MOREHEAD GIVES UNC MILLION

Ambassador Speaks In Hill Hall Monday

His Excellency Abba Eban, Israel's Ambassador to the United States, will speak tomorrow night at 8:30 in Hill Hall. His topic will be "World Peace Through Israel."

Ambassador Eban, who also serves as Israel's permanent delegate to the UN, attended Cambridge University and fought with the Jewish Brigade against Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in North Africa during the Second World War.

Immediately following his address, sponsored by the Carolina Forum, a representative of the Hillel Foundation will present the Ambassador with funds for the United Jewish Student Appeal donated by Jewish students at Carolina.

Ambassador Eban will be introduced by North Carolina's Lieutenant Governor Pat Taylor.

UNIVERSITY BENEFACTOR AND Alumnus John Motley Morehead is pictured at right when back in the mid 1940's he announced he was giving UNC the now-famous Morehead Building and Planetarium. It brought a broad smile to the face of Gregg Cherry, seated, governor at that time. Yesterday Morehead made another million dollar gift to the University.

Scholarships Will Be Given By Huge Grant

Winners Listed For Help Under Previous Funds

John Motley Morehead, an alumnus who likes to do things for his University, gave another million dollars for scholarships here yesterday.

Previously he had given $2,500,000 for educational aid as well as the $3,500,000 Morehead Building and Planetarium and the Morehead - Patterson Bell Tower.

Morehead was in town in connection with the announcement of the eight winners of the second annual awarding of Morehead scholarships for graduate or professional work at UNC.

Among the eight winners were three Carolina students: John Livingston Hazlehurst III, Henderson, in medicine; Edgar Love III, Lincolnton, in law; and Cornelius Theodore Patrick, Wilmington, in medicine.

Chairman Morehead and the other four foundation trustees also announced that beginning with the scholastic year, 1953-54, the scholarships also will be granted to eligible seniors or graduates of a number of North Carolina high schools and preparatory schools on the basis of qualifications to be announced later.

President Gordon Gray, commenting on the announcement said, "This is wonderful news for the University. We are extremely happy about Mr. Morehead's decision to make this additional million dollar gift as well as the decision of the trustees to make undergraduates eligible to apply for these scholarships."

Morehead is an internationally distinguished industrialist, chemist and former minister to Sweden. A native of Spray, N. C., he now lives in New York. He graduated here in 1891.

The eight successful candidates selected for scholarships were chosen through successive screening tests which began more than a month ago when some 500 applicants filed with the 14 degree-conferring North Carolina colleges eligible to nominate candidates.
