Even All Men's Average

Sororities Lead Fraternities In Fall Quarter Averages

If figures mean anything, sorority coeds are smarter than Carolina fraternity men, at least during the fall.

The sorority girls have a B minus or 2.3085 overall average which compares to a 3.0110 average or about an even C for the men. (A-1.00, B-2.00, C-3.00, D-4.00 etc.)

Leading the sororities for fall quarter grades were Alpha Gamma Delta, 2.3598, and close behind, Chi Omega, 2.3617. Sigma Alpha Epsilon averaged 2.5895 to lead the fraternities with Tau Epsilon Phi second with a 2.6752 average.

The all-fraternity average is slightly lower than the all men's average of 2.92199.

Sorority standings are: Alpha Gamma Delta, Chi Omega, Delta Delta Delta, Kappa Delta, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Delta Pi.

Fraternity standings are: Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Tau Epsilon Phi, Zeta Beta Tau, Pi Lambda Phi, Delta Psi, Beta Theta Pi, Alpha Tau Omega, Lambda Chi Alpha, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Nu, Zeta Psi, Sigma Chi, Kappa Alpha, Chi Phi, Pi Kappa Alpha, Chi Psi, Kappa Sigma, Phi Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Theta Chi, Pi Kappa Phi, Sigma Phi Epsilon.

Efforts to secure men's dormitory averages will be made for the winter quarter, Ray Jefferies, assistant to the dean of students, said yesterday. Because so many men move out of the dorms, it is difficult to get grade estimates. However, averages have been compiled in the last few years and with the cooperation of dormitory men, complete average standings will be made again this year.

The fact that a student might be drafted if he leaves the University will not be accepted for consideration in the disposition of Honor and Campus Code cases brought before the Men's or Student councils.

Such is the context of a policy statement issued yesterday by Larry Botto, chairman of the Student Council, and George Freeman, chairman of the Men's Council.

To allow the student offender's military status affect his case "would establish multiple standards which in effect is no standard," the chairmen stated.

"If military status is to be considered, then traffic deaths in the student's home town must also have effect as well as the local disease rates . . . because the action of the Council alters the student's relation to these elements. It is not practical to assume that a student who is suspended will necessarily be called into military service during the period of suspension since the exact time of his "call" is not known," they said.

Botto explained that the policy statement was issued because several students in recent cases had argued that suspension from the University actually amounted to two years of military service, since they expected to be drafted if they left school.

"Military service represents an obligation of citizenship. The time of fulfillment of this obligation can not be known definitely by the student concerned or the Council considering the student's situation," the chairmen said yesterday.

"The Council deals with a student violator on the point of his adherence to the laws and codes of our student community, and sentences are imposed in consideration of this element solely. These sentences are based on the traditions and precedents of the past and cannot be altered by the national or international situation, or the Selective Service System," they continued.

"A student's military status will not be considered by the Men's Council in determining his proper disposition. Neither will it be considered by the Student Council as a valid ground for appeal," they concluded.

The Student Council serves as an appellate court in cases of Honor and Campus Code violations, for which the Men's Council is the court or original jurisdiction.)

Draft Status To Have No Bearing On Any Honor Case, Council Rules

Partisan UNC Government Favored By Phi Assembly

The Phi decided not to abolish campus political parties this week.

By an overwhelming 21-2 vote with several abstentions, the debaters rejected a bill to set up a non-partisan form of student government and destroy the political party system here.

Chief opponents of the bill were Representatives Robert Pace, David Kerley, Sid Schuford, and Wood Smethurst. Their arguments were based upon the belief that while the present status of student government may not be satisfactory, the bill was an impracticable answer, and that, though political parties may be harmful, they are the less of two evils.

Gene Cook speaker pro tem of the Student Legislature and prominent Student Party member, was granted floor privileges to speak against the bill. A member of the Di Senate, Cook called for less criticism of student government, with more individuals participating.

Speaking in support of the bill were Don Sherry, its author, and Fred Crawford. Sherry received the award of speaker of the evening.

Phi debate next week will concern the right of the Federal Government to intervene in the affairs of private utilities, centering around the Buggs island dam project.

Playmakers To Present New Drama

Sam Seldon of the drama department and Kai Jurgson, University student, will act as co-directors of a new historical drama to be run next summer, it was announced at a meeting of the Southern Appalachian Historical Association this week in Boone, N. C.

The play, entitled "Horn in the West", is now being written by Kermit Hunter, former English instructor here and author of "Unto These Hills".

Action of the play takes place between 1770 and 1780 and centers around the main character who comes here from England. It encompasses the area in western North Carolina and nearby Tennessee as well as Watuga.

Site of the presentation will be a 35-acre tract near Boone between the Blowing Rock highway and the State Farm.

