Better To Shout In UN Than Shoot--Graham

"It's better for people in the United Nations to shout at each other than to shoot at each other on the battlefield," Dr. Frank P. Graham, former president of the Consolidated University said Friday night.

Now a UN mediator trying to solve territorial problems for India and Pakistan, he told a packed Hill Hall audience that the United Nations serves as a forum of public opinion.

Rejecting the charges that the UN merely serves as a forum of propaganda, Dr. Graham noted that all the debates and speeches of the Russians get the final test in the General Assembly when a vote is taken. "The propaganda of germ warfare or aggression in Korea" is proven as propaganda when the 60 nations vote, he said.

Were there no United Nations, "world opinion would not be tested by any positive vote," he observed. On the great issues, a vote is recorded, generally 54-6, and the propaganda efforts are defeated. The removal of Russian forces from Iran soon after World War II is an example of the great moral force of world opinion that the UN can muster.

Other major problems of the UN include the technical assistance program, "Not a program to help backward people, but a program of cooperation for the improvement of education, health, agriculture, and productive powers" to make the world a better place to live in. Dr. Graham cited the World Health Organization as a vital UN agency which helps reduce the rate of disease around the world.

As another major objective, the UN is concerned with "the direct handling of danger spots of the world." Palestine, Greece, Iran, and the subcontinent of Asia are places where the UN has dealt effectively in preventing outbreaks which might lead to another world war. He explained that the UN was the guiding spirit in making peace with the Dutch and the Republic of Indonesia possible.

In a question-answer period following the speech, Dr. Graham suggested that the abused veto power in the five-member Security Council "either be abolished or restricted so it will not paralyze the work of the UN." When the UN charter comes up for revision in 1955, Dr. Graham thinks that an international police force ought to be provided for. He also recommends that the General Assembly be able to make suggestions about matters on the Security Council agenda. Now, the Assembly can't give its opinion on Security Council debate topics.

Dr. Graham is in favor of admitting any one nation which would subscribe to the charter. He pointed out that Communist China is an aggressor against the United Nations and therefore is ineligible. When he was working on the UN Committee of Good Offices in Indonesia, Dr. Graham was blasted by the Communists as a "tool of the Pentagon, an agent for Wall Street, and a front for American and Dutch imperialists." He commented, "It was news to Wall Street."

The Friday night speech marked the first day of celebration for United Nations Week held here by students of UNC. It was the second major speech by Dr. Graham. Earlier he had given the dedication address to the North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

Garrett Will Lecture At Catholic U. This Summer

Allen McCain Garrett of the Department of music here will give lectures in music at the summer session of the Catholic University of America in Washington, D. C., from June 24 through August 8.

Dear's Last Day

This is Walt Dear's last day as editor of The Daily Tar Heel. Tuesday former Managing Editor Rolfe Neill will take over.

Dear has served since last November when he was elected to replace Barry Farber who was drafted. Neill was unopposed for the editor's job in Spring elections.

Graham Says NC Is Destined For Big Things

North Carolina is destined to become one of the great university and medical centers of the world, Dr. Frank P. Graham said here Friday.

Dr. Graham delivered the dedicatory address at impressive exercises at which President Gordon Gray formally accepted in behalf of the University the North Carolina Memorial Hospital, the Schools and Dentistry and Nursing, and the expanded new four-year Medical School.

North Carolina's potential leadership as one of the great health centers stems from "the creative cooperation of its three great Medical Schools, at Winston-Salem, Durham, and Chapel Hill, and all the colleges, schools, and agencies of the people's life," Dr. Graham said.

The Health Center at the University represents one of the few complete medical centers in the country of this type, said Dr. Graham, who was one of the most effective advocates of the Good Health Movement inaugurated a decade ago when he was president of the University.

Pointing out the varied and comprehensive facilities of the new Health Center, cornerstone of the Statewide program, Dr. Graham cited the provision for strong central departments, the close groupings of buildings, economy of operation, the concentration in one area of the various health services in all the primary fields, the resultant stimulus to research, the expanding progress of post-graduate instruction through in-service training and refresher courses, and the development of a team philosophy of service that will be carried into home communities.

Staff Writers Given Awards By Press Club

Four Daily Tar Heel staff writers were awarded the Press Club's certificates of merit recently for superior writing during the Winter Quarter.

The entire staff also receive a special award for the quarter's work.

In the feature writing division, Sally Schindel took the award for her stories dealing chiefly with the interesting aspects of the new hospital's operation. She will be the newspaper's new feature editor.

Tom Peacock, assistant sports editor, won the award in the sports-writing division for his coverage of intercollegiate athletics during the Winter Quarter.

The award for the best work on the editorial page last quarter went to Columnist John Gibson. Gibson is a graduate student and instructor in anthropology.

