Dorm Room Shortage Is Easing

There hasn't been much change in the dormitory housing shortage, but the turnover has been steady, James L. Wadsworth, housing officer said yesterday. "Approximately 75 men are still seeking dormitory rooms and are now residing in dorm basements," Wadsworth said.

Any room change should be made with the housing office. "In order for us to know what rooms are vacant, students should make the proper request for changes with our office," Wadsworth said. Victory Village apartments, rented only to married students, are filled.

Grad Writes Impression Of Birthday

The following was written last night for The Daily Tar Heel by Jimmy Wallace, Carolina graduate and history instructor. We are reprinting it in connection with yesterday's 15th UNC birthday celebration because of its timeless interest.—Ed.

Some of the students hastened to South Building, anxious to get a close-up view of the ceremony. Others were attracted by the band concert. Still others saw the crowd gathering and wandered over to have a look.

The usual coffee addicts found their places on the South Building steps had been pre-empted by the combined University Glee Clubs. The workmen had begun the platform at 8 o'clock. Now they were gone, and the participants in the annual Founder's Day exercises kept time with the music as they waited.

Old-timers in the faculty, veterans of many University ceremonies, dropped by to pay their respects—and stayed until the end. On the edges of the expanding crowd, and up front too, new students beginning an adventure at the University, drank in the view, bowed their heads, listened to the solemn and well-chosen words of Chancellor House, and stood in appreciative silence as the majestic Latin of Integer Vitae echoed from the walls of the quadrangle.

The spectators and the participants were all in their youth. By the calendar, some were young, some were old, but in their minds, for this briefest of moments, they were school boys. For this tiny instant, there was unity of purpose. A University, long out of its short pants, long a center of thought and learning, drew strength once again from the simplicity and dignity which surrounded its humble origins.

Designed To Prod The Reader

Students Skeptical Of Religion Prompt Law Professor's Book

Fellow students who were "discarding their religion because they thought science had shown religion to be untrue" finally led a lawyer to write a book called "You Can Believe." The lawyer is Dr. Frank W. Hanft of the University's Law School faculty. He started thinking on the matter years ago when attending the University of Minnesota.

"The central idea was simply to examine the Christian religion from the standpoint of whatever truth there was in it," said Dr. Hanft. In going about this the UNC professor discusses in various chapters "The Case for Atheism," "The Magnitude of God," "Materialism," "The Bible" and other topics designed to prod the reader into finding for himself the ultimate goal of Christianity and God.

"You Can Believe" is taken from a series of public lectures given in 1947 and 1948 by Dr. Hanft in which he tried to stimulate his audiences into "thinking and possibly digging out new truths." Seven years ago when Dr. Hanft began teaching the Young Adults' Class at the Methodist Church, he began to expound his views on religion and reality. A committee of young adults asked him for some lectures on the topic and he responded with the series which led to the writing of his book.

The Intimate Bookshop has had a large demand for its stock of "You Can Believe" and is now waiting for the arrival of its third order. Mrs. Charles A. Valentine, manager of the Bull's Head Bookshop said that its first two orders were sold or rented out almost immediately. A third order also has been placed with the publishers.

Noon Program Planned Here For UN Day

Movies, Dinner Also Featured On Anniversary

Tentative plans for an October 24 United Nations Day celebration were released yesterday by Ann Blalock, student chairman.

Included in the day-long observance of the 7th Anniversary of the United Nations will be a noon day program on the steps of South Building, showing of movies in Gerrard Hall, a birthday dinner in Lenoir Hall and a special UN exhibit in the Library and YMCA lobby.

Eleven o'clock classes will be dismissed five minutes early on UN Day and the 12 o'clock classes will begin 5 minutes late in order to have enough time for the noon program, Mrs. Blalock said.

During the noon-day program at South Building, a scroll will be presented Mayor Edwin S. Lanier by a German student. The scroll was sent to Mayor Lanier from the mayor of Goetgin. A book from the Chancellor of Goetgin University will be presented to Chancellor Robert B. House.

