UNC Child Aid Committee Ends Two-Day Meet Here

A seven-member national advisory committee to study a report on aid to dependent children directed by Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, director of the Institute for Research in Social Science here, and Raymond F. Gould of the Institute staff concluded a two-day session here today.

Members of the committee, representing the American Public Welfare association, are Dr. Ellen Winston, state commissioner of public welfare, chairman; Miss Loula Dunn, director, American Public Welfare Association, Chicago; Mrs. Marie Lane, Washington representative of the APWA; Miss Fern Chamberlain, South Dakota State Department of Public Welfare; Thomas C. Hutton, Social Security Administration, Washington; Fred DelliQuadri, Wisconsin State Department of Public Welfare, and Mrs. Crystal M. Potter, New York City Department of Welfare.

The study directed by Dr. Blackwell and Professor Gould is a two-year evaluation of the Aid to Dependent Children program, which is a part of the Social Security program and the federal and state governments, and was financed by a grant from the American Public Welfare Association provided by the Field more than 6,500 families and more than 18,500 children.

The advisory committee meeting here, Miss Dunn explained today, was set up to guide and serve as a clearing house on the study. She said that 38 states, the District of Columbia, and Alaska participated in the study. "We hope when the report is completed to have the most comprehensive information on the effect of the Aid to Dependent Children program that has so far been produced," she said. The report is expected to be completed by early summer and it will be distributed to universities and colleges throughout the country.

Members of the committee, representing the American Public Welfare association, are Dr. Ellen Winston, state commissioner of public welfare, chairman; Miss Loula Dunn, director, American Public Welfare Association, Chicago; Mrs. Marie Lane, Washington representative of the APWA; Miss Fern Chamberlain, South Dakota State Department of Public Welfare; Thomas C. Hutton, Social Security Administration, Washington; Fred DelliQuadri, Wisconsin State Department of Public Welfare, and Mrs. Crystal M. Potter, New York City Department of Welfare.

Duke Profs Will Invade UNC Soon

Two professors of the Duke divinity school will be featured in a series of four illustrated lectures "From the Ancient Manuscripts to the Modern Bible" to be given in 111 Murphy hall during the coming four weeks.

The first of the series will be given at 7 p.m. January 21 by William Brownlee of the Old Testament department of the divinity school. Brownlee will also deliver the second lecture, while the last will be given by Kenneth Clarke of the school's New Testament department.

Mr. Brownlee was a Fellow at the American School of Oriental Research, and was also a member of the University of California expedition to Mount Sinai.

Mr. Clarke is an authority on the original Greek manuscripts of the New Testament. In addition to extensive travel in biblical lands he has been commissioned by the Library of Congress to photograph and collate manuscripts at the monastery of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai.

Gray Efforts Give Academy Lee Portrait

WEST POINT, N. Y.—Blue and Gray unite again today as descendants of Generals Robert E. Lee and U. S. Grant gather with other representatives of the North and South to pay tribute to Lee on the 145th anniversary of his birthday.

Unveiling ceremonies of large portrait of Lee, painted by Sidney Dickinson, will be held here at the U.S. Military Academy. The painting shows him as General, CSA, in full of vigor at the height of his career.

Robert E. Lee, great grandson of the general, will unveil the portrait. Standing close by will be Maj. Gen. U.S. Grant III, grandson of the Union army chief. The portrait will hang opposite the one of Grant in the academy library.

Today's ceremonies are the results of the work of former Army secretary Gordon Gray, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, and five committeemen who were selected to raise funds for a suitable painting of Lee to be presented on the anniversary of his birthday as part of the West Point sesquicentennial (1802-1952) program this year.

The committee is composed of four Southerners and two Northerners: Gray; Douglas Southal Freeman, Virginia author; Wharton Weems Houston lawyer; Will Clayton, former undersecretary of State; Maj. Gen Russell L. Maxwell (Ret.) and William Randolph Hearst Jr.

Only two portraits of CSA men are at the Academy, those of Lee and General Charles Beauregard, both superintendents of the academy who distinguished themselves in the Civil War.

Speaker for the ceremonies is Lt. Gen. Maxwell Taylor, a former superintendent and recent commander of military government and army forces in Berlin. Gray will give a short talk also.

Kattsoff Plans Altrusa Talk

Philosophy department head Dr. Louis O. Kattsoff will talk to Chapel Hill's Altrusa club about "thought defense" on Thursday, January 24.

At the meeting, club members will have opportunity to question Dr. Kattsoff about the program which he has sponsored actively during past months to combat the half-truths often used in communist propaganda.

