Two Original One-Act Plays Scheduled

In conjunction with Commencement Day exercises June 2, the Playmakers will offer a free bill of two original one-act plays at 2:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. in the Playmakers Theater.

Selected for presentation are two light comedies, "Plain and Fancy" by Louise Lamont and "Marilyn, My Marilyn" by Doris Vincent. Mrs. Lamont is a junior student here, and was represented on the local stage early this year with the comedy hit "Tumkins Tarries." Vincent was studying in dramatic art last year before going into the Air Force. He is now stationed in Texas.

"Plain and Fancy" relates the comic pursuit of two maiden aunts after their boarder, an old fashioned drummer who peddles canned goods around the countryside. The drummer is a greedy gourmand, and his need for constant attention soon leads the kind old ladies to naming him "the Prince."

The second comedy, "Marilyn, My Marilyn," is the hilarious tale of two young lovers, and the near scuttling of their romance by the eccentric behavior of curious parents.

The plays are being directed, in the above order, by Richard Snively and Herman Coble, both graduate students in dramatic art. The cast will feature 11 actors.

Med Students Assist Doctors in Home Calls

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL.
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 21—A new experiment in medical education has med students visiting patients in their homes to assure development of "humanized physicians."

Dr. Kenneth E. Appel, University of Pennsylvania Medical School psychiatrist, reported recently the experiment is underway at his school and that it offers an opportunity for "the rediscovery of the patient as a person, not just a collection of diseased organs."
