out that some of the best jet pilots are combat veterans over thirty, and that they have shown no ill effects from their experiences.