It is the idea of Dr. Kattsoff that the American people must become better acquainted with the doctoring - spreading techniques coming from behind the Iron Curtain in order to fight them effectively. He has recorded several speeches at the Communications Center for radio broadcast as well as making public appearance throughout North Carolina.

UNC Officials Won't Talk About Suit

University officials declined comment on a possible suit arising from a Trustee regulation and administrative ruling that banning mixed dances on campus yesterday.

C. O. Pearson, regional attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Thursday that a court suit could very possibly develop since the rulings are not State law. Pearson said the case might be based upon a U. S. supreme court ruling on segregation at the University of Oklahoma where a Negro student was told he "must receive the same treatment at the hands of the state as students of other races" since he had been admitted to a state supported graduate school.

Meanwhile, discussion at the Law School where students had planned and voted to have a dance this spring, hit a low as students prepped for mid-year examinations. The Law School is operated on the semester system.

Student leaders said that the question of whether the dance would be held or not would come up when the Law Association Legislature meets soon after exams. The students had approved by an 82-63 vote to have the dance here. There are five Negro student members of the Law School Association.

Consolidation Is Praised By Harrelson

Consolidation of the three institutions, the University here, State College at Raleigh and the Woman's College at Greensboro, is one of the greatest blessings that has ever come to North Carolina, Chancellor John W. Harrelson of State College said at a meeting of the Rotary Club here this week.

Chancellor Harrelson said that consolidation probably should have been carried even further to include the teacher's colleges of the State "to give us a better coordinated program in all fields of education."

Report Due After Probe Is Completed

University vice-president W. D. Carmichael said yesterday that a report upon the current investigation of a maintenance supervisor here will be released as soon as the probe is completed.

Carmichael's statement thus refuted rumors that an attempt is being made by the University to suppress the findings of the investigation committee.

The probe of the supervisor, alleged to have used State-owned materials and labor in the building of his home, is still being conducted, he said.

He was unable, however, to indicate a date for the completion of the investigation and subsequent report to the public.

Request for the local probe came from the Orange County Grand Jury last December after it received the results of an earlier investigation here by the State Bureau of Investigation and District Solicitor William Murdock.

The jury, foremaned by UNC Director of Admissions Roy Armstrong, turned the case over to Carmichael with a recommendation that the University look into "the C. B. Huggins matter for further investigation and action." Huggins is superintendent of Woollen gymnasium and has been connected with the University for more than 20 years.

The supervisor is alleged to have used University-owned building materials and University-hired labor in the construction of his home.

Following the receipt of the Grand Jury and S.B.I. report, Carmichael sent a letter to all members of the faculties and staffs of the Greater University cautioning them against "violation of the laws of North Carolina" by committing such abuses.

The letter asserted that such practices would "not be tolerated under any circumstances."

What the S.B.I. investigation here last fall actually uncovered has never been made public and University officials have consistently declined to comment on the affair.

Good Deed A Day

Old Boy Scouts Perform Varied Services Here

By Joe Raff

The Pho chapter of the largest Greek letter fraternity in existence, Alpha Phi Omega, foresees a big year for its service fraternity announced T Mac Long, extension chairman in this area

The fraternity whose members are all former Scouts has helped organize chapters at North Carolina State and University of South Carolina. The Carolina chapter is presently engaged in starting chapters at Duke, Davidson and Wake Forest while aiding and giving information to several interested parties at Furman, Lenoir Rhyne and Eastern Carolina College.

Bill Roth, a National Extension Committee member and the youngest member ever to be elected to the National Executive Board, meets with student leaders in the schools along with his other committee members and offers organizational help in establishing new chapters.

In many cases faculty members of the various schools participate in the service activities. "The fraternity is designed to be a service to the campus, school and community," said T. Mac Long. He explained that although service in a scouting unit was a prerequisite for membership rank in that unit would not affect a person's eligibility.

Here on campus Alpha Phi Omega has set up a student operated guide service which will be available this week end. The tour is offered to any one who would like to know more about the points of interest here at the University. Plans are to continue this project throughout the academic year every Saturday and Sunday and upon special requests during the week. These special requests should be addressed to Jerry Cook, Sigma Chi, Chapel Hill, or to the Guide Service, Alpha Phi Omega, YMCA building, Chapel Hill.

Aside from these special projects sponsored by the service fraternity they also participate in campus book and clothing drives, provide assistance at the first aid stations and this year are looking forward once again to their usual social affairs and fellowship programs plus a Parent's Day program to introduce parents to the University.
