Art Gallery, Government Institute Buildings Will Be Started This Spring

Construction on Carolina's new million dollar Institute of Government building and $800,000 William H. Ackland Memorial Art building will begin this spring when contracts are let in MaMrch.

Consulting architects for both Colonial style structures are Eggers and Higgins of Philadelphia, designers of the Morehead building. Watts Carr of Durham is the architect for the Institute of Government building and H. Raymond Weeks of Durham for the Ackland Art Museum.

Proposed site of the new Institute of Government building is on Raleigh highway between the intramural athletic field and the Country Club road. The Ackland museum will be located on Columbia street near the Franklin street corner on the former Foy Robertson lot.

Half of the cost of the Institute of Government building is a gift from the Knapp Foundation and the other half state appropriation.

Carolina was designated as the site for the Ackland Art building in 1948 when the United States Circuit Court of Appeals reversed an earlier decision of the lower Court of Appeals to give the $1,500,000 Ackland bequest to Rollins College, Florida.

Originally drawn up in 1938, the Ackland will left the money to Duke University, but the bequest was subsequently refused. An earlier will designated that the money be left to either Duke University, UNC, or Rollins College.

As most of Ackland's bequest was for works of art, Carolina had to wait for construction until enough interest on funds held by the Ackland trustees had accumulated. The trust funds will be expanded for art purchases and teaching activities calculated to broaden the understanding and appreciation of the fine arts throughout this section of the country.

It is planned that the Ackland Museum, located near Person Hall Art Gallery and Hill Music Hall, will be a part of the Fine Arts Center, with a new and large Playmaker's Theatre to be built when funds are available.

The University has bought the former Tri-Delt house opposite the rear of the music building, joining the Museum site with the campus.

WASHINGTON—The chairman of the congressional Atomic Energy Committee, W. Sterling Cole (R-N.Y.), said yesterday that Russia already has enough "deliverable" H-bombs to place the cities of the United States in "real and imminent danger." The veteran representative said he personally regards the situation so alarming that he is ready to abandon the GOP balanced budget drive in favor of a "drastic" speedup in defense preparations. He called for an increase annually of $10,000,000 in the nation's defense and military appropriations to meet the Russians' threat.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Robert C. Greenlease, father of the six-year-old boy kidnapped from this city last week, remained secluded in his massive house yesterday after the F.B.I. became eligible to enter the hunt for the kidnapper. Under the provisions of the 1932 Lindbergh Act, the national investigating bureau can enter a case such as young Greenlease's after one week has elapsed. It is assumed that by then the abductor has crossed state lines, a requisite for federal intervention.

RALEIGH—Final returns in Saturday's statewide school-hospital bond election won't be known until Oct. 20, when the state Board of Elections meets here to certify the returns. State officials weren't waiting until then, however, to congratulate each other over the result, so apparent in early returns that vote-counting stopped at the three-fourth mark. At that time both issues had been approved by about seven to one landslide and both had passed in every county in the state.

American College Editors See No Revolt Behind Iron Curtain

MOSCOW, Oct. 5.—Three college editors from the United States, on their way home after a ten-day visit to Iron Curtain universities, felt that "We have made some impression on the people" of Russia.

The editors, Daniel Berger of the Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio Review, Mark Emond, former editor at the University of Colorado, and Zander Hollander, former feature editor of the Michigan Daily at the University of Michigan, said that they had not seen any signs of unrest or lack of sympathy with the Soviet regime in the Ukraine.

"People here seem to be united behind the Government," Mr. Berger said. "... it would seem that there is nothing more foolish than to figure there is going to be any support inside the Soviet Union for opposition to their Government."

The editors said they were told that Kiev University "had a lot of American magazines and newspapers. But the only thing they had was The Daily Worker and that was way up on the top shelf and didn't look like anyone ever read it."

Russian students asked the Americans whether they could tell the truth about their impressions when they went home, without being put in jail.

"We told them that we could say whatever we pleased when we went back to America," Mr. Hollander said. "But I don't think they quite believed us."

Public Control Of Water Di's Debate Topic

"Federal development of national water resources" will be discussed tonight in the Di Senate at 8 o'clock on the third floor of New West.

Senator Gene Cook will introduce the bill which deals specifically with inter-state water resources that cross state borders.

Proponents of the bill point to the Tennessee Valley Authority as evidence of the benefits of such governmental activity. They contend that the federal agencies are better equipped to expand such resources and would thus be able to provide the public with more advantages at a cheaper rate.

