BA's Fair Goes Into Final Day

The third annual Business Fair, sponsored by Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional fraternity in business administration, opened yesterday with "Personnel: Key to Business Success" as its theme.

Feature of Monday's program was an address by R. D. Warwick, general manager of the Statesville Chamber of Commerce and president of the North Carolina Association of Chamber of Commerce Executives. His subject was "Tar Heel Jobs for Tar Heel Graduates."

Tonight's program in Gerrard Hall will be a panel discussion on "Industry Reports to the Students." With Prof. Harry D. Wolf of the School of Business Administration faculty as moderator, the participants will be W. S. Lupo, Charlotte, general manager of Sears; Paul Kelly, Raleigh, member of the commerce and industry division of the State Department of Conservation and Development, and State Senator O. Arthur Kirkman, vice-president of the High Point, Thomasville and Denton Railroad Company and former mayor of High Point.

During the two-day fair, exhibits arranged by the student members of Alpha Kappa Psi in the lobby of the School of Business Administration building. Some 20 North Carolina industries and corporations have cooperated in contributing articles for exhibition.

On hand during the fair will be interviewers from several corporations and companies who will explain their exhibits and discuss employment possibilities with students.

The fair is being held in the School of Business Administration and will close tonight.

DR. W. S. NEWMAN

Newman To Give Piano Recital Tonight

Dr. William S. Newman, professor of music in the University will give a piano recital in Hill Hall tonight at 8:30. There will be no admission charge and the public is invited.

Head of the piano department and teacher of music history and appreciation courses, Dr. Newman is noted not only as a concert pianist and teacher, but is also well known as author of books in the field of piano literature and pedagogy. His latest book, a new approach to music appreciation, will appear this spring.

Following his program tonight, Dr. Newman will begin a series of recitals and lectures that will take him to a number of colleges and universities in near-by southern states.

His program here will include Beethoven's last piano sonata, Op. III in C minor, the Franck "Prelude, Choral and Fugue," and the Concerto in G major by Maurice Ravel. In the last selection, he will be accompanied at a second piano by Thomas Nicholas, also a member of the piano faculty.

Scholarship Nominees Here; Fetzer Steers Big Program

By Jim Wilkinson
Tomorrow the Morehead Scholarships for 1953-'54 will be announced. It will be a climactic day for all those who during the past year have served on the various committees of the scholarship program.

For one man in particular it marks, simultaneously, the end of one phase and the beginning of another. Coach Bob Fetzer, executive secretary of the Morehead Foundation, has guided the program through each stage from the procurement of applications to their final judging by the foundation trustees.

Fetzer, however, likes to direct credit for the success of the program toward the men who have composed the interviewing, screening and selection bodies throughout the state. These committees include top business and professional men in North Carolina.

"They are busy folks," commented Fetzer in an interview, "and the kind of devotion they have shown from the standpoint of time, interest and enthusiasm... couldn't be bought."

He spoke of the numerous letters in which these men express the satisfaction that comes from being a part of this enterprise. One such letter comes from General Robert L. Eichelberger, former superintendent of West Point and famous wartime leader, who said that the experience had "raised my hopes in the future of America." General Eichelberger serves on the sixth district committee.

Fetzer is best known throughout the South and the nation for his impressive achievements as Director of Athletics at UNC for 20 years. Last year he was asked to head the scholarship foundation and accepted.

When asked if it wasn't difficult to give up his coaching, he replied that of course athletics had been his life. But he pointed out that his position as executive secretary of the foundation is a continuation of "what I have done all my life—work with boys."

"This opportunity was a great challenge. It is almost impossible to visualize the potential effects of a program of this kind."

The organization of the foundation is necessarily a broad one. There are committees in each of the six state districts that receive and review applications, 100 such County Committees, a Central Committee, and finally the scholarship trustee board. But there is no overlapping; each has a distinct and specific role.

Coach Bob's office in the Morehead building is the hub around which these activities revolve.

"It has to be a broad organization," maintains Fetzer. "While we are thinking about today, we are also aiming and planning for the future. As the endowment grows, so will the program."

The scholarship is relatively new, and one important aspect of Coach Fetzer's job has been presenting its operation and mission to the heads of the state's educational institutions. In October he began a tour which carried him to private schools, junior and senior colleges, and universities where he answered questions concerning the program.

This is the first year that undergraduate scholarships were considered. Therefore it was necessary to get this information to all the high schools. To accomplish this, a meeting of the committees from the 100 counties was held here in August. The representatives carried word of the proceedings back to the high schools in their counties.

"The idea," says Coach Fetzer, "is to have a boy start thinking about the scholarship early. It would encourage him to do his best in high school."

"There has been exceptionally good response (from applicants) and we have the cream of the crop." He explained that the very generous terms of the allowance (See SCHOLARSHIPS, page 4)

Carolina Takes Ninth Place In National Talk

The University Debate Team talked its way into ninth place Saturday, as the Boston University National Intercollegiate Debate Tournament came to a close.

