Encyclopedia Supervisor Talks On Pictures Here

By R. W. Madry

A man who supervises 183,000 miles of words was in Chapel Hill today to talk about pictures.

He is Walter Yust, editor-in-chief of the Encyclopedia Britannica. He was attending the Southern Short Course in Press Photography competition that will feed into Britannica's national competition, conducted jointly with the National Press Photographers Association, and considered by editors generally as the "World's Series of photo-journalism."

Mr. Yust drove to Chapel Hill from Washington, D. C., with an aide from Britannica, and subsequently reported that the trip was the longest automobile ride he said, was 125 miles, occurred 20 years ago, and bored him stiff.

"Not", he added, "that I don't think autos are here to stay." This time the fabulous Carolina Spring foliage held him entranced, he declared.

Mr. Yust is the 13th in a series of Britannica editors dating back to 1768. The first editor was a pal of the poet, Robert Burns, in Edinburgh, Scotland, where Britannica originated. The second started out life as an engraver of crests on dog collars, and ended up owning the publication. The third was banned from Great Britain, went to New England to edit a newspaper, drank too much one fine evening, and on his return home, fell into a quarry and was drowned.

"My career has been somewhat less romantic," Mr. Yust grinned. He began as a newspaperman in Philadelphia, worked at this craft in Chicago, Memphis, New Orleans and New York, and was a literary editor when he was summoned to Britannica for an interview as a prospective sub-editor as the result of a literary review which began:

Town Gov'ts Group Plans Meet Here

The North Carolina League of Municipalities will hold a regional meeting of officials in the east-central section of the state in the Morehead building Tuesday, April 22, at 3 o'clock, according to Chapel Hill Mayor Edwin S. Lanier.

Following the meeting there will be a supper at 6 o'clock at which delegates will be guests of the Chapel Hill city officials.

Purpose of the session, according to Mayor Lanier, is to bring the municipal officials in this area together for a discussion of current problems of municipal government administration. The meeting will take the form of an open forum and all delegates are urged to participate and present their own local problems. League staff members and Alex McMahon of the University's Institute of Government will lead the discussion.

Officials of the following towns are included in this region: Coats, Dunn, Broadway, Goldston, San-

Air Force Cadets Give Colorful Review Here For Inspection Party

Some 675 cadets in the Air Force Reserve Officers' Training Corps staged an elaborate military review here Friday for an inspecting colonel from the 14th Air Force headquarters at Robins Air Force Base, Georgia.

Decked out in their blue and olive drab uniforms, the cadets opened ranks for a speedy personnel inspection and then passed in review before Col. Robert Wheckel, Deputy for Materiel, Headquarters, 14th Air Force, who is winding up a two-day annual inspection of the Air Corps installation at the University.

Colonel Wheckel was accompanied during the inspection by Lt. Col. Jesse J. Moorhead, who is commanding officer of the Department of Air Sciences and also professor of air science and tactics.

Under the complete supervision of their own officers, the cadets moved impressively through their formations and capped their ceremonies with a colorful mass formation. They then passed in review to martial music rendered by their newly organized cadet band. The band unit was under the command of Cadet Lt. Col. W. S. Coley of Elizabeth City.

Commanded by Cadet Col. James R. Strickland of Wilson, the Corps of Cadets is divided into two Wings headed by Cadet Col. William R. Burkholder of Eagle Springs and Cadet Col.

Larry F. Botto of Bradenton, Fla., who took the leading roles in yesterday's ceremonies.

Other top ranking cadet officers were the squadron leaders, all of whom are Cadet Lt. Colonels. They are B. E. James, Jacksonville, Fla.; R. L. Hartsell, Charlotte; G. S. Blackwelder, Hickory; R. M. Creed, Fayetteville; C. W. Crone, Goldsboro; J. R. Womack, Spencer; R. S. Green, Lewisville; and G. N. Hut-ton, Hickory.

The Air Force ROTC was organized at the University in 1947 with a total enrollment of 84 cadets. Since that time the number has increased to some 675, making the program one of the major sources of junior officers for the components of the U. S. Air Force.
