Civic Banquet Will Be Given To Honor Gray

School Officials, Town Residents, Will Attend Fete

An official welcome by the residents of Chapel Hill and Carrboro will be extended to Gordon Gray, president of the University, at a banquet in Lenoir Hall today at 6:45 p.m.

Gray will be the honored guest of the evening. Controller W. D. Carmichael, Jr., also will attend the dinner along with other University officials.

Members of every civic organization in Chapel Hill and Carrboro will have representatives at the dinner, and each group will be introduced as a body by the president of its organization.

Tickets for the banquet are on sale in town at the Merchants Association office next to the post office, Wentworth and Sloan's, Jack Lipman's, and at the Varsity.

Wilbur Kutz, president of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association, sponsor of the banquet, announced that all residents of both towns and students of the University are invited to attend the festivities.

ANNE MARTIN OF CHEROKEE appears as Juliet in the forthcoming Carolina Playmaker production of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" at the Playmakers Theater, Nov. 28-Dec. 3 at 8:30 p.m. Tickets for the play are on sale now at Swain Hall and Ledbetter-Pickard's.

U.N. Forces Ready For Knockout Blow

TOKYO, Wednesday, Nov. 22—(UP)—Seven Allied divisions were reported poised today for a knockout drive against a 100,000-man Chinese and North Korean Communist Army in northwest Korea.

Officials at Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters have abandoned the faint hope that the Chinese would get out of Korea under political pressure or political assurances, the United Press learned.

The stage was set for the final big push to the border by Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker's 8th Army when the Communists fell back in central Korea, ending the danger of a breakthrough down the middle.

Chinese Communist troops were pouring down through northwest Korea under a hail of U. S. bombs and rockets. They were reinforcing a new line 50 to 60 miles south of the border and some score of miles ahead of the Allied front lines.

Field reports said the two-week lull on the northwest front seemed about over. One said an attack could open at any time.

Some American officers at 8th Army headquarters told reporters they believed the Communists were building up for another offensive similar to the one which staggered the Allies three weeks ago.

But most responsible quarters believed the enemy was getting set for an imminent attack by three American and four South Korean Divisions, plus the British 27th Commonwealth Brigade, now massed on the western and central fronts.

Front reports said air and ground patrols had located a series of strong Communist defense works thrown across the main highways to the northwest border and the Yalu River dams.

Needs Outsider To Build Igloo

Eskimo Becoming Typical American, Says Geologist After Alaskan Trip

Whether Alaska becomes the 49th state next year or not, the Eskimo up there is rapidly becoming a typical American. At least that is the impression you get after a talk with Dr. Gerald McCarthy, professor of geology and geophysics.

Dr. McCarthy returned to Chapel Hill for the fall quarter after spending 18 months at Point Barrow, 330 miles north of the Arctic Circle. He and Mrs. McCarthy were at a camp four miles northeast of Barrow Village, the northernmost inhabited place on the North American Continent. A hundred years ago the Eskimo was living in the Stone Age, Dr. McCarthy says. Today he has a radio in the living room and enjoys nothing more than a game of baseball, basketball or tug-of-war with some of the neighbors. "Not only does he not live in the traditional igloo, but he never did—at least in Alaska. In fact, when we needed to build one, the 'outsiders' had to show them how," Dr. McCarthy said.

This was not Dr. McCarthy's first visit to the Arctic. He has done work for the United States Geological Survey at Fort Churchill on the west side of Hudson's Bay, at Fairbanks, Alaska, and in the Aleutian Islands. During this most recent expedition he was working with the Arctic Research Laboratory, established several years ago by the Office of Naval Research. There are some deposits of coal and oil in the region and the government is now engaged in exploring this petroleum area. No one knows how much oil is there but test wells are being drilled to find out.

Most of Dr. McCarthy's time at Point Barrow was taken up with the geological and engineering aspects of Permafrost (permanently frozen ground). "The (See ESKIMO, page 3)

Col. Oldfield Will Address Students Here

Much Traveled, 'Barney' Popular Throughout World

The most constantly traveling member of the Directorate of Public Relations of the U. S. Air Force—Lt. Col. Barney Oldfield—will address members of the AROTC, administrative officials, and students and faculty of the School of Journalism Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

Col. Oldfield has crossed the Pacific four times, in and out of Japan and Korea, in the last four months, and has had much to do with the setting up of facilities and plans for the coverage of the Air Force contribution in the Korean war.

Last spring he was in North Carolina as public relations officer for the big airborne-air transportability maneuver, Exercise Swarmer, which was commanded by Lt. General Lauris Norstad. In January Oldfield will accompany Norstad to his new command, United States Air Forces in Europe.

