Working Chorus

Volunteers In Graham Sing, Seal

The magnetic Christmas music of singing students in an upstairs room of Graham Memorial recently attracted over 30 onlookers who stayed to harmonize with the chorus of workers.

Jerry Campbell, Alpha Phi Omega president, watched the group that joined the service fraternity in preparing Christmas seals for the mails and remarked with a laugh, "It's great. Everyone that stops by stays to help us get these seals out." The last words of his sentence competed with the loud voices.

"I just came up to pop some pop corn," said coed Shirley Gee, looking up over the mountain of white envelopes decorated with Santa samplings. "But I'm sure glad that I stayed," she managed "Jingle Bells."

To shout above the strains of Lynn Chandler, who "just came up to get a drink of water," was stuffing the Yule stickers into an envelope and bellowing a tune in a husky alto voice. Tish Rodman, a late comer, added a few more tunes to the group's repertoire and a big hand to the work.

Workers representing Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity, Alpha Gamma sorority, dorm dwellers and almost all other campus groups, participated in the singing work session.—LK.

U. N. Model Assembly Is Planned Here

Organizing Meets Will Be Conducted In Winter Quarter

A model United Nations Assembly will be organized here after Christmas to give students the opportunity to study problems facing the UN, John Faust said yesterday.

Faust, who is chairman of the YMCA Committee on the United Nations, said all campus organizations will be asked to have delegations to the assembly.

Individual students wishing to participate in the organization are asked to attend planning meetings which will take place weekly next quarter. At these meetings all the particulars of the model assembly will be worked out. Students to represent each country will be selected from among those interested. Such model assemblies have been held in different schools around the country, but this will be the first program of its type in this area, Faust said.

Actual sessions of the model assembly will not begin until Spring Quarter. All available information will be obtained from the UN so that sessions will run as true to form as possible with actual problems being discussed. Other members of the original forming group are Sue Fink, Judy Alexander and Purabi Bose.

"It is hoped," Faust said, "that all students interested in the work of the United Nations will take part and that such a program as this will become an annual attraction on the University campus."

Faust said further information may be obtained by writing Miss Alexander, Box 310, McIver Dormitory.

Yule Pageant To Be Given On Saturday

An original 16th century German Christmas play, spoken and sung in German, will be presented by the German and Music Departments in the University tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the Playmakers Theater. The play, which deals with the story of the Nativity, will include numerous old German Christmas carols which will be sung by soloists and a chorus. A musical background will be furnished by a string orchestra under the direction of Edgar Alden of the Music Department.

The production is under the direction of Herbert W. Reichert of the German Department, assisted by the instructional staff.

Reichert said the presentation is "an attempt to bring to Chapel Hill one of the most colorful aspects of the German Christmas tradition, and at the same time provide a means of developing a facility in beginning students of German for the spoken language."

Only beginning students in German were selected for the roles.

The leading roles will be played by Jean Herring, Winston-Salem, as Mary; Wade Williams, Savannah, Ga., as Joseph; the Rev. Joel Savall, Chapel Hill, as Gabriel, and Joe Sturdevant, Cary, as the innkeeper.

A Fatal Game Of Cops And Robbers

Korean Vets Divided On Way To End War; All For A-Bomb

By Rolfe Neill and Elaine Gibson

The guys who've been there are tired of "a game of cops and robbers that leaves people dead. Let's get it over with."

The GI's who served their time peaceably want it settled "with the peace talks. War is the worst thing we can have."

However, the vets all are agreed that an ultimatum should be delivered to the Reds—signed and glued with atomic power. If the Communists won't settle without it, drop the bomb, the vets say.

After 15 months in Korea, Pete Moore said, "I know what they're going through. If we're going to try to settle it verbally, I definitely think our men over there should have more authority in their peace talking. This lack of authority in the cease-fire talks, I think, is the cause of the stalemate."

"I do not know whether the fault lies in the UN or NATO, but I do approve of agreement through authority—or else."

James McNeill, who put in a year in Germany, said, "I'm for settling it by any peaceable means . . . I have no end-all solution for the Korean situation, but I am frankly against all-out war."

Another veteran (there are now 98 in school on the Korean GI Bill), Archie Barksdale, talked of NATO, the mutual security organization set up in Europe by the West.

"We've got NATO, the UN and another section which comes under NATO which is called MD AP," he said. "Out of these organizations, it seems to me we should be able to gain enough strength to act with some authority over there. I think that an ultimatum should be issued to the Chinese Communists in North Korea with the A-bomb influencing their acceptance or denial of our ultimatum."

If they don't accept, he added, it's the "or else."

Both positions were summed up in the opinion of Frank Lukiski: "I am for authority backed by a strong display of action. It is time matters were settled."

Meanwhile yesterday, the dirty war on the dirty peninsula went on as 3,000 Communists succeeded in taking the crest of Little Nori Hill. Korea.

