

Three Listed To Nominate Best Stories

The Executive Committee of the University Press Club yesterday appointed three members to the club's first Board of Awards.

Barbara Tuttle, Walnut Cove, Julius Hubbard, Wilkesboro, and Joe Gilchrist, Chapel Hill, were appointed to carry out the task of selecting the best stories in each of four categories — news, sports, features, and editorials— appearing in The Daily Tar Heel during the spring quarter.

The Board was selected in response to a resolution calling for the presentation of awards each quarter to the authors of the best stories appearing in the student paper. The board will be responsible for screening each issue of the paper for the best story in each group. At the end of the quarter the Board will meet to reduce the number of stories in each group to five. The board, in conjunction with a member of the journalism faculty, will then rank the stories according to first, second, and third places, and first and second honorable mention.

Roland Taylor, Tarboro, treasurer, told the members an agreement had been reached between the journalism faculty and The Daily Tar Heel whereby members of the intermediate and advanced news writing classes will carry out assignments for the paper as part of their regular work. The students will serve one afternoon each week in place of a regular class attendance.

Taylor told the group the plan was on a trial basis.

High-Ranking Students From Large Schools

Exhaustive Study Released, Covers Four Years Here

Students ranking highest scholastically at the University come principally from North Carolina's public high schools with 18 or more teachers on the faculty.

This was revealed in an exhaustive five-year study just completed by Dr. Ernest L. Mackie, dean of student awards and distinctions, and his secretary Mrs. Helen P. Moser.

The study covered the period 1947-1951 and was based on memberships in Phi Beta, Kappa, highest scholastic organization, and Phi Eta Sigma, freshman scholastic honorary organization.

To make Phi Beta Kappa a student must maintain an average of at least 92.5, while Phi Eta Sigma requires that a freshman make one-half A's and the rest B's on his first quarter or first year in the University.

During the period, 685 or 10.97 percent of the graduates made Phi Beta Kappa and 333 or five percent of the freshmen became members of Phi Eta Sigma.

Broken down, the figures showed that 58 percent of the Phi Beta Kappa initiates came from North Carolina high schools. Of this number, 62 percent came from high schools with 18 or more teachers; 21 percent came from high schools with between nine and 17 teachers; and 17 percent came from schools with eight or less teachers.

Private and out-of-state high schools furnished 41 percent of the Phi Beta Kappa initiates. Of these 81 percent came from schools with 18 or more teachers and, 18 percent came from schools with between nine and 17 teachers.
