Tabby DTH Might Soon Be Replaced

By Wood Smethurst

The Daily Tar Heel may be eight column size soon.

Student Body Treasurer Jim McIntyre asked the Student Legislature to give an additional $4,000 to The Daily Tar Heel on the condition that the money be used to change the paper back to standard size from today's tabloid edition.

Legislators, after hearing McIntyre's Budget Committee report, expressed favorable opinions on the Tar Heel measure. However, vote will not be taken until next week. Also in the committee report was the suggestion that additional funds be appropriated to the student entertainment committee, Yackety Yack and Graham Memorial.

McIntyre asked the legislature for an extra $3775 for the Yack, $3000 for the Graham Memorial, and $675 for the SEC.

The extra money, McIntyre said, came from a rise in enrollment over that expected for this fall. The appropriations asked for may be made, he added, without impairing the financial security of the budget. He stated that there are sufficient reserve funds to absorb the drop in enrollment to as few as 4200 students by spring.

Sitting in the charity home garden, Miss Hoadley converses with Mrs. Hanmer via the ear trumpet. This is a scene from Robert E. McEnroe's comedy hit, "The Silver Whistle," with Josephine Sharkey playing Miss Hoadley, and Lillian Prince as Mrs. Hanmer. The Playmakers are presenting the show on Tuesday through Sunday nights of next week at 8:30 in their theatre.

Director Davis Has Eye On Five New Performers

When "The Silver Whistle" opens at the Playmakers Theatre next Tuesday night, Director Harry Davis will be especially interested in the under-fire performances of five actors appearing for the first time in a major Playmaker production. These aspiring thespians, who have had some experience outside of Carolina, are Anne Miller, Albany, Ga., Robert Tedder, Knoxville, Tenn., Dusty Miller, Signal Mountain, Tenn. and Lawton Haney, Glenwood.

If beauty of form is any criterion, Anne Miller should have no trouble establishing herself as a favorite of Playmaker fans. And to clinch the point, Harry Davis reports her acting talent measures up to her physical appearance on stage. She is a junior student, majoring in dramatic art, and came here with a big stock of experience from the Players of Mary Washington College at Fredericksburg, Va. She will play Miss Tripp in the coming production.

Robert Tedder comes to Carolina as an already established professional theatre man, having made a number of appearances on television, been a director of the famed American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York and the Alley Theatre in Houston, Tex. He has also worked as assistant director of "Unto These Hills," outdoor drama at Cherokee, and as production manager of "Forever This Land," new outdoor drama in Illinois. Tedder will play part of the Bishop in "The Silver Whistle."

Dusty Miller is another graduate student who came to Carolina with a wealth of previous theatre experience. He has played many major roles for the University of Chattanooga Players.

In next week's play he handles the part of Mr. Beach.

Lawton Haney does not have the great experience of the others, but the director maintains he works like a veteran. Haney is a sophomore, majoring in History, and appeared in "A Spell for Davey," original one-act play produced by the Playmakers last year.

Both individual and season tickets are on sale now at Swain Hall and Ledbetter-Pickard's. "The Silver Whistle" is the first major production of the season, and will play from Tuesday through Sunday nights of next week at 8:30 in the Playmakers Theatre.

1000 Students To Make Trip

Approximately 1000 students will migrate to Maryland this weekend for the largest road trip since the days of the fabulous Choo Choo. The campus will be more deserted than it has been since summer school let out.

Some students, fearing they would miss out on some of the festivities left last night. The rest of the troupes will be leaving today. The team will entrain tonight in Greensboro and will board a train immediately after the game to return to Chapel Hill.

The "you-alls" will be floating all over Washington this weekend as Wake Forest will be playing George Washington in Washington Friday night. There will be a large contingent of students there from Baptist Hollow.

Carolina headquarters in the capital city will be in the Mayflower motel.

Honor Council Dismisses First Case; No Evidence

By David E. Buckner

Violation of the Honor Code charges for "lying" brought against Student President Henry Bowers, Rolfe Neill and Mae White, two student journalists formerly associated with The Daily Tar Heel, were dismissed with no decision by the Men's Council last night for lack of positive evidence.

However, Campus Code charges of "character assassination" were brought against White and Neill by President Bowers and a hearing by the Council on the new charges was set for 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday, October 23, in the Men's Council room in Graham Memorial.

In the summons presented to White at the conclusion of last night's two hour and fifteen minute investigation, it was alleged that he had "committed character assassination by what was written in his article published (in The Daily Tar Heel) on October 14, 1951."

Neill's summons was issued for alleged "character assassination by what was written in his article published (in The Daily Tar Heel) on October 14, 1951.

In bringing the new charges against the two, Bowers was reported to have said, "After careful consideration I decided I had been insidiously slandered by irresponsible journalism . . . (We have had) irresponsible journalism not only in this case but over the past few years.

White, who is majoring in journalism here, is a former news editor of the Daily Tar Heel.

Neill, a staff member of The Daily Tar Heel from the time he entered the University two years ago until late last spring, has held positions ranging from cub reporter, to deskman, news editor, managing editor and executive editor. He is now president of the North Carolina Collegiate Press Association and winner of the first place award for news writing last year.

Explaining the decisions reached by the Council last night, chairman Allen Milledge said that "the case resolved into a deadlock of diametrically opposed testimony. Under the Honor System the veracity of both sides must be accepted unless there is additional evidence. However, charges of irresponsible journalism have been brought to the Council upon which charges it intends to act."

He defined the term "irresponsible journalism" as "character assassinations by unprovable assertions."

The original charges for lying against White and Neill were brought by President Bowers, and Bowers was, in turn charged by the Council.

Last night's hearing, which began at 9:30 brought forth for the most part only conflicting statements and claims from the two opposing factions, it was learned.

Chief dispute centered around the statement—"House has not come to me. Why should I go to him?"—which White and Neill claimed had been made by the Student Body President on the evening of October 4 in the Daily Tar Heel office when asked why he had failed to attend a meeting of student organization leaders with Chancellor R.B. House held by the students to protest the University Administration's policy of negro student segregation at athletic events.

Neill and White both swore during yesterday's hearing that Bowers had made the statement, and Neill added, "It was typical of his attitude for the entire meeting," at which the statement was allegedly made.

It was reported that Bowers, when questioned on the alleged statement last night, said "I do not recall making that statement. If I ever made that statement it was removed from context and placed in another context . . . It would have been senseless for me to say that." Dick Murphy, former attorney-general of the student body, who appeared at the investigation upon a summons by the council as a material witness, "categorically denied" that such a statement was made. Murphy was present at the October 4 interview also.

A surprise witness was Jimmy Wallace, graduate student in history, who was also present in the newspaper office during the interview, although seated in an outer office.

Free Movies To Be Shown On UN Day

There will be lots of free-reeling this UN Day here on campus. The United Nations Day Committee has planned for three films to be shown October 24, in Gerrard Hall. The series of three will be shown five times during the day—9:00 a.m., 12:00 noon, on the hour, and at 4:30 p.m. There will be no admission charge for students wishing to see the films.

The films were chosen to illustrate several phases of work which the United Nations is doing. One is a cartoon—"The Brotherhood of Man," and the other two are documentary films—"Seeds of Destiny," and "This is the UN (part two)." The total running time for the three selections is 41 minutes.

"The Brotherhood of Man" is in technicolor. It is an important story of human relationships told in an amusing fashion.
