SUAB Strives For Rewarding '54

Warmer Campus Spirit Is Student Union's Goal

By Jennie Lynn

To create a warmer campus spirit by serving the student and stimulating his desire to get more out of college through participating in its activities, is the goal SUAB is striving for and hoping to attain next year, according to Chairman Nancy Horne.

Carolina students, recognizing the value of the work of student unions on other campuses, set up SUAB (Student Union Activities Board) this year. Its purpose is to help students in any way it can—through bringing them information, noted speakers, worthwhile concerts, thorough publicity and co-ordination and cooperation of all campus organizations.

Desiring to know more about other student unions, SUAB's chairman, Nancy Horne, represented Carolina in the national Convention of College Unions at Berkeley, Calif. last month.

Seventy-five universities and colleges, from Hawaii to New York attended this meeting. The representatives discussed ways to serve the students, faculty and alumni, how to operate with other organizations, and how to help in the orientation programs. They also talked about and shared ideas concerning the educational, social, and cultural values that can be expected to be received from student unions.

Next Fall SUAB plans to be in full swing. Its expectations are to continue and enlarge the undertakings of '53. During orientation, as it did this fall, the board will give to new Carolinians copies of important information concerning all campus organizations, to enable the various groups to make personal contacts with interested students.

The polls committee plans to take surveys of the student body's opinion of national, international, and campus affairs for any organization that desires them to be made. This project will be under the guidance of an adviser, experienced in statistical work. Results of the surveys will be published.

The student union will sponsor a monthly theme dance, similar to the Sadie Hawkins Dance in November. Also to help the new students to get to know more people it plans to hold informal picnics, banquets or a just-have-fun day each month.

The organization's dance committee is working on entertainment that will use the talent on campus. They hope to have semi-weekly shows, where students will sing, play the piano or dance for patrons of the Rendezvous Room.

The film committee will continue its bringing outstanding pictures to Gerrard Hall, and such entertainment as Polgar is on next year's agenda.

All organizations, honorary and social fraternities, have been asked to send to SUAB a list of officers and outstanding members to compile a "Who's Who On Campus" to be placed in Graham during the first week of orientation. While counselors and advisers are introducing the newcomers to UNC on the tours during orientation week, SUAB will serve drinks and cookies in the lounge of the building.

One of SUAB's greatest hopes is to stimulate a better relationship between students and faculty by their getting together for informal talks and discussions, over coffee and sandwiches.

Austrian Student Sees Campus, Likes Carolina's Honor System

By Ken Sanford

"I especially like your honor system," said Peter A. Pliem, an Austrian student who is visiting Carolina's campus to study student government.

"In Austria we have a supreme court for students made up of two professors and one student," Pliem said. Then he added, "But our student government has more power than yours."

He explained that in Austria the state owns all universities. If their Parliament wants to pass a bill affecting students, it must first go before student government. Pliem said that when the Minister of Education wanted to raise tuition and fees the students struck and won their case. "We have a union of students like your labor unions," he said.

Pliem is a student at Graz University and is in the United States on the State Department's exchange program. He is studying the American system of education, student organizations and community life, especially campus life.

He has visited Georgetown, Columbia, Rutgers, and Princeton Universities and lived on the Bucknell University campus for a week.

"I am very glad to see that American students are studying Europe, because it is very important for them to learn as much as possible since America occupies such a position of world power," Pliem said.

In comparing American and European universities Peter said that America places the emphasis on quantity, and Europe places the emphasis on quality of education. "Our students get more intensive training and harder quizzes while yours get a broader scope of studies," he said.

"European universities don't have campuses, but I think it would be nice to live on a campus."

He said he likes the informality between students and professors in America. He said that in Europe if a student doesn't go to his professor's office, he doesn't ever get to speak to him. There are no class discussions.

Of American family life Pliem said that most families seem to live in clubs and organizations. "The European family has more home life," he said.

Carolina Students Taking Part In Survey Of College Expenses

A selected group of Carolina students will participate today in a nationwide survey of costs students incur in attending college. Students who have received cards will attend a brief meeting this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Carroll Hall. Those participating in the study will be rendering a service to education, said Roy Armstrong, coordinator of the project. Armstrong requested that students who find it impossible to attend the meeting notify Charles Bernard at the Admissions Office today or tomorrow.

The study of college costs will include a sample of 35,000 full-time undergraduates who are now attending 100 selected colleges.

"The success of this project depends heavily on a high student response rate," explained the group making the study. "We hope you will accept the challenge of this opportunity to perform a valuable public service for American higher education."

Reason for the survey, stated the Office of Education, is to study the situation which has been cause