Originally commissioned from ROTC at the University of Nebraska, Colonel Oldfield in civilian life was a newspaperman, radio commentator, Hollywood columnist and publicist. He was once picked by Ripley as the world's marathon movie star, as a result of his having seen more than 500 films a year for five years straight as a film reviewer.

When he went into the service in 1940, Colonel Oldfield served in various public relations capacities, and in 1942 he volunteered for the parachute troops, being the first public relations man in this branch.

Dick Bunting Is 'Killed' In Fake 'Skeller Brawl'

There was a scuffle, a knife flashed in the gloom of the Rathskeller, and a coed screamed as Dick Bunting, star halfback and alternate captain of the Carolina football team, slumped to the floor last night, blood flowing from his chest.

But a few minutes later, everyone's nerves settled down a little as it became apparent that Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity was merely up to its old tricks of pulling off staged crimes to test the students' courtroom ingenuity in a mock trial to follow.

What appeared to be a horrible hallucination out of "Lost Weekend" occurred in this manner. Dick Bunting arrived in the Rathskeller around 8:05 and sat down at a table with a mug of beer. Julian Barker, a chemistry student, and Betty Winkler, an English major, were sitting in a nearby booth.

An argument began between Bunting and Barker in which the football player asked to be left alone to "cry in his beer." Then Bunting, in apparent disgust, left the tavern.

A few seconds later he reappeared and was accosted by Barker, who had a beer bottle in his hand. A struggle followed and Bunting fell to the floor, blood mixing with the spilled beer.

He was examined by Chuck Connor, a medical student, and rushed to the infirmary to be declared dead and hour later Barker was immediately arrested by Officers Bud Simpson and Ralph Creel, who said he would be held without bail.

Betty Winkler said Bunting was "a nice kid I was trying to get rid of." She added that the argument came as a result of Bunting's jealousy over her being out with Barker.

The trial will be held on Dec. 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the Law Building.

IFC Postpones Initiation Rule

Unit Hesitant In Utilizing Given Powers

New Measure Passed Monday By 14-2; Will Supercede Old

The Interfraternity Council, hesitant about utilizing powers delegated it by Carolina's 24 fraternities, has, in effect, postponed until next year the stringent ruling requiring fraternity pledges to gain a C average before initiation.

The IFC, in an announcement yesterday, said its ruling passed a week ago had been modified in a new measure passed 14-2 Monday night to such an extent that men pledged this fall would not be affected by the overall C average requirement.

The old measure, presented to the administration last week, stated that pledges wishing to be initiated into a fraternity must gain an overall C average or a C average the quarter prior to initiation. It was to go into effect immediately.

IFC President Dale Morrison said yesterday the scholastic requirement would go into effect with the winter quarter and that fall freshmen pledges would still abide by the old standard which requires they gain 25 hours of passing and 10 hours of C work.

Since the bulk of fraternity pledges come in the fall, and a negligible number are pledged during the remainder of the year, this modification postpones full effect of the ruling until next fall.

The motion was proposed by Sigma Chi representative Kyle (See IDC, page 3)

Pre-Noon Rally Will Set Off Climactic Football Weekend

THIS DUO WILL BE the one-two punch for the Student Party in top freshman offices. Cam Stubbs (right), a member of the Student Legislature, is after the presidency. Ken Myers (left), is Stubbs' running mate for the veeep's job. Fall election date is Nov. 30.

Grail Dance, Yack Contest On Saturday

Duke weekend, the climax of them all, has a heavy schedule listed for the thousands of students who will return from Thanksgiving ready for Saturday's football game.

Leading off will be a pre-noon pep rally on the day of the game—the first of its kind ever tried, according to Jerry Sternberg, president of the University Club which is sponsoring it.

To be held on the back steps of South Building, the pep rally is scheduled to get under way at 11:30 with Joe Chambliss, head cheerleader leading the affair.

The University Club, still elated over its success with the pajama rally for the Maryland weekend, has another trick up its sleeve for this Saturday.

"We're inviting all the people coming to the game to attend the rally," Sternberg said yesterday. He urged all students who will be in town to come to the rally.

The game will be in Kenan at 2 p.m.

That night, the winner of the annual Yackety Yack beauty contest will be announced at the Grail Dance in Woolen Gymnasium. Starting at 8 o'clock, the dance will last until midnight. The Cavaliers' orchestra will play.

Cecil B. de Mille, Hollywood producer-director, has picked the queen from among 63 unre-touched coed photos submitted by Yack Editor Jim Mills.