Ken Myers and Bill Zuckerman, representing Carolina, the only southern school, ranked ninth in the nation after two days of competition with Champlain, Tufts, West Point, Notre Dame, Princeton and 26 other northern and New England colleges.

Carolina compiled over 300 points in the six rounds of debate, in which they alternated between the affirmative and the negative side of the question, "Resolved: That the Congress of the United States should enact a Compulsory Fair Employment Practices Law."

The team was accompanied by its coach, Norman Mattis of the Department of Speech. The debates took place at Boston University.

Original oratory and oral interpretation contests were also included in the tournament, but Carolina did not enter these events. A banquet was held Saturday evening, at which the winning teams received trophies. The top ranking colleges were George Washington, Dartmouth, Wesleyan and Princeton. The top 10 teams received Certificates of Merit for outstanding debate.

Myers attended the Boston tournament last year, while this marked the first national contest for Zuckerman.

The Debate Council is planning two more trips this year, one to Atlanta for the All Southern Intercollegiate Tourney, and the other to Greenville, S. C. for a regional tournament. Try-outs, which are open to all undergraduates, will be announced.

Tri-Delts Make Mass Exodus Amid Confusion, Painting, Noise

By Sally Schindel
"Where do these tables go?" "Has anyone seen the other half of my bed?"

Amidst confusion, painting and hammering, the Tri-Delts moved into their new home Saturday on Pittsboro St. after almost a year of waiting.

The exodus from the "old" house began Friday afternoon when Tri-Delts, aided by "volunteers," moved over clothes, dishes, tables and chairs either by way of loaned cars, trucks or by foot. It ended Saturday with a flurry of waxing floors, scraping paint and unloading the remaining furniture.

Freshly painted sea gray, the Fifty-seven eager young men arrived in Chapel Hill yesterday to keep a vital appointment.

Theirs is a date with the final approving authority of the John Motley Morehead scholarships, which could mean $1,500 a year for a graduate student and $1,250 for an undergraduate.

The group comes from points scattered all over North Carolina. Fourteen are now attending a university or college, including three at UNC. Seven come from junior colleges and 36 from high schools.

The applicants appeared first before the Central Committee of the Morehead Foundation, which will make recommendations to the trustees of the foundation.

The trustees, with a complete background record of the student for reference, will interview each applicant recommended by the Central Committee. Their selections will be final and the nominee will know by tomorrow afternoon if his scholarship has been approved.

The number of scholarships to be awarded is not predetermined. For instance, if none of the applicants measures up to the qualifications considered necessary, the trustees are not bound to make any awards.

The requirements as laid down by Mr. Morehead are (1) scholastic ability and attainments, (2) qualities of manhood, truthfulness, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy, kindness, unselfishness and fellowship, (3) evidence of moral force of character and of capacities to lead and to take an interest in his schoolmates, and (4) physical vigor, as shown by interest in competitive sports or in other ways.

The qualifications are very similar to those necessary for a Rhodes Scholarship.

The scholarship is awarded for only one year on the assumption, however, that it will be continued until the student reaches his scholastic goal. It will be continued as long as the student's performance warrants it.

The first Morehead Scholarship was awarded for the Fall quarter of 1951. Thirteen recipients are enrolled here now, with one on a year's leave of absence.

Key man in the administration of the fund is Coach Bob Fetzer, executive secretary of the Morehead Foundation. Fetzer, who was University Athletic Director from 1922 until he assumed his new duties last year, is in charge of organizing the procurement and processing of applications. He recently made a tour of the state explaining the policies and procedure which guide the foundation.

Applications receive careful study. They are first forwarded to Fetzer directly from the institution where the student is currently studying or from the county chairman of the Scholarship Committee (See MOREHEAD, page 4)

President Griswold

Yale Head Will Talk At Confab

Yale University President A. Whitney Griswold will address some 200 Consolidated University faculty members at 1:00 here today in one of the highlights of a two-day "experiment in self-examination."

Other ranking educators scheduled to speak during the first annual "State of the University Conference" are President Gray at 10:15 this morning, and Chancellors E. K. Graham, J. W. Harrelson and R. B. House of the three branches of the University, tonight.

Dean James A. Hilton of the N. C. State School of Agriculture, soon to become president of Iowa State University, will lead tonight's discussion of "realistic attainments in the college ideal."

Charles Carroll, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, will also address the conference tomorrow night.

The conference will continue through tomorrow night when the various work groups will submit reports on their conclusions. President Gray will accept the reports and reply with an appraisal of the total conference.

The conference, described as an unusual experiment in education, was called by Gray to deal with "such basic, concrete problems as the improvement of college teaching, the proper balance between research and teaching, student-faculty relationships, and the mission of the total University in the richer integration of the three institutions."

