This is one capacity of the office of vice-president which has been sorely lacking in the past. The president in recent years has been greatly overworked.

Thirdly, although the student legislature admittedly has not performed the duty it could have or should have, the situation is not without remedy. A program can be initiated whereby the legislature can be brought closer to the students and in such a way a closer check is maintained.

Along the idea of closer relationship between the students and the legislature, a special committee within the legislature functions to see that the representatives from the various districts carry back to the students as many issues as possible and to collect ideas from them on proposed legislation. The student legislature could easily become a body of which all student may be justly proud.

Fourthly, if given the opportunity to be of service I shall be unbiased in my decisions for student government. In no way shall I show partiality to any party or group, but, to the best of my ability, I shall try to uphold the best interests of all the students.

An issue so often misconstrued is that a party label obligates one to be the servant only of the party nominating him. However, the foremost responsibility is not to any one group, but to all the students. Therefore, with this in mind, I sincerely pledge to all the students my very best efforts to be their servant."

2 In Court

Preston R. Brown, Carolina student from Johnson City, Tennessee, and Herbert J. Murphy, Duke student, were the only students to appear in Tuesday's session of Chapel Hill Recorder's Court.

Brown was charged with driving while intoxicated and fined $100 and court costs, while Murphy, for passing on a hill, was fined $5 and court costs.

Letters Mailed To Colleges On Press Convention Plans

Letters were mailed yesterday to 23 North Carolina colleges outlining plans for the state collegiate press convention to be held here May 16-17.

At the same time, President Rolfe Neill announced that the University's Press Club had voted to help in preparation for the convention and act as hosts to the visitors next month. The convention headquarters will be in the Carolina Inn with forums being held in campus buildings.

The North Carolina Collegiate Press association is composed of the publication editors and staffers of the state's colleges. Neill said he expected about 50 to attend the May convention.

Efforts are being made to bring a nationally-known syndicated columnist to the convention to speak at the awards banquet the last night. Neill added.

was seriously injured and almost died.

Froelich and Early said the hazing problem can be better handled locally of the IFC regulations. The IFC rules deal with fraternities as groups; the state law deals with individuals.

For their first conviction under the IFC rules, which define hazing as "physical abuse, public disturbance or scholastic interference," a fraternity is fined $100. For offenses after that the fraternity is suspended from the campus for 12 months.

Phi Gamma Delta in the recent incident did not violate the local definition of hazing, Early and Froelich said.

The Phi Gam incident came after pledges allegedly stole the fraternity's silverware. They were placed nude in a shower stall and told to "return the silverware or urinate upon each other." The Daily Tar Heel was informed by members of the IFC.