Conference Meeting Is Today At Clemson

Jones Resignation Not Best Solution

Presbyterian Outlook, widely read but unofficial church magazine, declared editorially yesterday that the "forced resignation" of the Rev. Charles M. Jones, Presbyterian pastor here, was not the "wisest solution" of problems confronting the church.

The magazine also pointed out that the Judicial Commission which recently issued a report on the church was not empowered to dismiss the pastor or officers, but was told to "investigate thoroughly the total situation in the Chapel Hill church and to report back to the Orange Presbytery."

The commission evidently realized this at last Sunday's meeting when it accepted a counter proposal from the church officers to hold election of officers soon. The commission had asked that all the officers resign. Commenting on the report, the Outlook noted that the findings would be true of practically any other church in the Presbytery. The magazine also observed, "Take the statement that being a Christian is more important than being a Presbyterian which the commission looks upon as being the crux of the matter. We should like to think that all Presbyterian ministers might be guilty of the same charge."

The magazine questioned why the Orange Presbytery had not taken action on "irregularities," which have "marked the life of this congregation for many years, before this time." The magazine also urged that the Presbytery establish a second Presbyterian church here to create a place of worship for those not satisfied with the present one.

Selden Reads Dickens Tale Sunday Night

Samuel Selden, chairman of the Dramatic Art Department and Playmakers director, will give his annual reading of Dickens' famous "A Christmas Carol" Sunday at 8 p. m.

The reading will be given in the Playmakers Theater.

Selden has made this an annual reading for Chapel Hill and University audiences since 1944, following the tradition set by the late Prof. Frederick H. Koch, founder of the Playmakers. Koch read the classic to audiences from 1918 until his death in 1944. Koch gave a total of 278 readings in all sections of the country.

A feature of the traditional program will be the singing of familiar Christmas carols by a 100-voice children's chorus under the direction of Mrs. Jan Philip Schinhan and Mrs. John Newell of the Chapel Hill public schools. The chorus will be accompanied by piano and organ.

Special stage decorations will be designed and executed by William I. Long, technical director of the Playmakers.

Prior to the reading, Chapel Hill and University residents will be given an opportunity to contribute to the Orange County Empty Stocking Fund, sponsored by the Chapel Hill Junior Service League.

Congregation Will Decide About Jones

The Presbyterian Church congregation will meet Sunday to act on a recommendation to "express confidence" in the Rev. Charles M. Jones, pastor.

Mr. Jones has been asked to resign by the Judicial Commission of the Orange Presbytery. The commission presented its case last Sunday.

In a resolution suggested for adoption at this meeting, a group of members of the church say, "We deplore what seem to us unsupported assumptions and unjustified conclusions in the Commission's report . . . we deplore the commission's belief that the welfare of the church and the glory of God can be served by depriving us of the leadership under which we have grown in the grace and knowledge of our Lord . . . We urge that representatives of the Presbytery and of the church seek a constructive solution of the present situation."

In reporting to the congregation last Sunday, the commission issued a request that if Jones (See CONGREGATION, page 5)

Biggest Items Not Included For Discussion

Issue Of Bowls Looms As Tough Confab Question

Special To The Daily Tar Heel. CLEMSON, S. C., Dec. 11 — The annual Southern Conference Winter meeting opens here tomorrow and its foremost problems are not even listed on the agenda.

Among prickly issues likely to be raised are bowl games, eligibility of freshmen on varsity teams, and a possible breakup of the 17-member conference.

Duke has submitted a proposal of control for the grants-in-aid worry that has confronted the conference and speculation has it that it will be accepted.

The solution is patterned somewhat after the one used in the Southeastern Conference. If it passes, then an athlete who after graduation from high school or prep school has agreed in writing to accept financial aid from one SC school, would be ineligible to compete at any other member school under grants-in-aid.

The proposal is an attempt to curb bidding among the conference schools for outstanding high school athletes.

After the 1952-53 school year freshmen will not be allowed to compete on varsity teams and discussion as to whether or not the rule will be put in effect during the next year will probably be brought up.

Most of the college presidents in the conference are on record as being opposed to allowing the frosh to compete on varsity teams again, but the small-school members of the conference claim that they cannot operate unless freshmen are allowed to play.

The bowl question will undoubtedly be discussed but it is doubtful whether any change will be made in the present SC stand on the matter.

Last year the conference ruled against accepting bowl bids and Maryland and Clemson were both put on a year's suspension for playing in the Sugar and Gator Bowls. Since that time many of the members have altered or reversed their stands on the situation.

President Gordon Gray of North Carolina, a staunch leader in the ban drive last winter, has altered his position on enforcement somewhat and now is in favor of the member schools "letting their conscience be their guides."

The final problem which may be brought before the members concerns the splitting of the unwieldy 17-member conference into two more workable groups, not an entirely new idea.

Previous attempts at the same idea have gone little past the discussion stage but there is a feeling here that more positive action may be taken during this meeting with a strong possibility of a committee being set up to study the problem and to report back at the annual spring meeting.

Carolina is being represented at the meeting by Chancellor Robert B. House.
