

Charles Schaffer Moves Office In Old Student Home, West House

Charles M. Schaffer, assistant to the Chancellor in the field of Development, set up shop recently in the West House, the student home built by Mr. Kenneth Tanner for his sons and other worthy students from each of the classes at UNC.

Mr. Schaffer's work at the house has to do with the Development Council proposed by President Gordon Gray in his inaugural address. His idea was to organize a council which would work towards a continuous development program for the whole State, working through the Great-er University.

"He has expressed on many occasions his ideal that the whole University at Raleigh, Greensboro and Chapel Hill should serve as the heart, brain, and hand of the whole State as it presses forward toward a healthier, wealthier, better, wiser, happier and more beautiful North Carolina," said Chancellor House.

James A. Gray of Winston-Salem is serving as chairman of the Council during the first year. Mr. Gray is a University graduate of the class of 1908.

Mr. Schaffer, who has just moved into the West House, is also a graduate of the University—B.S. in Commerce in 1935. An All-Southern Conference man of 1935, he was a star halfback during his undergraduate days. Having come to the University from the staff of Burlington Mills Corporation, he is director of the General Alumni Association and is president of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Alumni Association. He and his family have made their home in Chapel Hill.

With Mr. Schaffer in his office in West's former living room are Miss Millicent McKendry, an alumna of the University, and Mrs. Louise Hayes. Both agree that it's quite cooler and nicer there than in the library of third floor South Building where they moved from.

It seems that Mr. Tanner, who erected the house in the middle thirties for his sons and other worthy students, had quite a system in mind. There are only two large rooms in the house—a living room and a bed room with accommodations for six boys. On either side of a long hall joining these two rooms are five small study rooms, a tile bathroom, and a kitchenette. In each compact study room was space for a desk,