Approximately $40,000 to date has been pledged to the Association for production of the drama.

Travel Office Finally Finds Sure Home

The wandering Graham Memorial Travel Agency has finally found a permanent home on the south mezzanine of Graham Memorial.

The final stages of the moving project were completed yesterday according to Frank Allston, Travel Agency manager.

Hours for the Agency will continue to be 2-4 o'clock in the afternoon, Monday through Friday. The new telephone number is 3-1882, but the old number of 9882 may still be used to complete a call to the Travel Agency.

Allston pointed out that the Travel Agency was equipped to provide information and secure reservations on all modes of scheduled transportation throughout the United States and to many foreign countries, free of charge to students, faculty and employees.

Allston is assisted in his Travel Agency duties by Gene Cain.

Smokie Mountains, Orange Jeans Depicts Comedy Here

Brilliant settings, richly colored costumes, and dazzling lights are the order of the day, when the Carolina Playmakers give three evening presentations of the new musical comedy hit, "Spring For Sure," February 1-3 at 8:30 p.m., in Memorial Hall.

The settings are designed and executed by Lynn Gault, permanent technical director of the Playmakers, who has been widely acknowledged one of the foremost scenic artists in American university theatre. In designing for this production, he was faced with the double problem of matching scenic effects with the buoyant liveliness of the script and music, and making them sufficiently flexible to meet the demands of various size stages which the group must deal with on the following tours.

A great perfectionist, Mr. Gault has spared no labor or ingenuity in recreating for the stage the vivid beauty of Smoky Mountain vistas. There are the hill cabins, the rocky bluffs, the vast expanse of blue sky, and the flowering Dogwood trees.

Irene Smart, another member of the Playmakers staff and official costumer for all their productions, has assembled an array of costumes, and fitted them carefully to the performers. The design of these clothes is modeled in detail on the dress of the Tennessee mountaineers, although the colors are startling slashes of orange, blue, and green.

"It is not realistic," remarks Mrs. Smart, "to see men walking about in orange or green jeans, but in musical comedy, the impression of color and spirit is more important than realism."

Special lighting effects for this production are planned and supervised by Anne Edwards, a graduate student from New Bern. She demonstrates, in her present position of master electrician, that an appealing young actress can also be a competent technician. Her lighting arrangement, which seeks to duplicate the brilliant hues seen in a mountain sky, is proving successful.

Given the skill and determination of such artists as Lynn Gault, Irene Smart, and Anne Edwards, (See SMOKIE, page 4)

Coed Board Plans Dance In Pine Room

Come Saturday night, the Independent Coed Board will get its leap year social activities off to a start with a dance in the Lenoir hall Pine Room. This will be the first in what is hoped will be a weekly series of dances, with the girl's dorms taking turns sponsoring them.

Rosa Lee Break, president of the Coed Board said that an area would be closed off and darkened in the rear of the Pine Room, and that everyone is invited to come either stag or drag to the dance which will get underway immediately after the basketball game and last until about twelve o'clock. Refreshments will be served on the house for everyone.

George Prillaman, manager of the dining hall, pointed out that the area for dancing will be available at all times with music from the juke box, and he hoped that more people would take the advantage of it. Prillaman stressed that the Pine Room belonged to the students, and that arrangements for any campus organization to use it could be worked out at any time.

He added further that it was his desire that the Saturday night dances could be worked out to be a weekly affair and that they would prove successful.

Rings On Sale

Junior and Senior Class rings can be ordered today in the Y lobby between 1:30 and 4:30, Al House, ring chairman of the Grail, announced today.

Seniors who have not ordered their rings yet are urged to do so today. Juniors are eligible if they have completed the first quarter of their junior year.

The Grail is the only agency through which the official ring of the University can be ordered.

The rings will be taken in the Y lobby every Thursday.

Di Bill Defeated

A bill calling for unlimited warfare against the Chinese communists was defeated by the Dialectic senate at its regular meeting here Tuesday night.

Accepted as full members during an executive session following the debate were Pebley Barrow, Bill Mudd, and Miss Charlotte Davis.

Admitted as conditional members were Bill Watt, Henry Lowett, and Jack Stilwell.

Farber Heads Monogram

Barry Farber, former member of the wrestling team, was elected president of the Monogram Club on Tuesday evening. Farber, from Greensboro, succeeds Dick Bestwick.

Other officers for the remainder of the year are: Bill Lore, vice-president; John Pat-seasvouras, secretary; Dick Bestwick, CAA representative; and Bob Phillips and Joe Paddan, social chairmen.

President Farber urged all members to attend the weekly meetings which are held at 7:30 on Tuesday night. Plans are being completed for the spring party which can be attended only by active members.
