Gorham And His Chums

We once heard a saying to the effect that "the girls who deserve flowers rarely get them" and we're of the opinion that this is often the case in regard to some of the hardest working people on the college campus. And since we happen to be in a position to play "florist" occasionally we'd like to send a great big bouquet to Bob Gorham and his Orientation crew who've just completed a top-rate job of breaking in the hundreds of new students just arriving in Chapel Hill.

All of us have been at one time or another new students and can well remember that feeling of being terribly green and slightly scared and how much we appreciated any friendliness and words of advice coming our way.

Also there's that well-known "first impression" to bear in mind so a well-organized and efficient Orientation program does a tremendous service both to the newcomer and to the University.

And that's just what we think Bob and his helpers have done this fall. So hats off and a peck of posies to Orientation '52.—JC

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

ABOARD PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S TRAIN.—Harry Truman has been gliding past country that he knows well, and it has been smiling at him.

Outside his train window the alfalfa fields of Utah lay green and prosperous as he passed pick-up balers, which many farmers could not afford a few years ago, leaving a trail of green bales behind them. In California stack upon stack of wheat straw dotted the fields. At Provo, a new steel mill, built by the government when private industry refused to take the risk, has brought new prosperity.

Water seems more plentiful this year, and in some areas it has been brought down from the mountains by dams and reclamation projects pioneered by the Truman or Roosevelt administrations.

Yes, the far west smiles on Harry Truman both politically and economically. It smiles but it isn't boisterous. It doesn't give him the noisy demonstrations that the crowds give Eisenhower, and the President in turn doesn't usually give them the fire-and-brimstone, skin-'em-alive oratory that Ike delivers from the rear platform. Sometimes he does, but he doesn't follow a general pattern.

However, though the crowds are big and the faces friendly you detect an undercurrent of Republicanism in these normally Democratic states.

It's hard to put your finger on, but it's there. It's there partly because the sun is smiling economically. There isn't the economic pinch that there has been sometimes. There isn't any workers' and farmers' fear of security. And in that respect, Harry Truman's reclamation, the new steel mill, the price supports perhaps may help defeat his own political ends. But perhaps more important is the desire of a change. People aren't particularly swayed by oratorical bombast on either side, and many are not at all enthusiastic about Eisenhower. And they don't know much about Stevenson, except he's a little highbrow. But above all they want a change.

John Sanders Young Democrats

A vote for Stevenson is a vote for the continuation of all these horrible "tendencies toward socialism" which have characterized the national Democratic administration for two decades—or so we were recently warned by a Republican Daily Tar Heel columnist. With an economy of fact and a generosity of generalization typical of his fellow GOP campaigners, the columnist, Dorman Cordell, paraded before us this awful, reddish spectre of doom which awaits us just beyond a Democratic victory next month.

It is regrettable that Mr. Cordell failed to specify those Democratically-sponsored programs and policies which constitute this "trend toward socialism." Nor, more importantly, does he name the men who have done these unnamed, but unquestionably evil works. So perhaps we might do some permissible guessing as to both.

Does he mean the social security program, which has brought to millions of American working people a degree of security from want they never knew before 1932? "Muley" Bob Doughton, a "radical" of the Carolina hill breed, must be blamed for that one, for he fathered most of the federal social security legislation.

Or maybe Mr. Cordell has in mind the system of farm price supports at 90% of parity, the soil conservation service, the production and marketing administration, and other such government "handouts" to the farmer. Lay these on the doorstep of Harold Cooley, whom the voters of the fourth district keep sending back to Congress, for he is largely responsible for having foisted these "socialistic" programs off on the farmer. Meanwhile the farmers, busy in the enjoyment of their new prosperity and the better life it has brought, just keep on voting for Cooley and for the brand of "socialism" he is promoting.

Very likely Mr. Cordell was referring to federal aid to education legislation, under which every American school child would be assured the best educational opportunities the nation can afford, regardless of the poverty of his state. Again a North Carolinian, Rep. Graham Barden, has been among the arch participants in this "socialistic" conspiracy.

Almost certainly our Republican friend would view with greatest alarm the federal program for development of our natural resources. The harnessing of streams which once annually ravaged their valleys, but which now flow gently into power-producing, navigable, flood controlling reservoirs must indeed be a work of evil, for it is the doing of such notorious "opponents of free-enterprise" as Rep. John Kerr.

Of course the Post Office Department and the U. S. Army have been greatly expanded under Democratic Presidents and Congresses and surely they would fit anybody's definition of socialistic enterprises, since they are totally owned, financed, and operated by the government.

If these be "socialistic policies," then the Democratic Party must bear full responsibility for them—for these and many more, from the insuring of private bank deposits to the aiding of tenant farmers to buy land for themselves. And the American people must share that responsibility, for by their votes in five successive elections they have given these policies their full endorsement.

If these be socialistic policies, then Mr. Cordell had better look to his candidate, for the Republican nominee has not only looked upon these programs and found them good, but has promised more of the same farm price supports at 100% of parity, and the extension of social security to 14,000,000 more Americans, for instance. But then, perhaps Mr. Cordell knows better than we that these promises of the Republican nominee are just promises, made with the understanding that no Republican Congress would ever carry them out. And it could be that the American people know that too, and will serve the GOP with the same bitter dish of defeat that it has earned so often before.

NONPLUS

The Battle of Sex is coming to an end.

British researchers are testing a substance called gromwell which may free mankind, spirit and body, from one of its most vicious handicaps. Gromwell, it appears, is a safe contraceptive that the female can take by mouth, causing ovulation to cease until the effect wears off.

Implications of the discovery stagger the imagination. They involve far more than just a solution to the problem of overpopulation.

For the first time in history, the sexes will enjoy equal rights in a fundamental respect. Women will be freed from the threat of having an unwanted child, perhaps to rear alone. Society will no longer have to restrict sexual activities to marriage as a safeguard against a world of bastards.

Evil from the greatest single source will evaporate when sex is brought into the open. Sexual desires will be considered natural and sexual gratification normal. Deceit, perversion and chicanery among humans will reach an all-time low.

No longer will women be mere chattels. They will be considered full-fledged humans in their own right, not as the possessions of their superior men. The hypocritical "double standard" won't discriminate against females.

Young people won't be hurried into marriage for relief from sexual frustrations. Those who consider wedlock for its higher purpose won't find their thinking warped by an accumulation of long-chained physical desires. There will be less unhappy marriages and fewer divorces.

And there'll be an increase in marriages, too. Without the exaggerated basis of current marriages, unions will be much nearer the ideal of spiritual and intellectual exchange. More people will be attracted to the matrimonial junction.

Those children who are born will be wanted. They won't face the emotional fragmentation and economic deprivation of today's broken homes.

Sex crimes will decline because the people will be mentally healthier. Venereal disease will be wiped out and white slave rings abolished. Back-room abortions and associated corruption in other fields will no longer menace us.

Our literature—books, periodicals, movies, radio, television—won't peddle bizarre distortions of sex to a depraved multitude. Who will be interested, when the real thing is at hand and approved, in the weird allusions now fed us by the mass media? Less drunkenness and thievery.
