Foy Baker's

'Ghost' Said To Be Haunting Hillsboro Street Residence

Chapel Hill has a new ghost story.

There isn't a real ghost involved, and no one has said he believes there is.

This 'ghost' has given rise to a tale that is bringing hundreds of curiosity seekers to the late Foy Baker's home each evening, although it is only a thin nighttime shadow in a roughly human shape.

The late 60-year-old Negro ran a barbecue stand on W. Rosemary street for a number of years. He died in his sleep last Sept. 24, and since that time his wife, Laura has continued to live with her son in their one story frame house on North Hillsboro street.

A bright green metal rocking chair on the front porch was his favorite chair, he used to sit there every evening before his passing away. Recently a passerby noticed

N. C. State's Paper Feuds With Alumni

(Special to The Daily Tar Heel)

RALEIGH, Feb. 16—Irate Charlotte alumni, in a tizzy over student editorials on N. C. State athletic funds, aren't worrying outspoken Paul Foght, editor of the offending Technician.

As a result of his writings last fall and this winter, a letter calling Foght's articles "scurrilous and false" has been sent to State Chancellor J. W. Harrelson. It was signed by 16 members of the Board of Directors of Mecklenburg chapter of the General Alumni Association of N. C. State.

The letter also wanted information on staff members who had "foreign-sounding names," Foght told a Daily Tar Heel reporter. "I think the letter is Dave Clark-inspired," Foght declared, "although his name was not on it."

Clark is the brother of Trustee John Clark who has figured in recent news at the University at Chapel Hill.

The furor centers around Foght's clamor for profits from the campus canteen to go to "cultural and recreational activities." The editor charges that only 15 per cent are going for these activities, while the remainder is being used for "other things, presumably athletics."

The Charlotte alumni group, according to Foght, is most concerned with his editorial asking for the resignation of Dr. H. A. Fisher, chairman of State's Athletic Council.

Because of Dr. Fisher's "dictatorial policies, his action in regard to the firing of Beattie Feathers (football coach), and his attitude which is incompatible to his position," The Technician asked that he resign or answer the paper's charges. Foght said Dr. Fisher did not reply.

Commenting on the alumni letter, Foght said, "As a result of the letter, I have been personally intimidated by a faculty member in regard to a textile job after graduation."

Foght was asked by "another party" to change his editorial position, he said. He refused.

"Interested parties picked on this issue (Fisher resignation) to stifle the canteen issue," Foght asserted.

Foght said a mass student meeting will be held in the Coliseum Tuesday night to help determine student policy on whether all profits of the supply store should go to recreational activities or not.

If the students favor having all the profits for their activities, a group will go before the Board of Trustees asking this, the editor declared.

Asked if he was worried about being kicked out of school, Foght replied, "I'm not worried of any follow up. The alumni failed to point out any error. Some have called me a radical, but I'll probably vote Republican next year."

Historical Record Of 48 States Finished By UNC Prof

One of the greatest documentary and microfilm publication projects dealing with the historical resources of the 48 states ever undertaken has just been completed as a joint undertaking by the Library of Congress and the University of North Carolina, it was announced here today by Chancellor Robert B. House.

Launched in 1941 but suspended for most of the war years, the project has succeeded in locating, microfilming, and organizing the earlier legislative, judicial, and executive records of the 48 states and their various territorial and colonial predecessors.

A complete list of the historical state records that have been microfilmed during the past decade under the project are embodied in two volumes. The first, "A guide to the Microfilm Collection of Early State Records," in 800 pages, was brought out in 1950. The second volume, a 161-page supplement to the first volume, has just been published.

The work of selecting materials for filming and compiling and editing the microfilms was done under the direction of Prof. William Sumner Jenkins of the Political science department. The 800-page "Guide" lists 1,700 reels of film on which official state records were reproduced, and the 161-page "Supplement" lists 170 reels of additional microfilmed materials.

Thus these important documentary materials are made known to scholars, officials, and others, and the microfilm itself insures the preservation of the information in the records no matter what may happen to the originals.

The project involved more than 60,000 miles of travel, and 1700 reels of microfilm, of approximately 100 feet each in length. The film reproduces some 2,500,000 pages, the equivalent of a series of more than 8,300 books of 300 pages each. The film, if unrolled, would stretch over 30 miles; yet it can be stored in less than 26 cubic feet of space.

Chancellor House, in commenting on the project, said: "No similar enterprise of photographic reproduction has equalled this one in scale and scope. The University is proud to have had a part in it. In extent of holdings in this field, so effectively strengthened by this acquisition, the University now stands next to that of the Library of Congress."

Back to his teaching duties at the University, Dr. Jenkins is now drafting his final report on the project. He is also directing research projects in the public documents collection of the University Library. He hopes that some day there will be established at the University a Records Research Laboratory which will carry out similar large scale microfilm projects like the one just completed.
