perialism."

He cited the cases of three French-owned ports in India, labeling them "astigmatism to the growth of our young nation." These ports, he said, are "dens of smugglers whose activities are detrimental to the country's economic progress."

Charron, instructor of French here who was born in that country, commented that the fear of Communists taking over in France's colonies in the event of their liberation was responsible to a large extent for the nation's current policies.

Regaining the floor, Amersey pointed out that the Indian ports were not colonies, but small possessions which France refused to give up. "If France is right, why doesn't it turn the problem over to the UN for solution," he suggested.

Charron's rebuttal described the ports as "like Trieste," and "a delicate situation."

Howard Finely, a Naval officer now studying here and also a panel member, rose in defense of French policy in North Africa. "It is a necessary course," he surmised.

Focusing on the Saar question, the discussion grew warmer. Germany's rearmament and the Searland's status were debated.

The third panel member, Mrs. Jeanine Van Nostrand, a member of the French Pi Delta Phi club here, spoke concerning Germany's acceptance into the European alliance. "The French people are not happy about it, but it is the lesser of two evils," she said.

After Chairman Hartung returned the discussion to a more agreeable note, the forum was adjourned. Leaving the scene one member of the audience remarked, "Now I see why they have so much trouble in the UN meetings."

AIR FORCE ROTC Cadet Sgt. J. Andrew Bell Jr., Greensboro, shakes hands with Rep. Carl Durham who presented him with the Air Force Association Silver Medal last week. The award is given each year to the outstanding cadet selected from the junior class. Also shown are John McNeely DuBose (middle), who was selected the outstanding cadet in the freshman class, and Cadet Bryan T. Watlington, captain of the rifle team.

Millions For Universities

U.S. Boosts Research

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL
NEW YORK, May 6—Although many vital research projects can be carried out only by the federal government, especially in times of emergency, the government should not be allowed to take over the job of research permanently, warns Chemical Engineering magazine.

This year the government will pay for more than half the nation's $3 billion research program. To some this means that research in this country is already half socialized.

But only about 50 percent of the research money spent by federal agencies is for work actually done in government laboratories, the magazine pointed out. The remainder is spent for work done on contract for the government; about $600 million is paid to industry, and about $185 million to universities.

While the government is paying 55 percent of the total cost of research, industry and the universities employ more than 75 percent of the nation's technical researchers, according to the magazine.

Industry, the magazine says, has an obligation to see that duplication and waste in expenditures for facilities and projects are avoided, and that research is not taken over completely by bureaucracy.
