culums. They keep students more in touch with current events, she said. "I don't think students here are 'apathetic,'" Miss Gilson opined—"except the coeds. They don't speak out as much as the boys do."

Miss Gilson majored in Greek at Wellesley and left with a Phi Beta Kappa key. She returned to her native Pittsburgh and came into contact with the lives and deeds of factory workers in her job in the steel districts.

A recount of Miss Gilson's life may seem fabulous to those who consider industry a place for men. For 12 years she was in charge of the employment and service department of a large midwest factory employing 2,000 workers. The factory instituted personnel work as one of the intergral functions of scientific management and because of its pioneering was visited by industrialists and labor leaders from all parts of Europe and America.

With her experience in labor problems, Miss Gilson did consulting work in various plants and industries. Research work took her to Hawaii for a study of labor relations on sugar plantations.

From sugar plantations she bounded into Britain. There she spent two years gathering material for a book on unemployment insurance.

In discussing the present British socialized medicine plan, she said, "I think the English have realized that they have carried the program too far and know that they can't care for everyone's common cold. We must have a great deal of patience with British economy. They suffered more than we in both wars—both in manpower and capital."

8 o'clock tonight in the Williams-Wolfe Lounge of Graham Memorial.

The Coed Riding Club will meet Wed. night at 8:30 at Pine Knoll

Miss Gilson has collected from her experiences and written several books. She first came to Chapel Hill in 1939 to write "What's Past is Prologue," a book dealing with her industrial experiences. A Guggenheim fellow holding an L.L.D., she is a noted lecturer.

A one-time economics professor at the University of Chicago, Miss Gilson ended the interview with a wry smile and a firm note: "I have no patience with courses that preach theory, theory, theory, and no practical insight."
