KELLER LEADS MARCH OVER GENERALS, 39-0

An Authentic Touch

Navy Captain Plays 'Mr. Roberts'

An unconscious bit of type casting will give the Carolina Playmakers' forthcoming production of "Mr. Roberts" the Navy flavor.

Tom Patterson, director of the sentimental war comedy, discovered this when he learned that F. Lee Edwards, cast as the captain of the Navy cargo ship, AK 601, is a full commander in the U. S. Navy and executive officer of the University's NROTC unit.

The play is scheduled for production at the Playmakers Theatre October 21-25.

Commander Edwards, a pleased gentleman with an impressive Navy record, is a native of Kinston and a graduate of Wake Forest College. His Navy experience includes participation in the invasion of North Africa and in most of the major campaigns of the war in the Pacific as well as the Japanese occupation. He holds, among many other decorations, the Navy Cross.

When Commander Edwards heard of auditions for the Playmakers' production of "Mr. Roberts," he immediately decided that this was for him. "I've got the uniform and everything," he says with a grin. Not exactly the right uniform, but Edwards takes his demotion cheerfully.

"But I'd like to emphasize," he says, "that just because I'm a Navy man, it doesn't mean I'm that kind of captain—to me, he's everything an officer should not be."

And it should be real acting when he plays the overbearing captain, for Commander Edwards himself is a most even-tempered officer with a ready smile.

Commander Edwards is not the only member of the cast of "Mr. Roberts" with Navy experience.

Chapel Hill's Mr. Roberts himself, played by Donald Treat, is an ex-Navy man, as is Chris Moe, New York City, who plays Stephanowski, and the director himself, Thomas M. Patterson of the Playmaker staff.

Jim Fouts, Lexington, and John Stockard, Greensboro, are members of the local NROTC.

Raincoats To Shades: Grid Story

It happened yesterday at the game:

Rain last week, sunshine this week and the vendors changed their wares for the occasion. Yesterday's offering was sun shades.

In the guest box, a well dressed lady remarked to a friend: "My daughter told me this morning, 'mother, every hat you've got is cockeyed and crazy, but this is the worst one yet—you look like a tarantula.'" (she did.)

The attendance at yesterday's game, estimated at 18,000, showed the effect of several losing seasons and a small-school opponent. It was the smallest in many a season.

Only half of the Jones team showed up for the game. The inimitable "Nose" did his duties at halftime with the card stunts, but the put-put plane and its sausage ad never made it.

The precision of Carolina's band was emphasized as a cloud of white dust arose and a line of bandsmen marched across the field following one of the yard lines.

Y Membership Drive Begins

A series of membership meetings have been planned by the Y membership committee.

These meetings are for freshmen and upperclassmen alike, in order to acquaint them with the YMCA program and give them a chance to enter the various activities.

The first meeting will be held Tuesday, October 6th, at 7:00 in the Y.

The membership committee urges that all of the 350 students who want to take part in the Y program, attend this first meeting.

Dr. Luxon Is Named New Journalism Dean

Dr. Norval Neil Luxon, assistant to the president and professor of journalism at Ohio State University where he has just rounded out 25 years of service, today was named Dean of the School of Journalism here, effective December 1.

The appointment was announced by President Gordon Gray and Chancellor Robert B. House following approval by the Board of Trustees.

Dr. Luxon, who has been a member of the Ohio State staff for 25 years, succeeds Oscar J. Coffin, who asked to be relieved of administrative duties September 1.

Phillips Russell has been serving as executive officer since that date and will continue in that capacity until Dr. Luxon moves to Chapel Hill.

Dr. Luxon taught in the School of Journalism of Ohio State from 1928 to 1943 when he was named Co-ordinator of the Army Specialized Training Program at Ohio State, largest in the nation at that time.

In 1944 he became first Director of the Twilight School (night) and since July 1, 1946, he has been assistant to President Howard L. Bevis.

For the last eight years Dr. Luxon has been chairman of the Accrediting Committee of the American Council on Education for Journalism.

His Ph.D. dissertation, "Niles' Weekly Register, News Magazine of the Nineteenth Century," won for him the 1939 Sigma Delta Chi Award for the most meritorious research in American journalism.

At native Ohioan, Dr. Luxon was born in New London, Ohio, in 1899. He entered Ohio State University's College of Agriculture in 1916 after winning a state-wide scholarship. A year later he enlisted in the U. S. Navy and it was during his 14 months service in World War I that he became interested in journalism.

Student Editor

He re-entered Ohio State in 1921, switching to the School of Journalism. During the academic year 1922-23 he was editor of The Lantern, student daily newspaper. He received his B.S. in 1923.

He has had five years experience in active newspaper work, as assistant city editor of The Columbus Citizen, a city editor of the Canton Daily Leader, and as assistant managing editor of the San Antonio Herald.

The major part of the pamphlet gives summaries of the political situation existing in each of the Latin American countries in 1952, which, for purposes of the study, was taken as a "sample" of post-World War II conditions. The pamphlet contains a discussion of the strategic position of the Latin American countries in the security of the United States and the hemisphere.

The pamphlet is an advance publication of one chapter of Dr. Gillin's forthcoming book, "The Culture of Politics in Latin America." Material for the book was collected by the author in field work in Latin America in 1951, under a grant from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The book will probably be published in 1954.
