Open Letter To Seniors

You college seniors are about to finish your undergraduate work and start your life's career. For many of you the attaining of your degree will mark the completion of your formal education. Others of you will go on to graduate work in the special field you have chosen. For all, this spring will mark the achievement of one goal and open up the way towards future goals.

You and your fellow graduates are an impressive body. In sheer size alone you number some 300,000. In training and education, in imagination and in vigor, and in your vast potential capacity you are, in total, a national resource of major importance. Yet, as individuals, each of you is faced with the problem of getting started in the field of your choice.

Fortunately, the economy of the United States is operating at record-breaking levels and still expanding. Some areas are experiencing acute labor shortages and demand far exceeds supply in a variety of occupations, many of them in professions you will enter. Furthermore, we anticipate that employment will continue to rise and labor supplies become even tighter during the coming months as defence production increases and as materials become more plentiful for civilian use. Indeed you should have little difficulty in finding employment except in a few industries.

The probability that you will find ready employment gives you an opportunity to select your first post-college job with care to fit in with your long-range vocational plan. Such a selection should be made only after you have assembled as much information as you can about where immediate and long-range opportunities lie—in what industries, in what occupations, and in what sections of the country.

It is my hope that you men and women who graduate this year will speedily find employment where you can best utilize your knowledge and skills and contribute most to the society that made possible your education.

We need the work of your hands and minds and the devotion of your hearts if our country is to grow and its citizens prosper.

Yours very truly,
Secretary of Labor
Maurice J. Tobin

(Secretary of Labor Tobin will address Carolina students next Thursday night at 8:30 in Memorial Hall.—Ed)

Express Yourself

Dear Daily Tar Heel:

We noticed in your paper that the students of the United States are quite interested in the present day struggle between democracy and Russian imperialism.

Here in Yugoslavia we are faced with Soviet armies on all sides so therefore the problem is to us very real and vivid. Our students must spend all spare time working to strengthen our forces against the aggression of Moscow.

There exists, however, in America much misunderstanding regarding Yugoslavia's government and our role in the defense of Europe. We hope you will print a few words urging American students travelling to Europe next summer to visit our country and see how we live. Lasting friendship results from mutual understanding.

Warmest Greetings
