

Duke's Hotter Than State Now -- Scott

Blue Devils Block Way To Tourney

by Bill Peacock

The Carolina basketball team, which faces the possibility of being shut out of the conference tournament for the second straight year, gets no relief tomorrow night when it faces a Duke team which Coach Tom Scott says is "hotter than State."

The Tar Heels, who have lost three straight conference games, including a five point overtime loss to State, are in no position to play a team that is hotter than the champion Wolfpack. Carolina now holds a 6-4 record and must win at least five of its remaining nine conference games to make the March 7-8 tourney.

"Duke's got a real good team," said Scott yesterday. "Everybody knows how good Dick Groat is, but they have three good men—Groat, Bernie Janicki, and Rudy D'Emilio. And Dick Johnson, (the substitute guard) is a good player. They're fast and will run around you and make the basket."

"We Have to Improve" "We'll have to improve to beat them," Scott continued. After Carolina's surprising 55-46 loss to Wake Forest, the Tar Heels won't work on anything in particular, "just holding on to the ball. We don't have time to re-learn now," said Scott, "the games come too quick and fast."

Against Wake Forest Carolina was outshot from the floor, by the Deacons, 32 to 21 per cent. After trailing 22-35 at the half, Scott benched center Paul Likins and started Ernie Schwarz as the Tar Heels went into a full court press. The Tar Heels matched the Deacons, 14-14, in the third period, and outscored them by four points in the fourth period, but it was not enough.

Scott explained that he benched Likins for Schwarz and later Carter to get additional speed into the lineup, but that Likins will start against Duke in order to make full use of Carolina's height advantage.

"We Were Flat"

"The boys were a little flat after losing to State, but we'll have to be at our best to beat Duke," Scott said. "Duke will always be up for us."

Carolina has played Duke once, losing, 77-59, in the Gerry Gerard game which did not count in the conference standings. "We just went out and played that one," commented Scott. "We'll try to have something to make the score a little closer this time."

Following the Duke game, Carolina plays West Virginia Wednesday in Morgantown. Should the underdog Tar Heels lose both

ALL-AMERICAN DICK GROAT will be the big attraction here tomorrow night when the Carolina basketball team plays Duke's Blue Devils. Groat is averaging better than 24 points per game, exceeding his average of last year when he set a record for the number of points scored in one year. He was "held" to 16 points by Carolina in the last game with Duke, but he's always given a great exhibition in Woollen Gym.

to the Blue Devils and the Mountaineers, they will return home with a 6-6 record to play The Citadel Friday and Furman Saturday.

The game with West Virginia will be awfully tough for Carolina to win. West Virginia has lost only one game this year (in an overtime to George Washington) and no West Virginia teams lose often at home. The Mountaineers are rated 11th in the nation and have one of the finest scorers in the nation in center Mark Workman.

Sottile Injured

An indication of their strength came when forward Frank Sottile, the team's second high scorer, was injured and replaced by Joe Shockely, a regular last year. This Mountaineer team is young and is being compared to the Cinderella team which won the NCAA title in 1944.

The game with The Citadel should not be difficult, but Furman poses a problem. Since the Pallidins defeated Duke early in the season they have improved and led by high scoring Frank Selvy, they are virtually assured of a place in the tournament, while Carolina will be playing under quite a bit of pressure.

South Carolina, with its great forward, Dwane Morrison, will be here February 12, and the Tar Heels cannot afford to have an off night against the Gamecocks. Anything less than a good performance will mean a loss that would probably put Carolina out of the tournament.

JV Cagers Play Raleigh Tonight

The Carolina junior varsity basketball team, which walloped Wake Forest, 72-48, Tuesday, travels to Raleigh tonight for a game with Raleigh High at 8 p.m.

The Jayvees, coached by Earl Ruth, have defeated Raleigh, 62-52, in an earlier game. However, the Tar Heels had to come from behind in the fourth period to win that one and this game promises to be closer on Raleigh's home court.

The top man for Raleigh High is forward Carl Hayes, who is averaging better than 20 points per game this year and made 20 against Carolina.

The Tar Heels are led by forwards Floyd Propst and Chuck Ellenwood. Ellenwood got 10 points and Propst got 15 against the Deacons. Other top scorers for the Jayvees are Joe Moser, Buell Joe Mosier, Beull Mosier, Skip Winstead, and John Dittmar.

At Champions' Reunion!

McDonald Most Celebrated Cager To Be Honored Here

by Jake Wade

Most celebrated athlete among the former Carolina basketball stars to be honored at the reunion of Tar Heel Southern championship teams of 1922, 1924, 1925 and 1926 here Friday, is Dr. Angus Morris McDonald of Charlotte.

He was "Monk" McDonald then, a mite of a man of 148 pounds, but all muscle. He earned 12 monograms in three sports—basketball, football and baseball. He was an All-South Atlantic quarterback in football, All-Southern guard in basketball and All-State shortstop in baseball.

Captain In 1923

"Monk" played on the state championship team of 1921 and the Southern championship teams of 1922 and 1924. He then coached the 1925 Southern champions while a medical student here. He was captain of the 1923 South Atlantic champions. He was an expert dribbler, passer, floorman and playmaker.

Cartwright Carmichael was the most graceful and best shooter on the 1922 Southern champions, when his brother Billy, "Monk", Winton Green and Curtis (Sis) Perry rounded out the starting lineup. Perry, now business manager of the Durham Bulls, was the tall man on that team. He was nicknamed "Uncle Bim", after the comic strip character, when he played in the Dixie Tournament at Atlanta.

Winton Green captained the fabulous 1924 team which never lost a game. Lettermen with him were Cart Carmichael, McDonald, Jack (Spratt) Cobb, Bill Devin, Bill Dodderer, Troy Johnston, Henry Lineberger and Jim Poole. Norman Shepard, now basketball coach at Harvard, was making his debut as a basketball coach.

Cobb Next Captain

New men on the following year's Southern championship team were Bunn Hackney, Sam McDonald and John Purser. Cobb was the captain. And the next year, 1926, when Dodderer was captain, new men added were Howard (Red) Barber, Abe Neiman, Artie Newcombe and Billy Vanstory.

Highlights of these four seasons were the Dixie Tournaments in Atlanta when the titles were decided. Morgan Blake was sports editor of the Atlanta Journal and Ed Danforth, who now holds that position, then was head of the old Georgian's sports staff. The Tar Heels were the fair-haired boys in their columns and they wrote many intimate notes about them. I'm guessing that it was the Atlanta writers who first called tournaments "tournaments" and I recall, as a student journalist here, that the Tar Heels got a charge out of that.

Brother Acts

The brother acts, Billy and Cartwright Carmichael of Durham, "Monk" and Sam McDonald of Charlotte, attracted attention. Sports columnist Blake was impressed when Billy Carmichael told his opponents graciously, "We were lucky to win" after the 1922 finals. "Monk" McDonald made news when he disclosed to the press that the Tar Heels prayed before each game and also between halves.
