Segregation Laws Repeal Scheduled For Di Debate

Segregation and discrimination will be debated in the Di Senate tonight.

A bill calling for the repeal of all North Carolina segregation laws will be argued in Di Hall, New West, at 8 p.m.

Senator Jed Thompson will introduce the bill which would place the Senate body on record as refusing to condone "any act of discrimination directed at a fellow human being because of such irrelevant and superficial factors as his race, color, creed, or economic status," and as favoring "the repeal of all segregation laws of the state of North Carolina."

Avowing that "the bases of the American way of life is a conscious recognition of a basic moral principle: all men are created equal as well as free," the bill states that "This principle is consistent with the teachings of religion, philosophy, anthropology, and other branches of knowledge that embody the nobler things in life."

"Discrimination against men," the bill argues, "is diametrically opposed to this principle." It proposes that "discriminatory practices in America are being employed as a major propaganda weapon by the communists to discredit our 'American way of life,' and declares that "segregation is one of the worst forms of discrimination."

The segregation question was recently raised two weeks ago when Law school students voted to hold their annual Spring dance for "all" Law Association members, thereby including five negro students accepted into Law school last summer.

At that time Chancellor House stated that Trustee regulations would not permit any such unsegregated social function.

All students are invited to attend and participate in the debate.

"Nothing to Say"

Snavelly Refuses Comment On Barclay Coming Here

by Bill Peacock

Coach Carl Snavelly refused to comment yesterday on a Raleigh News and Observer story which said that Washington and Lee University head football coach George Barclay has been offered a position as assistant coach here.

"There is nothing to say about it," said Snavelly. The story by Dick Herbert quoted Barclay as saying he visited Chapel Hill and talked to Snavelly about football in general, but there was no discussion of a job. "There's nothing to it," said Barclay.

Barclay was an All-American guard here in 1934 and was captain of Snavelly's first Carolina team. Barclay is quite popular at Washington and Lee and has turned out good teams. He won the Southern Conference championship in 1950 and went to the Gator Bowl where the Generals lost to Wyoming.

Barclay uses the split-T formation at Washington and Lee, the formation that Snavelly has

Musical Soundoff Set By Air Force

The Air Force ROTC cadets are not always studying how to become officers in the Air Force after graduation. They are planning to produce a musical; scheduled for presentation in Memorial hall on March 21.

The theme of the musical will deal with the cadet's life from his first day at Carolina until graduation.

A twenty-piece cadet orchestra will furnish the background music. Taking part in the musical production will be approximately 50 cadets.

Robert C. Ingram is directing the show and the choreography is under the direction of Horace Golightly.

New Show Starts At Planetarium

The winter version of "The Heavens Tonight," presented twice each year by the Morehead Planetarium will open tonight at 8 o'clock and continue through February 25.

The winter version of this demonstration will include heavenly objects in North Carolina and neighboring states at this time of year. Anthony Jenzano, manager, announced that many of the celestial constellations are shown superimposed on the Planetarium sky as they appear through large telescopes. Images from great observatories such as Mt. Polomar, Lick and Mt. Wilson were sent by air express to Chapel Hill especially for this demonstration.

announced he would use next year after many seasons with the single wing. Barclay has coached here before, handling the freshman team in 1938.

Snavelly was also non-committal on the rumor that Otto Brown, famous quarterback of the Cleveland Browns professional team, might work with Carolina quarterbacks this year. "Otto gets around here a couple of times a year," said Snavelly. "He's always given a little demonstration to our boys, but he's usually here at the wrong time of the year. He'd be particularly helpful this year."

"If Otto can visit us, we'd be darn glad to have him help us no matter what the circumstances." Snavelly explained that it is not unusual for players to visit Chapel Hill and help with the coaching. "You know Mac Speedie (All-League end for the Cleveland Browns) has come down and helped us. He travels for an athletic company and visits us several times a year."

Free Beer, But Must Donate To Polio Fund

Over $400 Given In Campus Drive

Free beer will be offered every-one tomorrow afternoon in the Rathskeller, Ted Danziger said yesterday.

But there is only one catch to the offer, each mug of the beverage will cost the drinker a 15 cent contribution to the March of Dimes campaign.

The mugs will be the regular size that usually sell for 20 cents. The hours for the 'free' beer will be the usual cocktail hours, from 3 until 5 o'clock.

Danziger is giving his time, energy and beer to the March of Dimes and he hopes the students and others will give just as generously to the fund.

The 'free' beer drinkers are limited to the 15 cent contribution but may give more if they feel they can.

"Money is needed badly now, the National Fund and the local treasury are nearly depleted now," E. Carrington Smith, local chairman for the March of Dimes drive said yesterday.

The recent campus fringe drive conducted with the approval of the Campus Chest committee netted the local drive by well over $400, Smith added.

The fringe drive was conducted with the fraternities, sororities and Victory Village participating. A contest as to the most contributed per capita was won by the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity. Each member contributed $1.17 to the drive.

