Order Issued Will Restrict Draft Report

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—(AP)—National Selective Service officials have asked their state directors to submit some draft information to national headquarters before releasing it to the press or the public.

This was disclosed tonight after Col. Candler Cobb, New York City Selective Service Director, had said the army had ordered a blackout on figures on inductions and draft examinations "in the interest of national safety."

The Defense Department said it had issued no such order. Draft officials here said their request was based on a letter sent by President Truman recently. In it the Budget Bureau was asked to restrict the release of government statistical information that might endanger national security.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, draft director, said tonight that as a result of this a letter was sent to all state draft directors. They were told to submit to national draft headquarters any information, prior to public release, that might be classed as "statistical" and that might endanger security.

"The difficulty comes in defining 'statistical,'" General Hershey said.

Cobb said later in New York he had spoken with "a high authority" in national headquarters before announcing the curb on issuance of induction figures "and other information."

He said he received "confirmation" of his action.

Won't Fight

CAMBRIDGE, England, Dec. 5—(UP)—In a poll conducted by the Cambridge University newspaper, 12 per cent of the 260 students sampled said they would refuse to fight against Russia because of political conviction.

Sixty per cent said they would wait for conscription instead of volunteering in a new war. Nearly half were opposed to the government's policy in Korea.

3 Students Appear In Recorder's Court

Dad Represents Son In Exciting Case; Another Student Acts As Own Counsel

By Edd Davis

A father and son combination was hard to beat in Recorder's Court yesterday morning.

P. B. Herring, practicing lawyer in Clinton, and substituting as State Prosecuting Attorney, represented his own son, Elbert Herring, who interred charges of secret assault against Thomas Carraway of Scotland Neck. And by the end of the trial Carraway found out that father and son can really stiek together.

Herring testified that Carraway struck him with a pint whisky bottle in a goal post melee following the Wake Forest-Carolina football game.

He explained that shortly after he had stopped to watch a melee at the goalposts that he felt a hard blow on the back of his head. When he turned he saw Carraway backing away with a whiskey bottle clenched in his half-raised fist.

Judge John Manning returned a verdict of not guilty on the secret assault charge but returned a verdict of guilty on charges of assault with a deadly weapon. The case was postponed until Jan. 13 when judgment on the case will be conferred.

In another case yesterday, John Turner appeared on charges of drunken driving.

Turner, a law student here, was arrested by state police following the Duke-Carolina football game. The arresting officers testified that Turner's automobile was observed weaving in heavy traffic near the intersection of Raleigh St. and Raleigh Rd.

Turner, acting as his own counsel, argued that he was not under the influence. He stated that the jerking of the car was caused by a cold engine. The defendant admitted, however, that he had a few drinks during the game.

Judge Manning returned a verdict of guilty and fined Turner $100 and costs of court.

Turner appealed the case to the Orange County Superior Court and was placed under $100 appeal bond.

A third Carolina student, Jesse Moore, was fined $10 and costs of court for speeding.

Disaster For Youth Seen In Drafting

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—(UP)—A noted psychiatrist called today for a revision of the draft program to prevent a "major disaster to youth."

Dr. William C. Menninger, former top Army psychiatrist and Secretary of the Menninger Foundation of Topeka, Kans., said an unfair system of manpower selection is having a harmful effect on mental health.

Menninger's chief complaint was against the "vicious policies" of selecting college students on the basis of their scholastic standing.

He told a panel meeting of the Mid-Century White House Conference on Children and Youth that the system of drafting men who stand scholastically in the lower half of their class places an unfair stigma on the men accepted and puts those who remain in "a false position."

She's Pretty, Nineteen And Single, But You'll Meet Her Baby Today

By Edd Davis

"I didn't come to Carolina to get a husband, and I don't believe in getting pinned because idle flirtations usually remain so nearly idle," explains an attractive 19-year-old coed.

"But, nevertheless, I am introducing my first baby to the campus today," she adds.

But don't distort the meaning of this idle chatter. The attractive miss in question is Lyn Miller, and the baby is not of the human variety but of the literary form—The Carolina Quarterly.

Lyn has the distinction of being the only coed ever chosen Editor of the magazine, which is also the only literary organ on campus.

And it is a rather strange twist of fate that has made it possible for the Falls Church, Va., coed to become editor.

Lyn began as an art major at Sweet Briar College. Dissatisfied with that, it took hardly one stroke of the brush to send her to Carolina. She chose Carolina, she says, "because I believed that it

German Coed In Death Leap At New York

By Walt Dear

Pretty Evelyn Rosa Lehnbecher, 22-year-old German exchange student at Carolina, plunged to her death in a suicidal leap from the fifth story of a New York City rooming house, it was reported yesterday.

Friends here could give no reason for the attractive young coed's jump.

Her former roommate said the German girl was "physically exhausted and despondent—just spent."

The girl had just finished talking with her mother whom she had called in Germany. She had then planned to have an interview with the advisor of the Institute of International Education to talk to her about going back to Germany.

Miss Lehnbecher had lived in Carr dormitory, but moved to Kenan a few weeks ago. Her Kenan roommate, Kikuku Hori, a Japanese doctor from Chiba, Japan, said she was very homesick and had mentioned a desire to return to Germany several times.

According to Dr. Hori, the German student didn't say she was going to New York. She left here Saturday with Sebastian Sommer, whom she requested to go with her. Sommers is the son of Dr. Clemmens Sommer, professor of History of Art here. Dr. Sommer described his son as a friend of the girl.

Miss Lehnbecher has been going to the infirmary frequently for the last month. She complained of sleeplessness and didn't get more than an hour's sleep at times," said her Carr dorm roommate.

An attractive blond, Miss Lehnbecher had come with 350 other German students to the United States on an exchange program sponsored by the Institution of International Education. Spokesmen for the Institution expressed "shock" when they learned of the suicide and said

Outmanned Units Fall Back In Korea

Onrushing Chinese Communist Horde Traps 15,000 Americans At Chosin

TOKYO, Wednesday, Dec. 6—(UP)—The Allied army of northwest Korea fell back more than 20 miles below Pyongyang today and fought off Communist jabs at its flank nearly half way to Seoul.

Communist armies pounded at the heels of the retreating U. S. 8th Army, tightened a strangling noose on 15,000 Americans trapped at the Chosin Reservoir in northeast Korea, and plunged to the approaches of Hamhung and Wonsan on the east coast.

There was no official word on where the 8th Army would try to make a stand. A spokesman for Gen. Douglas MacArthur, asked if there were any natural defense lines below Pyongyang, said several could conceivably be manned successfully if the Allies had sufficient forces to man them against overwhelming odds.

(In London, an authoritative source said Prime Minister Clement Attlee had sent word from Washington that the Allies might be forced into a mass evacuation of Korea.)

The Communists reoccupied their abandoned capital city of Pyongyang, drove across the Taedong River under a blazing air assault that killed 2,000 of them, and pushed on toward the rear guard defense line the 8th Army had thrown across the main highways about 20 miles south and southeast of the city.

Other Communist forces in undetermined strength—possibly the vanguard of the Chinese legions surging down through central Korea—were reported around Sinmak, Singye and Sibyon. These transport centers lie on or near the two trunk highways down which the 8th Army was falling back toward Seoul.

American troops were fired on along the road northwest of Singye, 55 miles southeast of Pyongyang and 68 miles northwest of Seoul on the easternmost of the two trunk highways. Three GI's were killed.
