Book X Earns $39,000 More Than State Unit

"I hope that some day—in the not too distant future—the profits from the Book Exchange will be devoted to scholarships available to all students, said vice-president Carmichael in his trustee report on the supply store at State College.

Although Carmichael was not available for comment at this writing, it is believed that such a scholarship fund would be on a similar basis as that at State.

Profits of the Book X are transferred to the general maintenance budget. They pay the salaries of the faculty and staff, and help pay for the general upkeep of the physical plant, the report said. Profits at State have gone into student scholarships—mostly athletic ones—whereas here they go for salary and maintenance.

Earnings from the Book X since 1944-45 are $469,863 as compared to States $430,788. The Book X here pays no rent, no accountant fees. Employees are under the State retirement plan.

As for book profits, here or in Raleigh, neither store makes much money, says the report. "Textbooks are priced by their publishers and only 20 percent of the retail price goes to the store. It costs between 11 percent and 12 percent to 'handle' textbooks. The profit is obviously small," the report continues.

Dual Concert Slated Tonight

Hill hall will resound tonight with the combined voices of the Greensboro College Glee Club and the UNC's own Men's Glee Club in their annual presentation of choral music at 8:30.

The Men's Glee Club will render compositions by Arcadelt, Lvovsku, Sibelius, and Vaughn-Williams. The Greensboro Glee Club will perform a new type of choral composition, "Four Songs for Wordless Chorus," featuring Beverly Ivester as soloist.

The public is cordially invited to attend this concert. E. L. Williams, of Greensboro College, and Joel Carter of UNC will be the directors. Accompanists are Eleanor Payne and Benjy Haywood, pianists, and Will O. Headlee, organist.

'Greetings From Vienna'

Austrian Group To Present Musical Comedy Here Friday

"Greetings from Vienna" will be presented by the third Austrian Goodwill Group to North America at 8 o'clock Friday night in Memorial Hall.

This musical comedy constructed about a simple plot is the third program of the Austrian Students and Teachers' Group.

The first "Goodwill Tour" to North America was planned for 1939 but the annexation of Austria prevented the trip and caused the disbandment of the group and its offices went out of existence. After the war and liberation, offices were reestablished and old plans for a tour to the USA were taken up.

The first group arrived in New York in Nov., 1949. Members of the groups are chosen from among hundreds of applicants. Most of them are youth leaders or future teachers and will have a direct effect on removing "good will" from the "lip service" class and putting it into practice, for these groups will tell their fellow students, pupils, families, and friends and organizations of America, a country and its people they know thru first hand acquaintance and experience.

This personal introduction to the social, economic, ethnic and cultural aspects of the American way of life, learned from the fraternities, sororities, private homes, and other personal contacts formed the tours, is complementing America's efforts to explain itself to Europe.

Tickets for the show are on sale at Danziger's, Y-court, and will go on sale at Lenoir hall, 75 cents for students and $1.00 for townspeople and others.

Five Day Run Of 'Winterset' Will Open Tonight At 8:30

Carefully planned stage settings, lighting and costumes will contribute to the cumulative tragic effect of Maxwell Anderson's verse drama, "Winterset," opening tonight at 8:30 in the Playmakers theatre.

Gene Graves, a graduate assistant from San Diego, Calif., has designed the two settings with a view to transmitting to the audience the smallness of Anderson's characters amid the towering, mechanical shapes of New York's buildings. One setting reveals the interior of tenement shack, and the other represents an exterior scene on the bank of the East River, just below the Brooklyn Bridge.

So that the four actual changes of set will not delay the action, Graves has adapted the periactori device, popular in the ancient Greek theatre, to suit the Playmaker stage. This device uses a number of solid prismatic figures which may be rotated to produce new scenic effects. The buttresses of the bridge may thus be quickly transformed into wall or doorways.

Imaginative lighting for the production is arranged by Richard Snavely, a graduate assistant from Hagerstown, Md.

Irene Smart, costumer for the Playmakers, has designed the costumes which, as in the case of scenery and lighting, contribute to the general mood which the playwright is establishing.

"Winterset" will have five evening performances through Sunday, and tickets are on sale during the day at Swain hall here and will be available at the theatre box office after 7:30 on performance nights.

Ivey's Pay Termed 'Justifiable' In Report Made To Trustees

The pay of L. I. Ivey, manager of State College Students Supply Stores, is "justifiable," according to a joint report to the Board of Trustees and President Gordon Gray made by Vice-President W. D. Carmichael, Jr. and J. G. Vann, business manager at State College.

Ivey has received more pay than the total amount of scholarships given in the same period. In explaining Ivey's pay the report pointed out: that Ivey developed the business from "scratch." The purchase price of his stores was far too low (the controller and J.G. Vann, State College Business Manager, believe $250,000 would have been a fairer price than $85,000), and that his present salary probably is the same as that earned before the college bought the store.

Including this year's earnings, Ivey will have received about $184,105, since 1944/45, making an average of $23,000. Scholarships awarded since 1946/47 amount to $137,571 with 308 athletes and 72 non-athletes receiving them.

Carmichael explained that when G. I. benefits expired for many State athletes, they still had their senior year to finish. This is why so many scholarships were awarded to athletes. As for the 19 percent non-athletic scholarships, the report said, "No needy and deserving student of State College has ever been denied financial assistance from the Scholarship Fund—athlete or non-athlete . . . The college administration has been conscious of seeming preferential treatment of athletes in the award of financial aid from the fund and the figures for the current year already reflect definite efforts to make sure that no student who needs financial assistance fails to apply for it."

In a letter prefacing the report, Carmichael challenged the wisdom of State students' demands to spend more than 15 percent of the fund for campus improvements.

"I do not question the right of our students to criticize the administration and the trustees—particularly when they do not know the facts and figures. I do not question the right of our students to know all the facts and figures concerning any aspect of the College. But I do question—and challenge—the wisdom of the student's petition that more than 15 percent of the Scholarship Fund money be spent for campus improvements.

State Students hope to present a petition to the trustees Friday asking that more money go for recreational, and cultural activities on campus.
