No Aid Given By UNC, Says O.K. Cornwell

The University of North Carolina can't and doesn't help high school athletes complete their education so they can come here, Oliver K. Cornwell, secretary to a Southern Conference constitutional committee and director of physical education said yesterday.

Cornwell, pointed out that, because of a new conference ruling, member institutions administer all grants to athletes who are enrolled or who are about to enter. A similar National Intercollegiate Athletic Association rule says, "All aid to athletes must be administered by institutions," Cornwell said. Violations of these rules renders a boy ineligible.

Cornwell's announcement followed a story in Wednesday's paper in which Carolina alumni were reported to be aiding a Fork Union Military Academy T-formation quarterback complete his education. The player, Leonard Bullock of Ayden, is planning to come here, although several other schools, among them Duke and Maryland, are interested in securing Bullock for their teams.

The conference rule does not apply to high schools, Cornwell said. "We (the University) only have control over students in college or entering here. I don't know about other schools," but as far as UNC at Chapel Hill goes, "we don't know of such a practice existing."

As secretary to the faculty athletic committee, Cornwell served as chairman of a conference committee that rewrote the constitution and by-laws at the December meeting in Richmond.

India And Foe Say Graham Should Stay

Frank P. Graham should continue his efforts to mediate a demilitarization of Kashmir between India and Pakistan it was reported from Paris yesterday.

Graham, former president of the Consolidated University and former Senator, is at present a U.N. Mediator. He has made two unsuccessful attempts to solve the dispute over the princely state. His last report, made Jan. 17, said "there are almost insurmountable obstacles" in the way of agreement at the present time.

India and Pakistan are expected to make it clear to the Security Council that they feel the former UNC president has made encouraging progress and be allowed to continue.

A 12-point program was submitted to both governments asking for reduction of the number of troops in the former princely state. It also asked for a holding of a plebiscite to determine whether Kashmir wished to become part of India or of Pakistan.

Mrs. Lillian Prince, Chapel Hill, will play the practical and sharp-talking Maw Higgins in the Playmakers "Spring For Sure." The tuneful musical comedy will open tomorrow night at 8:30 in Memorial Hall, and get two more showings through Sunday evening.

Austrian Troupe To Visit Here

Thirty Austrian students, who will be here February 29 with their second musical goodwill mission, will give a musical show "Visitors from Vienna" in Memorial Hall.

All young students or school teachers, the 10 girls and 20 boys come from the Alps, the Tyrol, Carinthia, Styria, Upper and Lower Austria, Innsbruck, Graz, Salzburg and Vienna.

Proficient in songs, dances and musical instruments of their regions, the student ambassadors were selected for the production by the "Buero fuer Studentenwanderungen," an organization founded after World War I by Dr. Oskar F. Bock, lector at the University of Vienna. This "Office for Student Tours" was formed as a token of gratitude for aid rendered Austrian students by the college students of the United States and Great Britain.

The group is on an eight-month tour in the United States. Their appearance here is being sponsored by the local committee of the National Student Association, headed by Barry Farber.

The students who were chosen from among hundreds of applicants will offer songs, dances and yodeling numbers culled from the folkways of all Austria. The authentic folk costumes have been loaned to the troupe by the provincial museums of Austria.

"It was a good job, but it left out Haw river," said Gov. Scott of the motion picture "North Carolina, the Tar Heel State."

The movie, eighth production of the Communications Center, was premiered for Gov. and Mrs. Scott, the Council of State, and the Board of Conservation and Development.

In the Hall of History Monday afternoon a showing of the movie was held for the press, radio and invited state officials.

Written and directed by John Ehle, the picture was photographed by Sebastian Sommer and Bill Gulley of Chapel Hill, and Hugh Morton of Wilmington.

Charles Seward was film editor, Wilton Mason arranged the music, Ed Wade was the artist, and Ross Seroggs was producer.

State showings are available before school and club groups through the film library of the University.

A companion movie, "North Carolina Variety Vacationland", which was completed last year by the Communications Center, won the highest award in the Boston film festival in 1951, and was shown in all states of the union and some foreign countries. It was televised by 17 stations and by the NBC television network.

Umstead Club Now Going

An estimated 1,000 persons have applied for charter membership in an Orange County Umstead-for-Governor Club, it was estimated here yesterday.