Movies on the United Nations and UN problems will be shown in Gerrard Hall on the hour from 9 o'clock to noon, and at 4 o'clock the same afternoon. The movies will be furnished by the extension division of the University.

The birthday dinner will get underway in Lenoir Hall at 6 o'clock. Students from nation represented at the University will be present. Education exhibits consisting of literature and flags will be shown in the Library and the Y lobby.

John Riebel, associate secretary of the YMCA, is general chairman of the program for Chapel Hill. He recently was appointed to this post by Mayor Lanier.

Other committee members include Dr. Frederick Cleveland, chairman of the noon program; Dwight Ryan, chairman of the movie program; John McLendon, chairman of the evening supper program, and Nancy Shand, chairman of the education exhibits.

Potent Pill May Control Conception

SPECIAL TO THE DAILY TAR HEEL. NEW YORK, Oct 13—A birth control pill has been developed by a Boston physician who claimed almost 100 percent success. The pill is taken after each meal.

Dr. Benjamin F. Sieve said fertility was prevented in 298 of 300 cases. He said the two couples who failed the experiment did not follow directions.

The pills were taken after each meal by both husband and wife. Dr. Sieve said that 10 days are required before the medication becomes effective. Fertility can be restored in 48 hours, he added.

Fertility is prevented by the forming of a "tissue cement" about the ovum. The pill contained phosphorylated hesperidin, a derivative of citrus fruit rinds. It may be produced at low cost.

Dr. Sieve's findings were published in a 13-page article in "Science," a technical weekly. The article cautioned that it was "too early to judge the pills as a positive contraceptive."

Jaycees Start 'Scotchlite' Safety Drive

The Jaycees have started a "Light-A-Bumper" Safety program here by setting up stations over the town to sell Scotchlite reflectorized tape strips for automobiles.

After the campaign is completed for automobiles in the town the club will put this light-red night-vision tape on all school children's bicycles free of charge. All over the country the Junior Chamber of Commerce is now carrying out this project as a combination safety and fund raising project.

In North Carolina the Jaycees have a statewide franchise for this material and started distribution of it this month. Cass Johnson, local insurance man, has been appointed chairman of the project here.

Jaycees will be on hand at service stations and grocery store parking lots over the community Saturday morning and afternoon to place the adhesive surface tape on auto bumpers—both front and rear if desired.

Scientific surveys have shown that cars having this attractive one-inch strip across their bumpers are 75 per cent easier to see at night while traveling on the highway. The non-glare reflective tape can be seen from as far away as a half mile and has been placed with the publishers.

By Dave Buckner Rep. John W. Umstead, veteran Orange County legislator, will be featured speaker for a Young Democrats Club rally here Thursday evening. The rally will be staged at 5 p.m. on the lawn in front of Graham Memorial, YDC President John Sanders said yesterday. In case of rain the site will be Gerrard Hall.

A brother of the Democratic nominee for Governor, Umstead is one of the most colorful figures in the N. C. General Assembly. From his seat in the back row of the House, the representative has been a champion of progressive legislation, notably in the field of education. He directed the 1943 battle for the nine month school term.

Known for years as a close friend and champion of the University, from which he graduated in 1908, Umstead has been a Board of Trustees member since 1939 and on the board's Executive Committee since 1946. He is also on the Executive Committee of the UNC General Alumni Association.

During his undergraduate days at Carolina, Umstead roomed with Frank Porter Graham, who was later to become first president of the Consolidated University. He has a son named after the North Carolina educator.

Umstead first went to the State legislature in 1931 as representative of the sixteenth district. In 1939 he ran again and was elected. Defeated in 1940, he returned in 1941 and has not been defeated since.

He is vice-chairman of the State Hospital Board of Control and was prominent in the drive to convert Camp Butler from a training base into a mental and alcoholic institution. Umstead also was instrumental in setting up the successful Butler Youth Center, an unguarded correction camp for youthful first offenders.
