UNC Man Builds His Telescope

By Jim Wilkinson

Few people cared that last Friday's eclipse of the moon was obscured by clouds. To Bill Beard, it was just short of catastrophic.

Bill is probably Chapel Hill's most avid amateur astronomer. With the aid of his home-made telescope he directs his attentions heavenward every chance he gets.

According to Bill, a chemistry major from St. George, S. C., his interest in astronomy started several years ago when he happened upon a book on the constellations. Like some people take to memorizing limericks, Bill took to memorizing these heavenly formations, about 60 of them he estimates.

His interest aroused, he learned that it was possible to construct his own telescope. With a set of plans under one arm and a "pile of junk" under the other, his work began. Still in high school, he completed the telescope in 1950 in a somewhat cruder form than it is now.

Using assorted nuts, bolts and salvaged stove pipes as his chief ingredients, he constructed the apparatus for approximately $30. This included the cost of the mirror kit and the expense of sending the glass to New York for polishing.

Bill can get up to 145 magnifications on his telescope. That is enough to see the moon's craters, the ring around Saturn and various other Celestial landmarks.

There are two other eyepieces of 25 and 35 magnifications. These are better for viewing such objects as the double cluster in Perseus, one of his favorites. That, explained Bill, is the only double cluster in the heavens and gives an astronomer double his money's worth.

When this writer visited Bill in his room at Old West, his silver painted brain-child was standing in the middle of the floor, mounted on a permanent tripod.

It's pretty convenient, I remarked, that you can just poke the nose out the window and observe from here.

Winning at such an unscientific approach, he explained that the instrument had to be taken out into the open because the indoor temperature affected it to such a degree that vision was blurred. Therefore, his "observatory" is anywhere on the campus that best suits the purpose.

Last Friday, Bill lugged his 50-pound telescope over to Emerson Field and prepared to observe the eclipse. Twice before he had missed the phenomena, once because his glass was in New York being aluminumized and again because he was out of town.

This time he was ready. But so were the clouds. Almost spitefully, they drifted in just in time for the eclipse and moved on when the show was over. Science marches on!

Mrs. Roosevelt Talks Tonight Will Address Coeds At 4:30 This Afternoon

Evening's Speech Set At 8 O'Clock In Memorial Hall

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, past United Nations delegate and once first lady of the land, will conclude her North Carolina speaking tour tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial Hall.

The former United States representative to the UN spoke last night to a Duke University audience. She will spend the early part of today at Woman's College in Greensboro, driving to UNC this afternoon.

University officials and members of the Carolina Forum will greet Mrs. Roosevelt at the Carolina Inn prior to her talk to the coeds at 4:30 in Hill Hall. She will tell of her experiences in the White House this special meeting sponsored by the Valkyries.

Seats in Hill Hall will be held for women students until 4:15. After that time seats will be available to all interested women.

This is the second convocation for women which Mrs. Roosevelt has given in Hill Hall. The first was on February 2, 1950 when her address was sponsored by the Coed Senate. At that time she was in Chapel Hill to deliver the annual Weil lectures on citizenship.

Mrs. Roosevelt's schedule today includes a 6:15 press conference and a 6:30 dinner in her honor at the Carolina Inn. University officials, faculty and a number of students will attend the dinner sponsored by the forum.

U. S. in the United Nations" will be given in Memorial Hall. A period of questions and answers will follow the main talk. Members of the Alpha Pi Omega, service fraternity, will serve as ushers for the evening.

The program will be broadcast over WUNC and tape recorded for further use by WCHL. Plans include a reception in Graham Memorial at the conclusion of the meeting.

The world-known woman diplomat was chairman of the Human Rights Commission of the UN, holding the post until recently. She has become famous for her part in drawing up the Human Rights Covenant.

Mrs. Roosevelt has established also a reputation as an author through her several accounts of public and private life, much of it in the White House.

The Carolina Forum is sponsoring her University talks and visit.

February Doings

The new edition of the SUAB Activities Calendar is being distributed today.

The calendar gives the dates and times of all important events occurring at UNC during February. It includes YM and YWCA meetings, basketball games, forums and organizational meets.

Gray Will Request Increase In Budget

Gordon Gray goes before a Legislature budget committee at 2 o'clock today in Raleigh to ask for an increase in the University's appropriation for the biennium 1953-1955.

The Consolidated University president is expected to request more funds in the areas of permanent improvement and maintenance of physical facilities. The Advisory Budget Commission has recommended that the Legislature spend $6,646, 576 on the University at Chapel Hill during the 2-year period. This is almost entirely for operations.

This figure includes only $400,000 for permanent improvements at the Chapel Hill branch, out of $5,665,000 originally requested.

The Advisory Budget Commission also refused to recommend renewal of the salaries of three development officers in the University. Gray will almost certainly ask that these salaries be restored. His development program has received much praise from educators.

Gray appeared before the same committee last Wednesday to ask for an increase in the appropriation to the Experimental Station, a sub-division of State College.

Shorter Hours Are Scheduled By Bus Station

H. C. Pearce, manager of the local bus station, said yesterday that effective Monday the station will close at 8 p.m. four days a week.