Straight news writing award went to John Jamison for his coverage of the University administration.

Award winners received in addition to the certificate a one-year subscription to Time Magazine.

Cheer Tryouts Two More Days

Newly-elected head cheerleader Jim Fountain will continue tryouts tomorrow and Tuesday to choose the rest of his squad.

Tryouts are held in Kenan Stadium at 4 o'clock.

Fountain said previous experience is not necessary but listed "prerequisites" as "interest, enthusiasm and coordination. Those who can tumble," he added, "are particularly needed."

REPATRIATED American troops troops have begun calling home on special long-distance hook-ups from Japan—with the Red Cross paying the toll charges. First man to get his call through was Marine Pvt. Appropriations Measure Gets Final Approval

RALEIGH, April 25—A budget bill that allows the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill $1,001,000 for permanent improvements passed the final reading on the Senate floor yesterday and became law.

The University's budget request was part of a $14,250,000 proposed institutional appropriation. It passed the required three readings in the House earlier this week.

Some moments of doubt arose on the second reading of the money bill when Sen. Fred McIntyre of Mecklenburg offered an amendment to have the entire appropriation submitted to public referendum.

When this amendment was defeated, McIntyre offered another to slash off $500,000 for the Institute of Government and a smaller amount for alterations to the fourth floor of the Dental School. The second amendment proposed by McIntyre was also defeated.

The University at Chapel Hill actually receives only $773,000. Included in this figure is $500,000 for the Institute of Government, to match a proposed gift of the same amount; $196,000 for the renovation of dormitories, $41,000 for the renovation of Bingham Hall, and $36,000 for the excavation of a basement for Peabody Hall.

For the Division of Health Affairs, the Legislature granted the following: equipment for south wing, Medical School, $50,000; completion of post graduate facilities, Dental School, $143,000; remodeling of third floor area Medical School, $25,000; and completion of equipment, cancer research floor, $10,000.

The new appropriation law does not include the salaries of two Consolidated University officers associated with President Gray's development program. The President had previously asked that these salaries be included in the final budget.

The Old Professor Too!

Dorsey Brothers Together With Anthony For Concert

By John Jamison and Louis Kraar

An unexpected million dollar quartet—the two fabulous Dorseys, Ray Anthony and Kay Kyser—yesterday treated a packed Memorial Hall throng of German Clubbers and their dates to the star-studded entertainment they're likely to see in a long time.

The first definite public announcement of a Jimmy-Tommy Dorsey merger was made to the audience, clearing up some long-standing rumors.

The concert as billed "Tommy Dorsey and His Orchestra," but with the help of a scheduling coincidence, the big four got together and seemed to enjoy the reunion as much as the audience did.

It's BYOB Tonight At Disc Party

Jimmy Capps of "Our Best to You" fame will conduct music under the stars tonight from 8 until 10 o'clock on the lawn in front of Graham Memorial.

The program will consist of requests made by Carolina students last week in the Y Court, Lenoir Hall and at Graham Memorial.

Capps presides over Raleigh station WPTF's popular late evening request program. The program is built around sentimental music and its dedications mainly are for college students.

Capps is originally from Charlotte and began his radio activity as a staff member of WSOC, a Charlotte station. Later he went to Greenville, S. C. and WFBC. It was at Greenville he originated his record show.

Since 1947 Capps has been announcing for WPTF.

Capps was on campus in 1951 to emcee a program of music presented by two local composer-songwriters. Later he presented the same "music under the stars" type program as tonight's for the campus in front of Graham Memorial.

Tonight's presentation is sponsored by the University Club. It's BYOB—Bring Your Own Blanket.

Marine Corps Open To Coeds

Training for Marine Corps women officer candidates will be held again this year at Quantico, Virginia, beginning in June.

Captain Nate Adams, USMC, who is in charge of interviewing candidates for the training program in this area, said the class is known as the Marine Corps Women Officers Training Class. It consists of 12 weeks of special training designed to prepare the individual candidate for the responsible work she will have later on as a commissioned officer in the Corps.

Graduates of the Women Officers Training Class who will receive commissions as Second Lieutenants, U. S. Marine Corps Reserve will be considered for assignments in such fields as personnel, administration, supply and public information.

"Women Marine Officers are a real part of the Corps," Captain Adams said. "They receive the same pay, allowances, and benefits as do male officers of the same rank. They are now serving on active duty in this country, Europe and Hawaii."

