The retail beer dealer was getting today and I don't see how that can be counted as a new increase in costs of handling."

> The operator said that he was afraid that the beer industry was being seriously hurt by the continued jump in prices. He said the new wholesale prices scheduled to go into effect would increase the price of beer to the retailer only one half cent per 12 ounce bottle.

"If the retailer increases his prices two or three cents per bottle, I don't see how he can contend that he's not making more profit. At least I always considered 150 to 350 per cent profit on my investment pretty good," he continued.

Prices for beer here have ranged from 25 to 30 cents per bottle during the past few months with most establishments charging 28 cents per bottle.