The dance will be semi-formal. That means evening gowns for the girls and coats and ties for the men. Admission is $1 for stags and 75 cents for couples.

Edgerton Is Queen Of Float Parade

Duke's Blue Devil was baked in a cake and crammed into a garbage can, pretty Ruth Edgerton of Goldsboro was hailed queen of the weekend, and the traditional "Beat Dook" spirit swung into high gear with the holding of the annual Pi Kappa Alpha Float Parade yesterday afternoon.

Some 34 organizations entered floats, and winners were picked by four judges but will not be announced until game time Saturday.

The queen of the festivities was chosen along with six members of her court from 30 candidates at a dinner at the PiKA House last Thursday night. They rode on the PiKA float in the center of the parade.

Members of the court are Arden Boisseau, Nancy Norwood, Dodie Boyer, Frankie Strossner, Pattie Starr, and Betty Bowles. All will be feted over the weekend.

The parade got underway shortly after 3 p.m. in front of Woolen Gym, wound past the coed dormitories on Raleigh Street, swung up through town, and broke up at the intersection of Raleigh Street and Cameron Avenue.

Although favored by clear skies, the parade was marked by coeds shivering in shorts, windblown floats, and a large and enthusiastic crowd of chilled spectators lining the path of the parade.

The judging took place immediately before the procession got underway. Winners were picked in the four divisions of women's dorms, men's dorms, sororities, and fraternities.

Gold trophies will be awarded the winners at ceremonies during Saturday's game in Kenan Stadium.

Santa To Parade

Plastic Xmas Replicas To Cheer Bleak Return

The Christmas season in Chapel Hill will be in full swing when Carolina students return from the Thanksgiving holidays.

The Merchants Association has announced that the business district of the town will be gaily decorated with plastic replicas of all the old and familiar Yuletide images.

It is the intent of the Association, according to President Wilbur Kutz, to have the town completely decked out by the time all students return.

A special celebration has been planned by the organization for Monday night.

Dorms Open For Visitors On Weekend

Visiting hours for all dormitories will be in effect Saturday and Sunday, the Inter-dormitory Council announced yesterday.

Parents, members of the family, and friends accompanying parents, are invited for the second open house held in Carolina men's dorms. The first visiting hours were held during the Maryland weekend.

The IDC said the hours will be from immediately after the Duke game to 6 o'clock Saturday, and on Sunday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. All dormitory advisers will be present during the open houses.

IDC President Ted Leonard received reports Monday night from dorm advisers on results of the Maryland weekend open houses. None of the advisers reported trouble and most said few people had taken advantage of the new program.

The rules were recommended by a special IDC committee of Dan Ashby, Jim Blount, and Paul Summerfield.

Air Interview With Bunting

Dick Bunting, alternate captain of the Tar Heel football team and cadet captain in the local Air Force ROTC unit, will be heard tonight in an interview over radio station WNAO from Raleigh at 10 minutes to 7 o'clock.

Bunting will appear on the Campus Reporter program in an interview arranged by the AROTC with WNAO and Chuck Hauser. Hauser is Executive News Editor of The Daily Tar Heel and Carolina director of the Campus Reporter show.

The program regularly features news from the Big Four schools, Carolina, State College, Duke and Wake Forest.

Local Hosteler Dies; Lived Here 9 Years

Funeral for Charles M. Graham, 60, who died of a heart attack Monday night in Watts Hospital, Durham, will be held tomorrow in LaGrange, Ga.

Mr. Graham, owner of the Brockwell Apartments here, was a resident of Chapel Hill for nine years. Surviving are his wife, the former Josephine Lancaster of LaGrange, Ga., and two sons, Joseph and Robert, both of Chapel Hill.

This is the last issue of The Daily Tar Heel until next Tuesday morning.

The suspension of publication is in line with regular Publications Board policy during holiday periods.

A regular publication schedule will be followed next week.

Heavy Gales Hit Northeast

NEW YORK, Nov. 21—(AP)—A northeast gale ripped through a large section of the eastern seaboard today. Rain, snow and a sharp drop in temperature accompanied it.

At least eight persons died in the storm.

Damage, mostly to power and telephone lines, was extensive.

A Maine utility manager called it "the worst storm we have had for three years." Even South Carolina felt its fury.

The gale, shifting suddenly from southwest to northeast, hit hard at metropolitan Boston where there were 2½ inches of rain.

Last Day

Today is the last day for pre-registration for all divisions of the University. Green forms must be turned in by 4:30 p.m. at the Archer House on Columbia Street.

Archer House reminded students that this applies to all schools, in addition to the General College.
