

Campus Chest Includes Crippled Children League

(Ed. note—Third in a series of articles outlining the functions of the various organization participating in this year's Campus Chest drive.)

Chapel Hill's office of the North Carolina League for Crippled Children considers the Campus Chest drive as second in importance only to the annual Easter seals appeal among its local Spring fund campaigns.

The League is one of the five agencies for the 1952 Campus Chest, scheduled for March 4-7. Others are the Red Cross, the North Carolina Heart Association, the American Cancer Society, and the W.S.S.F., Indonesian aid organization.

Concern of the League for Crippled Children, says Program Director Eleanor S. Mosher, is to make it possible for crippled people to enjoy more fully the social, economic, and cultural life wherein they live. Trained school teachers and adequate facilities to permit handicapped children to receive educations and preparations for job training are objectives of the League. "Countless handicapped children have abilities, talent, and intellect which can be developed into usefulness," continues Director Mosher. "For this reason the society has sponsored institutes, lectures, and demonstration classes in the Summer Schools of the teacher-training institutions of the State."

It has been stated that 60,000 handicapped children in North Carolina are still in need of teachers trained to teach them. At present, only 87 special education teachers are in the state schools. An estimated 2,500 of these teachers are needed, according to the League.

The portion of the Campus Chest drive for the North Carolina League for Crippled Children helps support the many programs of education, research, and direct service.

Comprised of some 103 County or Unit Chapters, the North Carolina League covers the entire state's territory. Each chapter functions as a separate organization with its own slate of officers, volunteers, and service program. The League office here acts in an advisory capacity, rendering whatever assistance is needed.

Die Pfeifenraucher Announces Initiates

Die Pfeifenraucher, the Carolina Pipe Smoker's Club, held initiation ceremonies last week.

Those initiated into membership were Martin Gerhard, Germany; Charles Swaim, Winston-Salem; Burke Giles, Lexington; Jake Roundtree, Mt. Airy; and Elimar Moser, Germany.

The Club will have a dance at the Recreation Center next week and the following week a pipe smoking contest will be held at the Shack. Judge for the contest will be Tom Keating.

Books and magazine articles on Eisenhower are plentiful. This one condenses some of them, makes interesting reading, but still doesn't answer many of the important questions. We'll have to wait until Eisenhower speaks out when and if he returns.
