Runoff Races Today

Wagger, Plott Hold The Key To Legislature

Woman's Council Seats Also Slated To Be Elected

By Louis Kraar The Student Party and University Party will square off again today in the campus political arena to fight for a legislative majority as runoff candidates Gerry Wagger (UP) and Frank Plott (SP) vie for votes in Men's Dormitory District IV.

Student Party legislators number 25, including two double endorsed and one independent candidate who lean toward SP, while UP has 24 legislators, counting five double endorsed candidates who are UP inclined.

Today's political clash between Plott and Wagger will decide whether SP has a legislative majority or whether both parties will have the same number of legislators. If Plott wins, SP will have a majority of two and if Wagger wins, UP will have the same number as its opposition.

Residents of Mangum, Manly, Emerson Stadium, Joyner, Grimes and Ruffin Dormitories will make the decision. As expected, both candidates have been given an extra push by their respective parties.

Wagger (UP) is a senior from High Point. He has served on the Committee to investigate presidential appointments and the Committee to appear before Chancellor House to request social dorm rooms. He said yesterday, "As an incumbent legislator, I would like to thank those who have supported me this past year. I have always voted the way I wanted to in the Legislature and will continue to do so if reelected."

Plott (SP) is a freshman from Charlotte. He attended Central High School and was active in the band, orchestra, and dramatics group. Plott plans to study law. He stated yesterday, "In addition to the fact that I've pledged full support of the Student Party in the coming Legislature session, I feel that this particular race holds the key to the balance of power. It is important for it would break the deadlock and provide the opportunity to really accomplish something in the Legislature."

A native of Durham, Brame has been head of the North Carolina Junior Chamber for the past year. The young Durham businessman is not only head of the Brame Specialty Company but also travels extensively while administering Jaycee policies.

He will address local business administration students on the necessity of taking an active part in community affairs as well as business activities.

East And West

Thanks to a responsive student body, international students here will be able to ride to the North Carolina homes in which they're going to spend the Thanksgiving holidays.

However, yesterday came a plea from the Y for two more rides. Rides are needed for two people to Asheville and one to Clinton. Contact the Y if you are interested in a Good Turn for the day.

CARMAN NAHM IS PICTURED as police found her Thursday night on the floor of her room, dead of poisoning. Yesterday, police announced the arrest of Yackety Yack beauty Virginia Wilson in connection with the murder. Neither the "dead" Miss Nahm nor the "suspected" Miss Wilson had any worries, however, as it's all staged for a mock trial.—Daily Tar Heel photo by Cornell Wright.

Yack Coed Beauty Is 'Murder' Suspect

Police yesterday announced the arrest of newly elected Yack beauty Virginia Wilson as the suspected murderer of Carman Nahm. Miss Wilson was taken into custody last night while she was having dinner at the Chi Omega Sorority House on West Franklin Street.

The arrest resulted from investigation of circumstances surrounding the recent poisoning of Miss Nahm. Police, cooperating with Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity in staging its annual mock trial, said Miss Wilson, who was on permanent probation, was due to appear before the Woman's Council last Friday because of charges made by Miss Nahm, chairman. Testimony by Miss Nahm probably would have meant expulsion from the University. Police also said the suspect had attempted to make purchases of poison.

Solicitor Harry Faggart of PAD said that other "conclusive" evidence was in his hands, but declined to comment further on the nature of the evidence.

Miss Wilson refused to make any statement before consulting her attorney, Roger Hendrix. Hendrix was unavailable immediately following the arrest. The suspect was released under bond pending a hearing before the grand jury.

Miss Nahm was found by her roommate lying on the floor of her room last Thursday night. Worried dorm residents soon were reassured, however, that it was only the legal fraternity's staged incident for its annual mock trial.

See Trustees Over Holidays, Horton Urges

Personal Contact Might Be Helpful For 'Big Push'

The fight against Saturday classes was renewed yesterday as student government officials planned what President Iam Horton termed "the big push over the Thanksgiving holidays."

"We want to wage a quiet, personal, man-to-man campaign which in the long run will be more effective," said Horton in outlining the campaign.

The plan, which is being monitored by student government officials is this:

Over the Thanksgiving holidays every student should plan to pay a visit or write a letter to the trustee in his locality. Before doing this, the student should check by Horton's office in Graham Memorial and tell workers there which Trustee he plans to see. In this way, all the Trustees will be seen and not too many students will go to any one.

A detailed file on each Trustee, the number of students who are going to see him, and the Trustee's reactions are going to be kept.

Horton emphasized the importance of tact and politeness when (See TRUSTEES, page 4)

Last Chance

Tomorrow is the last day students may preregister for the Winter Quarter.

Green forms must be turned in the office at Archer House, before students leave for the Thanksgiving holidays.

2nd Trustee Against Extra Day Of Class

Another member of the Trustee Executive Committee, Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture A. Hugh Harris, joined students yesterday in protest against Saturday classes at the University.