Gray said in a Feb. 13 letter to the Consolidated faculty, "To have in mind a clear and workable conception of the mission of the total University is a matter of continuing concern to all of us. My rather numerous references to the mission of the University during the past two years—in speeches, reports and in discussion with administrative and faculty people—reflect the need for such a clear conception of the University's mission in carrying on the day by day work of my office, to say nothing of making and executing plans for the future."

Di Meets Tonight

The Di Senate meets tonight to elect officers for the Spring Quarter. Elections will be held at 8 o'clock on the third floor of New West.

The Di passed a bill last week calling for President Eisenhower to use his clemency powers to commute the Rosenbergs' death sentence to life imprisonment. A motion to send a copy of the bill to President Eisenhower also passed.

At the meeting, Judge John W. Parker was nominated to receive the annual Di-Phi award. His nomination will be validated if the Phi agrees to accept.

Gets Nod For Yack Editor

By Louis Kraar
Rolfe Neill last night won the second half of a double endorsement for editor of The Daily Tar Heel.

Lib Moore gained the nomination for editor of the Yackety Yack by acclamation.

Gaining the Student Party endorsement by acclamation, Neill became the first man in four years to receive nods from both parties for editor. Chuck Hauser was doubly endorsed in the 1949 spring election, but was unable to run because of academic complications.

Neill is present managing editor of The Daily Tar Heel. He started work on the paper his freshman year and became news editor later that same year. He assumed the post of managing editor during his sophomore year, and later served as executive editor. He reassumed the managing editor's job last spring with the election of Barry Farber.

Neill is a political science and history major, and a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Unless some independent candidate files for nomination for the editor's post, Neill will automatically step in. It is generally accepted that there will be no other candidates.

Miss Moore, a present Yack staffer holding the position of co-beauty editor, presented the SP with a detailed outline of her ideas for the annual. She said her idea called for a "simple, flexible theme" and promised all she could "put out a really great annual."

Hugh Gale, present Yack Editor, supported Miss Moore at the University Party nominations last week. Rollie Tillman, subscription manager for Tarnation, is the UP choice for Yack editor. Bob Colbert was another candidate in the three-way Yack race at the UP meeting last week, but dropped out, saying he wanted to keep the Yack "out of politics."

Publications Board choices were Russ Cowell, senior seat; Joe Raff, junior seat; and Louis Kraar, seat-at-large.

Cam Stubbs withdrew the name of a candidate for Publications Board that he had proposed as a previous meeting, saying, "He definitely seems to be a UP boy."

Bob Colbert then declared, "I don't think party lines should matter. We should nominate the most qualified candidate."

Harry Pawlik was nominated for president of the Carolina Athletic Association.

Before Pawlik's nomination, one party member inquired about the duties of the post. Lew Southern, SP chairman, answered, "The chairman does not know the duties of the job."

Joel Fleishman then took the floor to explain the post.

SP senior class officer choices were Ken Myers, president; Gerald Parker, vice-president; Betsy Clark, secretary; and Jet McFarland, social chairman.

Myers made an unsuccessful bid for the party's endorsement for president of the student body several weeks ago. He lost to Ken Penegar.

Campus Chest Drive Begins To Help Needy

The Campus Chest drive swung into action yesterday as solicitors began making rounds of the dormitories, fraternities and sororities in the goal to send funds to war-stricken Korea and flood devastated Holland.

The campaign will continue until Friday at which time, says Chairman Stuart Jones, "everyone on campus should have been contacted and have contributed—we hope."

Town students and faculty members have been contacted by letter. "It is too soon to gauge the response," reports Jones, "but early returns look very favorable."

A graph in the YMCA and stacks of books in the library will record the progress of the campaign from day to day.

Benefits being sponsored by the Campus Chest include a Variety Show in Memorial Hall, Wednesday night, and the shining of shoes by campus dignitaries between classes in the Y Court.

Terry Chronaki, head of unusual stunts, promises "a full scale shoe-shine job" in the Y by most of the campus leaders. "The status of today's politician could rise or fall according to the way he shines shoes," cracked Chronaki.

"WSSF together with CARE and UNESCO is, handling all funds collected. Some 30,000 students in Korea need food, clothing, medical supplies—and books and their only hope is the United States and especially the college students who understand their need," Jones said.

Opera Singer Will Present Concert Here

Nadine Conner, well-known Metropolitan Opera star, will give a performance here Thursday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee.

A charming soprano, Miss Conner began her career training at the College of Music of the University of Southern California. Later she won a position as staff vocalist on Los Angeles radio station KHJ, and her professional career was officially launched.

From such a beginning a few years ago, Miss Conner has risen to become one of the leading stars at the Met, has starred in motion pictures, and during her concert season makes several national television and radio appearances every month.

Students will be admitted free upon presentation of ID card.

Shine Benefit

Campus dignitaries will be shining shoes in the Y Court today for the benefit of the Campus Chest Drive.

The schedule: 9 to 10 a.m.—Phin Horton and Gordon Forrester; 10 to 11—Walt Dear, and 11 to 12—Ken Penegar.