This schedule will be in effect Monday through Thursday. The old schedule of a 10 p.m. closing time will operate on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Pearce said. The station will continue to open at 7 a.m.

Pearce said the shorter hours are made necessary by a decline in business in the evening. He said the station is not making enough money to meet its expenses at the late evening hours.

For those who come in after the station has closed, the outside lights will be kept on and there is an outside phone on which to call a taxi, Pearce noted.

Pearce said bus schedules will remain the same and people who ride busses after closing hours can still meet them at the station.

Canasta-Bridge Party Planned Next Wednesday

Chapel Hill's American Legion Auxiliary will hold a benefit bridge-canasta party next Wednesday at 7:45 p.m. in the Main Lounge of Graham Memorial. Admission is 75 cents a person and $3 a table. Money goes to the various Auxiliary benefits. Everyone is invited.

The Prince Remembered, Too

Playmakers' Musical Recalls Counterpart Of 20 Years Ago

By Betty Johnson

"Ida was a twelvemonth old, Twenty years ago!
I was twice her age, I'm told, Twenty years ago!"

As Prince Hilarion remembers his childhood betrothal to Princess Ida, history repeats itself.

On Feb. 2, 20 years ago, the curtains parted on the first musical produced by the Carolina Playmakers—"Princess Ida." Directed by Harry Davis, who staged "The Inspector General" this season, the cast featured Foster Fitz-Simons as King Gama, with Samuel Selden as associate and technical director.

Twenty years ago, The Daily Tar Heel called this production a "triumph of spontaneity, polish and casual wit, with an extraordinary measure of brilliance." Twenty years ago, "Princess Ida" was something new, the first Gilbert and Sullivan attempted by (See PRINCESS, page 2)

Library Shows Early Conflict 'On Drinking'

The first in a series of displays sponsored by the English Club is located in the west wing of the Library.

The current exhibition employs rare books, manuscripts and contemporary illustrations to demonstrate the conflicting views of Addison and Steele "On Drinking." Their disagreement on this point is symptomatic of a basic personality difference which is often apparent in their writings.

The display, which was prepared by members of the English Club under the supervision of John Schnorrenberg, contains many interesting literary items.

Prof. Richmond P. Bond has loaned a volume containing the complete run of the "Tatler" in its original sheets and a volume from the first collected edition (1714) of the "Spectator."

Also on display is a manuscript letter to Mrs. Steele: "Dear Prue, Sober or not I am ever yours, Richard Steele."

NEWS IN BRIEF

LONDON — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden announced yesterday that the British government has protested to the United States against President Eisenhower's decision to denaturalize Formosa. Eden made the announcement in the House of Commons shortly after Secretary of State John Foster Dulles arrived here from Paris on his fact-finding tour of Europe. It was indicated that British anxiety over the President's go-ahead signal to the Chinese Nationalists to raid the Communist-held mainland would take precedence over European issues in Dulles' talks here.

AMSTERDAM — Known dead in the storm and flood disaster in three countries passed the 1,500 mark yesterday. In Holland alone 50,000 persons faced resettlement in new homes. The damage from salt water to nearly a million acres of flooded land was reckoned in uncalculated millions of dollars. The sea waters were slowly receding in Britain, but distress calls still came in from isolated villages in Holland.

DURHAM—Authoritative sources reported late yesterday afternoon that Duke University's James Wesley (Red) Smith and three other outstanding athletes have been suspended from school for "scholastic misconduct." Eight students in all were involved in the action, which was recommended by the Students' Judiciary Board, it was reported. In addition to Red Smith, the athletes believed involved are George Carso nLeach, Truett A. Grant, and Christian LaCaruba, all of whom starred on the Duke football team last fall. The names of the other four students were not available. (See NEWS BRIEFS, page 2)

Carolina Leads In Aid To Big 4 Non-Athletes

Comparative figures reveal that UNC offers more non-athletic scholarship aid to its students than either Duke or State College.

Carolina ranks second in its amount of aid to athletes, falling behind Duke.

Marine Corps' Officer School Seeking Men

The Marine Corp's first 1953 office candidate course will begin March 12, Marine Corps Headquarters said yesterday.

College graduates who successfully complete the 10 week course will be commissioned as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps Reserve, at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va. Applications must be submitted by Feb. 20.

College graduates and seniors scheduled to graduate by March 1 are eligible for enrollment in this course. Upon successful completion of the 10 weeks training, the new second lieutenants will attend the five months special basic course which is required of all newly-commissioned Marine officers. They are then given their first land, sea, or (See MARINE, page 2)

Free Room

A student willing to work about 30 or 40 minutes a morning can get a free room for his services.

The work would be done between 8 and 9 a.m. each day. Those interested may obtain further information from the Dean of Students office or the Student Aid office, both located in South Building. The room is within 5 minutes walking distance of the campus.

The only Big Four school which has not bared its financial setup for scholarships is Wake Forest. The Deacons have not made an announcement whether they would or not, but have been called on to do so by several of the state's leading newspapers.

Duke made its grants public after State published its list. Both State and UNC were ordered by the Trustees to compile the scholarship information while Duke did so on its own initiative.