"I'm not only against Saturday classes at Carolina," Harris said in a telephone interview yesterday, "but oppose them at State too."

Cuts To Cost $2.50 Each For Holiday

If you're thinking about cutting class before or after the Thanksgiving holidays, you better reconsider. At least, that's the word from Central Records Office.

For each class cut taken tomorrow, the day before Thanksgiving, students will be required to pay $2.50. The same applies for cuts taken on Monday, the day holidays officially end.

There is one consolation, however. The maximum fine for cutting classes before or after holidays is $7.50. Even if you cut both days, you won't be fined over $7.50.

The fine for holiday cuts is a standard policy for undergraduates who are absent before and after holidays. Instructors are required to call the roll, Central Records officials said.

Officials added one more note. Deans of the various schools will not accept excuses for flat tires, broken-down cars, and missed trains or planes.

Hugh Harris, Agriculture Official, Joins With Umstead And Students

tend the meeting of the Executive Committee earlier this month at which Saturday classes was voted, said he called President Gordon Gray to offer his vote by proxy against the extra class day.

"Please be assured that I will continue this attitude and will never weaken on my stand in this connection. Should you have the opportunity, I will be glad for you to inform the officials of your student organization of my feelings," he declared in a letter to Watts A. Scott, a disabled veteran friend who attends the University.

Scott, who has a wife and two children, is one of the many students here who depends upon outside work to finance his education. He was one of the first to air his protests on the wire recordings made by student government officials. "Please be assured that I am first, last and always opposed to a five and one-half day week for any of our State educational institutions and will continue to register my protest if and when I have the opportunity, Harris asserted.

He concluded, "It is my humble opinion that the adoption of a five and one-half day week is setting our great University back at least twenty-five years. We have a most progressive administration at the University now, and in my opinion, a move of this kind would be tragic both to personnel and students."

J. W. Umstead, brother of the governor-elect and local insurance agent, is the other Executive Committee member who has come out against Saturday classes.

Wilson Visits Texas, Talks Of Money

"You can't pay and keep a top-notch faculty with only pleasant atmosphere," UNC Vice-president Logan Wilson told a Daily Texan reporter last week at Austin, Tex.

The president-elect of the University of Texas, on a two-day orientation trip, said that "Feeding his family is more important to a professor than any sense of loyalty to a university."

In discussing low salaries of University of Texas professors, Wilson said, "Professors resign every day from low pay at small colleges as well as large universities." But the University of Texas should at least be able to compete with salaries of other universities, he said.

A full professor's salary at Texas ranks 13th from the top when compared with other universities in the United States. Associate and assistant professors' salaries are 15th from the top and instructors' salaries rank 11th, the Texas campus daily said.

Gov. Scott Gets Praise In SSL Bill

By Jody Levey DAILY TAR HEEL News Editor RALEIGH, Nov. 24 — Carolina delegates Bob Pace and Dale Ryan introduced a resolution commending Gov. W. Kerr Scott that was carried by both houses of the State Student Legislature Saturday.

The resolution was adopted as one of the last orders of business as delegates from 25 Tar Heel colleges wound up their three-day mock legislature.

Praising Scott, the resolution urged him "to seek election to the United States Senate in 1954."

Other bills passed in the assembly include measures for a new salary schedule for public school teachers in North Carolina, introduced by Julian Mason, UNC; the admission of Alaska as a state; a uniform married law for the nation; driver education in (See SCOTT, page 4)

Jesus Christ Only A Man?

Just A Lot Of Fuss, Weigle Says Of Ruckus On New Bible

Special to THE DAILY TAR HEEL. NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 24 —The scholar who directed preparation of the new Bible said today that Rev. M. L. Hux of Rocky Mount, N. C. was making an unnecessary fuss over only one word in the scriptures.

Dr. Luther A. Weigle, dean emeritus of the Yale University Divinity School, said the members and minister of the Temple Baptist Church at Rocky Mount actually were "hollering over a mistake made in the old edition of the Bible and corrected in the new one. Dr. Weigle recently spoke at the University of North Carolina.

Rev. Hux has attacked the new Revised Standard Version of the Bible as denying the deity of Jesus Christ and His virgin birth.

The minister, speaking at a mass meeting of 100 people protesting the new Bible, said, "I hope God Almighty will use this wedge (the Bible) to split the churches and separate the remnants of the Godfearing people from the modernists."

In explaining what he called the denial of Christ's deity, Rev. Hux pointed out that the "rule of the translators" in the new version is that "thee" and "thou" are used only in referring to God. He said that pronouns, such as "you" and "your" which refer to mere men, are used in reference to Christ. He said that this indicates "Jesus Christ is a man and not God incarnated."

The minister claimed that the basic difference in the two Bibles can be illustrated by a passage in Isaiah. He stated that the translators have eliminated the virgin birth from the Revised Standard Version by replacing the word "virgin" with "young woman."

"If the translators' version is true, Jesus Christ is a mere man born of a woman. If Jesus Christ is just a man, we might as well throw our Bibles away," he said.