Qualified young women who are still attending college (or are recent graduates), are eligible to enroll in the Marine Corps Women Officers Training Class. Captain Adams pointed out, however, all applications for the June class must be in to Marine Corps headquarters by June 1. Application blanks and further information about the class are available at Marine Corps Officer Procurement Officer, USMC-RS, 1400 Pennsylvania Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Golden Fleece To Celebrate 50th Anniversary Tomorrow With Public Tap Ceremony

The order of the Golden Fleece will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary tomorrow night with a public tapping ceremony in Memorial Hall. The ceremony will start at 7:15. Doors will be locked at 7:30. Included in the ceremony will be a concert by the University Concert Band conducted by Mr. Earl Slocum. The Fleece has also announced that it will recognize the living member of the Order who has been picked by his fellow Argonauts in a secret ballot as the "Argonaut of the Half Century."

Student Solons To Hold Budget Meet Monday

The student legislature will meet tomorrow night for a special session to tie up the budget's loose ends.

Although the budget was approved once last week, an argument over an amendment tacked on by Gene Cook (SP) resulted in reconsideration.

Cook pushed through an amendment to put surplus publication funds back into the student government till. It passed amid great controversy sparked by Cook's blasting the Publications Board.

Later Student Party leaders introduced a motion changing the amendment's wording, but the SP move didn't go through.

Then UP's Sol Cherry introduced a motion to kill the amendment. Ed Gross, secretary-treasurer, spoke for Cherry's move. The vote resulted in a 13-13 tie. Breaking the tie, Speaker Jim McLeod voted for killing the amendment.

SP legislative leaders decided to meet today at 3 o'clock in Roland Parker lounges for a "harmony session." Publications Board representatives will also be present.

Cook's contention that the Publications Board was beginning to take precedence over student government. He said he thought that any money left over from Publication Board operations should go back to the student government funds.

Vesper Service Slated Today By Council

The Intercollegiate Council, a group of students from Duke University, North Carolina College and UNC, will present the vespers program at North Carolina College in Durham this afternoon at 4:30.

A special feature of the program this afternoon will be a chorus formed by students from the three participating schools. This group will present several special musical numbers and lead in the singing of the hymns for the service.

The speaker will be Dr. Martin Goldstein, a German physician now studying at Duke University. He will address the congregation on "The International Protestant Movement."

The Intercollegiate Council has been organized by representatives of several of the religious groups on the campuses of Duke, NCC and UNC in order to promote friendships between these three student bodies.

Seasons Show At Planetarium

"Reasons for the Seasons" is the title of the current presentation in the Morehead Planetarium.

Performances will be given every night of the week at 8:30 and in the afternoons on Saturdays at 3 and on Sundays at 3 and 4 through May 25.

A device to show apparent changing of the earth's axis, as viewed from the sun, is used to illustrate how the seasonal cycle occurs. Four huge earths are projected on the Planetarium dome to enable a complete survey of the periodic relationship between Earth and Sun. The celestial equator and ecliptic (apparent path of the Sun) are actually superimposed on the Planetarium sky to illustrate the progressive changes which bring about the seasons.

THE REV. TOM EDWARDS

Rev. Edwards Gives Sermon Here Tonight

The YWCA's final University Sermon program will be delivered tonight at 8:30 in Hill Hall by the Rev. Tom T. Edwards of Durham.

Mr. Edwards, who is from St. Philip's Episcopal Church, will speak on "Spiritual Knowledge". He is a native of Winston-Salem and received his B.A. degree at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.

University Sermons are presented quarterly under the auspices of a Y committee headed by Pat Aylett. Ministers of wide experience and different denominations are presented each time for the benefit of all UNC students.

Arthur Spaugh will introduce Mr. Edwards, Sue Bullock will read scripture and Marilyn Habel, new YWCA president, will give the invocation. Rosemary Seovil will give the benediction. Organist Dowd Davis will accompany the mixed Glee club in their three presentations, "O Rejoice Ye Christians Loudly," "Adoremus Te," and "God of All Nations."

YW Benefit Ticket Sale Continues Until Tuesday

Tickets to "The Member of the Wedding" will be on sale at regular prices through Tuesday at the Y, Little Shop, University Florist, Town and Campus and Ledbetter-Pickard.

A part of the proceeds from all tickets sold at these places will go to the YWCA. No money received after Tuesday will go to the YWCA.

Fraternities, sororities, dormitory residents, faculty members and local civic organizations are all aiding the YWCA in this fund drive. Rights to ticket sales were given to the Y by Andrew Gutierrez, much as the audience did.

Anthony, the young man with a horn, was fresh from an engagement at Duke and the horn was still warm.

Kyser, as a result of someone's brainstorm and a hasty phone call, drifted on stage in a gardener's getup during one of Dorsey's smoother numbers and broke up the show.

After a dozen or so wisecracks between "the old professor" and "the sentimental gentleman," during which it developed that one of the Dorsey vocalists, Gordon Polk, was one of Kyser's Town Criers, (See DORSEY, page 4)