Opponents feel that federal control tends toward Socialism and crowds out private interests. They also object to governmental use of public funds for such endeavors.

All visitors are invited to voice their opinions on this question, Phi officials said.

UNC's Foreign Students Air Their Problems; Language And Dating Difficulties Head The List

By Joyce Adams
American-English and American women—more than anything else—puzzle foreign students on campus.

This was brought out in a panel discussion on "Campus, U.S.A." at the Cosmopolitan Club Sunday afternoon, when members from six countries discussed the basic problems of foreign students at U.N.C. K.C.S. Pillai from India said that many students from his country could understand and read English quite well, but had difficulty in making themselves understood when they spoke. Shrugging his shoulders, he said he could not see any way to adjust to it, since the mouths of

Martin Is Hero

Yankees Win In Ninth

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 5.—The New York Yankees lowered the boom on the Brooklyn Dodgers today to win their fifth consecutive World Series and pick up $9,000 per player in winners' checks. Billy Martin was the hero of the game, knocking in the winning run in the last half of the ninth after the Dodgers had appeared to have pulled the game out of the fire.

The game was a fitting finale to the whole Series. The Dodgers came from behind to tie it at three-all in their part of the last frame on Carl Furillo's two run homer to the right field stands.

Allie Reynolds received the credit for the win while Clem Labine took the loss. Reynolds came in to replace Whitey Ford in the eighth inning. It was his seventh Series win.

In the first inning, after putting the Dodgers out without too much difficulty, the Yanks took a two run lead on two hits. Woodling led off with a base on balls, Collins fanned, and Bauer singled to left. (See ALLIE, page 3)

Primitive Man Conceived That Soul Is Immortal, Says Harland

"Primitive man very early believed in a life after death," said professor J. P. Harland of the Archeology Department as he presented the first of a series of studies on worship Sunday evening at the Baptist Student Union Supper Forum.

Professor Harland showed slides taken of ancient graves which showed articles buried with the skeleton which the primitives wanted to take with them after death. Harland traced the development of worship from an early form based on man's fear. "At first he sought to control this fear with an appeal to magic," he said.

"The next step in the development was man's belief in the existence of a soul. He saw a dead man and decided that the thing that was missing about him was a soul," Harland said.

"Later he came to believe in spirits, then in spirits with a form and he finally came to make idols to represent that spirit," Harland said. "When he built a cover to protect the idol, the temple as a worship place arose," Harland continued.

Harland illustrated his whole talk with representative slides. Next Sunday Dr. John Gillin of the Anthropology Department will present the second of the worship series.

SP Examines Self On Why's Of Existence

The Student Party last night held a panel discussion on the question: "For What Does the Student Party Stand?"

Opening the discussion, Joel Fleishman former chairman, said, "I consider the Student Party not so much a political party as a political activities group." He explained that membership in the party was open to anyone who wished to join, and that through extensive membership the party could carry out the desire of the student body.

Panel member David Reid explained that the party was interested not only in politics but in every phase of student activities. "I feel that the Student Party is the progressive party on campus as concerns student activities."

"Actually we represent ourselves at the meetings," said Lew Southern. "But we know we can do nothing which the student body does not want us to do." Southern also is a former chairman.

Gordon Forrester explained his procedure in joining a political party as a freshman. "I visited meetings of both parties and met people I liked at each," he said. "But after a couple of visits to each party I knew which was the party most representative of the student body," he continued.

Included in the meeting was a report by Forrester on the last Student Legislature meeting. Don Geiger, vice chairman of the party, gave a rundown on the operation of the various officers and departments in the party.

Doty Iseley was elected clerk for the party, and Reid was elected publicity chairman. Both were voted into office by acclamation.

Deadline For Yack Contracts Is This Week

All campus organizations must send representatives to the Yackety Yack office on the second floor of Graham Memorial this week to sign contracts for space in this year's issue. Assistant Business Manager Tom Spain announced yesterday.

Spain said that included in this request were fraternities, sororities, honorary societies, professional schools and social clubs. He also reminded all organizations which have not paid for their space in the 1953 Yack that they must do so before this year's contracts can be signed.

The Yack office will be open from two until five o'clock every afternoon this week for those wishing to sign contracts and Spain can be contacted at St. Anthony Hall at all other times.
