

Press Club Makes Awards

The Press Club yesterday announced award recipients for prize-winning stories in The Daily Tar Heel during spring quarter.

The awards were presented to authors of the best articles in general news, sports, features and editorials. Only those stories appearing through the issue of May 18, were considered.

Grady Elmore, Rocky Mount senior, received the award for the best news story headlined "Is It Really Tito? No, Says Farber." James F. Hurley, Salisbury junior, received honorable mention for a news story on the fraternity robberies.

Sports Editor Biff Roberts received the sports award for his column "Down In Front" on Coach Robert A. Fetzer's retirement. Eddie Starnes, Alexandria Va., sophomore, won honorable mention for the story on Carolina's loss to Duke on April 19.

The editorial "Hark The Sound" on the subject of May Day by Editor Barry Farber was selected as the best editorial. A second editorial by Farber entitled Saturday's Heroes on the subject of Saturday class was awarded honorable mention.

Award for the best feature was presented to Ruth Hincks of Chapel Hill for her story on Dr. Frederick Creighton Wellman. John Jamison, Charlotte junior, won honorable mention with his feature on the interviews with four members of the Political Science Department concerning the President's seizure of the steel mills.

The judges selected a letter to the editor to receive a special award "for having displayed outstanding interest in student welfare and campus activities." The letter, written by Margheretta Eldridge, Newport, R. I., senior, called for more devotion and interest on the part of students toward their professors.

The awards board consisted of Barbara Tuttle, Julius Hubbard, and Joseph Gilchrist. After selecting the top three stories in each category, the group met with Walter Spearman of the School of Journalism for the final decision.

QUICK CURE

Latest hiccup cure, devised by a Texas woman, is sipping a brew made by boiling garlic in water and keeping a hot water bag on the abdomen day and night. Faced with these remedies, the victim probably stops hiccuping in self-defense.
