The Student Legislature may be called upon tomorrow night to decide whether or not students will be taxed up to fifty cents admission fee to attend performances of the Student Entertainment Committee.

The bill was introduced last Thursday night in the opening session of the Thirteenth Legislature and was referred to the Finance Committee for further study and consideration.

Proponents of this legislation claim this year's SEC program has been inadequate and an enriched selection of entertainment would result in the future from the increased revenue.

We hope the resolution will be soundly defeated. We fail to see why a student should be asked to reach into his pocket at the doors of Memorial Hall for the privilege of enjoying a commodity he already paid for upon matriculation.

We admit the present system of operation is far from equitable. Admission tariffs for the SEC presentations are included in the block fees (as is your yearly subscription to The Daily Tar Heel) even though the student may be undesirous of investing in such a luxury. Once the "tickets" have been involuntarily purchased, the student in theory, still faces better than a fifty percent chance of being rejected at the gate, since the seating capacity of Memorial Hall amounts to only half the number of students entitled to attend SEC performances.

We feel that a more logical approach to the problem would lie in a quest for talent more in keeping with the SEC budget and an effort to contract those entertainers with exceptional drawing appeal for a series of two consecutive night performances.

From a Massachusetts paper: "Frank Cape is at the hospital suffering from head injuries and shock caused by coming in contact with a live wife."

You might be interested in this little clipping from LIFE, April 28, 1952. I feel slighted not having been informed of the association named in the article. I feel that others might wish to be enlightened as I have been:

"Commission to jack up the duty on all manner of European products from bicycles to wood screws, Europe will get less money from the U.S. in trade and may have to ask for more in grants."

"As though the tariff situation (above) were not bad enough the U.S. tariff Commission announced that it is now investigating a complaint that imports of a certain commodity are causing "threat in injury" to domestic producers. The complaint was lodged by the National Pregnant Mares Urine Producers' Association of Farmer City, Ill., whose product yields hormones for medical use."

Over in the Institute of Government a group of students and a fellow who used to be a student here, Henry Lewis, are doing a monumental job. They are the committee appointed by Chancellor House to investigate hazing.

Within the leathery confines of Lewis' office the group is conducting scores of interviews with people who are supposed to know something about hazing on the campus. Daily the hazing probers are sifting through the memos turned into them. These memos are lists of names or alleged instances of hazing.

Thus far the group hasn't turned up much. It hasn't turned up anything to support the hysteria so rampant here last month.

Whatever the committee's report to the Chancellor may turn out to be, students should know in advance that the group is doing a thorough, efficient job.

52 From up in windy Chicago comes a report on a man who was operating a profitable draftdodging scheme.

Charles Herband, 43, a Selec-tice Service psychiatrist, will be tried in Federal Court today for accepting bribes from prospective draftees to classify them unfit for service. He allegedly took $2,657 in two and a half months. Of the 61 draftees he examined all have been reexamined and 29 classified 1-A.

Herband was classing the men as unfit for service because they were "sexual deviates."
