Rameses . . . by Rollo Taylor

Carolina Co-eds, by their own admission, spend most of their leisure time talking about sex, boys, marriage, boys, diamond rings and boys. Anytime a young lady tries to butt in and talk about something less frivolous she is immediately frowned upon.

It is the general opinion of the male students here that the gals come to make social contacts and meet husbandly prospects. What they say is true. Nine out of every ten co-eds are lousy conversationalists; they know little and care less about the national situation. They think Kefauver is cute. They believe that the truce tent at Panmunjon should be brightened up with flowers. With that addition peace would be a simple matter.

But—the co-ed here is not alone. In fact, the rest of the babes about the country feel the same way. What with movies, story books and athletic idols, we can't blame them too much.

Up until the advent of movies (when a national cross-section was more easily viewed) the southern belle dreamed of waiting on the dock for her dashing river-boat Gaylord Beauregard. He came complete with a Derringer up his lace covered sleeve.

Up Nawth, the gals thought relied more upon the Prince Charming legend. They dreamed of being rescued from the local village suitors by a man astride a blazing white charger.

In modern times, the dream is still there but changed due to technological research. Now its Tony (Oh, desired by women) Curtis, Tie-rone Power and even big ears Gable holds the hearts of a few gals with father complexes.

Mind you now, that is not all the co-eds, only nine out of ten. The other ten per cent like males because men can keep their minds on one subject long enough to make decent conversation. They think athletes should be judged by their communicative ability rather than their point making capacity.

One male recently stated that he was disappointed in general. He read somewhere that college is the mostly likely place to find a mate on his educational level. At last report he has been dating a waitress in Raleigh.

Proposal for UNC

Due to certain sneaking suspicions which have accumulated in the minds of the people during the past months, the University finds itself with a new task confronting its time-honored walls.

The great minds in South Building have pondered over the problem, as have the serious students on second floor Graham Memorial.

They have deliberated privately and in committees. A joint committee has finally been formed. Action is finally to be taken.

The problem is one of obvious delinquencies on the part of the National government. That government has for uncounted years past been harboring communists, columnists, homosexuals, crooks, and criminals. This has been effectively proved (Hal McCarthy, second-year accounting student, visited in the capital city last year, and has reported these facts secretly to the committee in closed session.)

Few Is Lulton, III, nationally recognized Hearst columnist, has reported the facts time after time, but no action has yet been taken. His suggestion that UNC investigating committee travel to Washington in order to get first hand knowledge is finally to be acted upon.

The committee leaves next week. A problem of funds held them up for a time, as obviously no member of the committee would be willing to finance such a trip out of his own pocket, when the matter so vitally and basically affects the university. But that problem has finally been solved by the happy suggestion of an education student that the newly established library (books) endowment be relieved of $2,000,000. The fund currently stands at $47,000, but is expected to accrue the necessary interest inside 193 years.

Two professors, one in accounting, and one in economics are to be congratulated for their vital part in making financial arrangements.

All difficulties cleared, the committee leaves next week, with the necessary subpoena and contempt powers which they have authorized for themselves.

They will also take along a battery of television cameras necessary in the public interest to ruin the lives of certain malefactors who cannot be otherwise punished under the weighty and time-ridden jurisdictional rigamarole of the United States.

The committee is expected to clean house in Washington, sweeping out known offenders, discovering some unknowns who have previously been hidden from the limelight of truth, and a few miscellaneous characters who belonged to the "Milk for Albanian Babies Club" in 1913.

The committee is expected to complete its job after a survey of the books in the Library of Congress, to determine which of them are subversive.

The committee is expected to complete its investigatorial responsibilities within two years, but let us not forget that the job is a continuing one. Somehow, those who tout the various "freedoms" manage to sneak back into government periodically.

The fight must be continued for years.

Correction

The article on the Cosmopolitan Club by Elimar Moser carried an error in the sentence, "When the Senators went to vote, the bill was passed." The Di defeated the bill, which concerned a geographical division of Germany.