ZBT will be given a free showing of a sneak preview sometime in the future by E. Carrington Smith, drive chairman and operator of the Carolina theater.

The drive was sponsored by the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. Jim Lester, chairman of the campus fringe said, "All fraternities, or sororities who haven't made a contribution and desire to do so can call me and I will come and collect it. I also want to take this opportunity to thank all the ones who have helped and contributed in the drive."

Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Pi Lambda Phi were second and third in the contest respectively. Their contributions were over a dollar per member.

The present March of Dimes drive ends Thursday and all contributions should be made before that time, Lester added.

Music Lover

Although Mrs. Helen Terway likes music, she would be just as happy to present the owner with some records that have been in the General College office since registration time.

The records were left in the 308 South Building room during the drop-add period. If they're yours, go get 'em.

Kefauver Plans Made Despite Truman Silence

Law student Hugh Wells in effect did an about face yesterday and announced plans for the formal organization of a Kefauver-for-President Club on the campus.

The proposed club might be indicative of a national swing toward the crime fighting Tennessee Senator.

Earlier this month, before Kefauver became the first Democrat to declare himself formally for the presidential nomination, Wells termed an announcement of plans for the club "premature and inaccurate."

At that time Wells, who is a former president of the Young Democrats Club here, stated that while he and others on campus had been discussing Senator Kefauver as a possible candidate for some time, they had "discussed this in the light of our belief that Mr. Truman will not seek reelection for himself and since he has not spoken his mind on the subject yet, I believe it is too early to make public pronouncements as to organized support for any other candidate on the Democratic ticket."

With Truman still non-committal, the local Kefauver announcement came yesterday as National Democratic Chairman Frank E. McKinney headed to Washington to attempt to persuade the President to announce within 30 days whether he will run for re-election this fall.

The announcement from the President is thought by many party men to be essential if Truman is to thwart an ever-growing swing toward the popular Kefauver, who has mapped out an extensive campaign that might be hard to stop without a definite commitment from the President quickly.

Meanwhile Senator Humphrey (D-Minn) warned President Truman yesterday that "a lot of friendly sentiment" is building up in Minnesota for Kefauver as the Democratic presidential nominee.

The "friendly sentiment" appeared to be building up here too.

Organizational meeting with election of officers for the club will take place some time in February, Wells stated. One of the group's first moves, he said, will be to extend an invitation to Senator Kefauver to speak on the UNC campus.

Other students working with Wells in the formation of the club were listed as John Sanders, former president of the student body and now a first year law student, from Four Oaks; Jack Potts, second year law student and former College Organizer for the N. C. Young Democrats Club, from Franklin; and Jimmy Wallace, graduate student in history and former student government leader, from Jamesville.

Cited as the major aims of the organization were " (1) to publicize Senator Kefauver's record as a statesman and a citizen, in order that the voters may choose their candidate on fact rather than fiction; (2) to emphasize the devotion of Senator Kefauver to the important political principles of the Democratic party, through which it has so long and so well served the people of the U. S.; and (3) to endeavor to gain the support of the N. C. delegation to the National to Senator Kefauver's candidacy."

Interested persons were asked, in the statement from Wells yes-

Old East Gets Social Room

In keeping with the tradition of being a "live-wire" dormitory, Old East is making progress in recovering an old bedroom into a usable and comfortable social room.

Dan Strickland, president of the oldest State University school building in the country, announced yesterday that several committees had been appointed to make the room both livable and presentable.

Already, with the help of the University office of operations, the room has been furnished with two settees, two easy chairs, and two desk-tables, and other wooden chairs. The men, have provided curtains and magazines, and hope to add rugs, radio, and other "necessary essentials" to provide a study-recreation room for the 97 residents of the dorm.

The social center, room 16, was vacated last summer and used as a recreation room. But because of housing problems, it was used for residents until the beginning of this quarter. When officers of the dorm learned the room was available, they applied to J. S. Bennett, director of operations, for use of the room as a social center.

Two New Books By Dr. Kattsoff To Be Published

Dr. L. O. Kattsoff, chairman of the University Philosophy Department, has written two new books, one of which is to be published within two months.

His "Design of Human Behavior," due this spring, is being published by Educational Publishers of St. Louis, Mo., and contains a preface by Hadley Cantril of Princeton University.

Another book, "A Systematic Treatise in Philosophy," will be published by the Ronald Press of New York next fall.

"Design of Human Behavior" is, according to Dr. Kattsoff, an attempt to "bring together information from the social sciences and basing the work on the theory of value to lay foundations for a systematic theory of human behavior." Many groups are (See KATTSOFF, Page 4) terday, to contact any of the student organizers and to watch for further announcements concerning the formal organizational meeting.

Kefauver tossed his coon-skin cap into the Democratic presidential ring on January 23 with the announcement that he was in the race "until the finish."