Orange County Rep. John W. Umstead, Jr., who is sparkplugging the county gubernatorial campaign for his brother, Sen. William B. Umstead, said about 40 petitions are now being circulated in every part of the county. They will be collected and tabulated later this week.

An organizational meeting of the group will be held here within a month. At that time the gubernatorial candidate might speak and initiate his county campaign.

No Damage

A chimney fire at the home of Carl Lasley, Jr., a local contractor, alerted a two-truck alarm about six last night, although no damage resulted. Lasley said he was burning some trash in the fireplace when the flue caught fire, and that a big, but undestructive blaze burned out the top for several minutes.

Honor Society

Freshmen who think they might qualify for Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honor society, and have not been notified should see Dr. Ernest L. Mackie, 313 South building.

To qualify, the freshman must make at least one-half 'A's and the rest 'B's' the first quarter or the first-year.

Dr. Mackie has checked most of the records and has sent cards to the ones who are qualified, but he added that some of the records might have been overlooked. For this reason all who think they might be eligible should see Dr. Mackie.

The initiation of the new members of the honor society will be held sometime next week, Dr. Mackie said.

YWCA

Campus Vespers will be held tonight, 7:00 in the Y.

Carmichael, Ruffin Named Honorary Heart Drive Leaders

William D. Carmichael, Jr., controller and vice-president of the consolidated University of North Carolina, and William H. Ruffin, Durham, president of the Erwin Cotton Mills Company and immediate past president of the National Association of Manufacturers, have accepted appointment as State honorary co-chairmen of the annual campaign of the North Carolina Heart Association.

The announcement was made here today by William B. Muirhead, Durham, the Association's president.

James F. Strickland, Durham, president of the American Supplies, Inc., a subsidiary of the American Tobacco Company, had previously accepted appointment as State chairman.

The campaign will be conducted during the month of February with emphasis on American Heart Association Week, February 10-16.

President Muirhead said that this year's goal is $132,000. Seventy-five percent of the funds are retained by the State and local associations.

He said the funds will be used for research to find out the basic causes and to provide better treatment for heart disease, for professional and lay education and for the initiation and improvement of community services for sufferers from heart disease.

President Muirhead pointed out that approximately 14,000 persons die each year in North Carolina of diseases of the heart and blood vessels, four times the number killed by the next most prevalent disease.

"Many thousand more, in all age groups, are disabled partly or entirely by these diseases," he said.

Discrimination, Segregation Hit By Di

by David Buckner

Segregation received a bitter sting here this week as the oldest literary and debating society in the South overwhelmingly passed a bill calling for the repeal of all North Carolina segregation laws, after giving J. Kenneth Lee, Negro law student, a standing ovation and the subsequent award of "speaker of the evening."

In a speech described as "by far the best" of those heard, Lee told the Dialectic Senate Tuesday night that Negroes are not asking for favors or handouts, but for an opportunity to pull themselves up from their present status and suffer or profit from their efforts.

He refuted most of the pro-segregation arguments — generally based upon social aspects involved in the repeal of such laws — which were advanced by opponents of the bill.

There would still be voluntary segregation, Lee said, but not the absolute legal and social segregation of today.

Repeal of the discriminatory laws would restore for all men the democratic privilege of choosing their associates upon the basis of the individual merits, without limitations due to race, color, creed or national origins, he asserted.

In short, repeal would give one the opportunity to choose his own friends without restrictions, Lee stated.

The Senators rose to applaud the Greensboro Negro as he returned to his seat in the venerable debating hall, lined with portraits of distinguished former Di members, many of them early presidents of the University, which is often described as "the cultural center of the South."

Visibly moved, the Senators passed the anti-segregation bill by a staggering 17 to 4 vote.

Afterwards several members, originally opponents of the bill, stated that their decision to vote against segregation came only after they heard Lee's speech. "And the oppressed shall lead the blind," one was heard to remark.

The resolution commending Lee for his address was presented by retired Di president John Schnorrenberg of Asheville. It was adopted by acclamation.

Introduced by Senator Jid Thompson of Decatur, Ga., the bill avowed that "the bases of the 'American way of life' is a conscious recognition of a basic moral principle; all men are created equal as well as free."

It placed the Senate on record as opposed to "any act of discrimination directed at a fellow human being because of such irrelevant and superficial factors as his race, color, creed or economic status," and called for the repeal of all North Carolina segregation laws.
