

UNC Cagers Meet Clemson Tonight

SC Tourney Outlook Dim In Big Game

Carolina's basketball team puts its tournament hopes on the line when it tangles with Clemson's Tigers tonight in Clemson, S. C.

A loss tonight would virtually write the Tar Heels off the books for another year. The UNC cagers would have to win their three remaining games, and with Davidson, N. C. State, and Duke coming up in that order, the outlook would be very dim.

The Tigers are presently resting in third place in the loop with a record of, 8-2. Carolina is in tenth place with an 8.7 record.

One of Clemson's losses came at the hands of the Tar Heels. Carolina took a 65-59 victory over the Tigers on Jan. 5, when UNC was tied for the conference lead.

Since that game, Clemson has moved forth as one of the top teams of the conference, while the Tar Heels have dropped almost out of consideration for the annual tourney.

The Tigers will rely on John Snee, a 6-foot guard from Trottenville, N.Y., for most of their scoring. Snee whom the coach describes as "better than any player in the state", (including Morrison, Selvy, and Gorden) scored 22 points in his team's loss to Carolina earlier in the season.

Playing the forward position for the Tigers are Marvin Robinson and Tom McCollough, a pair of 6'3" juniors. McCollough chipped in 10 points in the last game between the two teams, while Robinson scored 9.

The center slot goes to John McGraw, a 6'6" junior from Hendersonville, N.C., while the other guard post is filled by Sonny Morrer, a 6-foot junior from Washington, D.C.

The Tar Heels will again count on Lifson, Wallace, Likins, Deasy, and Grimaldi for a win. Lifson

All of these teams have fine swimmers and several boys who hold and Wallace both scored 17 points against Clemson in the last encounter. Deasy flipped in 13 points that night.

state records will be among those participating.

The high school division will be as close as the prep school class. Raleigh High School, which last year won the honors in this division, will be back to retain its crown. Three other North Carolina high schools are entered: Fayetteville, Greensboro, and Wilmington. In addition there will be three high schools from Virginia. Thomas Jefferson, Richmond, John Marshall, Richmond, Benedictine High, Richmond, will participate in the meet.

140 swimmers are entered in the meet and a large crowd of spectators is expected. No admission will be charged.

This meet has produced many fine swimmers. Two of the members of this year's Carolina varsity, Rick Levy and Stan Tinkham, got their first start in this meet.

Matmen Lose Sixth Straight Meet To N. C. State By 27-3

By Alva Stewart

Superior ability proved to be the downfall of Coach Sam Barnes' matmen as they lost their sixth consecutive meet 27-3 to a skillful NC State wrestling squad here last night. The Tar Heel's sole victory came over Davidson early last month.

Tommy Cox, 177-lb. Tar Heel, turned in the only victory for Carolina, decisioning his opponent Vito Kaiser 14-6.

In the most exciting match of the evening, Carolina's Harvey Bradshaw was turned back by State matman Taul Waggoner 15-13. Nip and tuck throughout, the match was decided by virtue of a two point time advantage.

In the 147-lb. class, State's Donald Taylor defeated Tar Heel Tommy Stokes 8-4, the action in this match was fast and furious throughout, with Stokes waging primarily a defensive battle.

Wrestling in the 123-lb. class for the first time this year, Carolina's Earl Kendrick lost to 'Speedy' Sideras 5-1. The Wolf-pack grappler had the offensive for the entire time.

Next Friday, Coach Barnes and his wrestlers will face Virginia in Charlottesville. Maryland will oppose the Carolina matmen there on Saturday. The Tar Heel's next home meet is with Duke's Blue Devils on March 1.
