CAROLINA FACES VOLS IN HOMECOMING TODAY

Johnny Long Sparks Rally; Two Play Germans Concert

Jazz, Torch Parade, Cheering Mob Make Pep Rally Successful

By Charles Kuralt

They had a hot time in the old town again last night.

Hundreds of students carrying flaming torches marched down Franklin Street cheering the Tar Heels. It looked like a grotesque mob scene from a Hollywood thriller.

They paraded once around the campus, then packed Memorial Hall for a roaring 40 minutes. Cheerleaders led cheers; the University band played fight songs; five musicians from the Johnny Long orchestra played "When the Saints Go Marching In" and everybody in jammed-to-the-rafters Memorial Hall cheered for Carolina.

At 7:30, torch-carrying students left Peabody Hall chanting, "Beat the Vols!" Head Cheerleader Jim Fountain led the assault on Franklin Street. The crowd stopped at the Post Office and let go with a long, loud, C-A-R-O-L-I-N-A! Cheers were choked by the heavy smoke from the torches.

The whole affair was better organized than the raucous Franklin Street riot before the Maryland game. And at times, it was louder. Cheers echoed to the ends of the campus.

Pretty coeds and astonished visitors, all dressed up for the Germans, joined in heartily. Some girls paraded around the route in party dresses and high heels.

When the crowd reached Memorial Hall again, they filled it. Some brought the charred stubs of torches inside.

The Long band's instruments were locked up somewhere, so his "Cottonpicker" five borrowed instruments from Carolina bandmen. His grinning drummer held a borrowed snare drum in his lap. A sax man made like a cheerleader.

Bishop Breaks Holy Shrine With Hammer

GREENVILLE, Tenn., Oct.—(AP)—The fiery churchman arrested for breaking the Eighth Commandment with a sledge hammer arrived here last night for a revival meeting and the start of a seven-day fast.

Bishop Homer Tomlinson, general overseer of the Church of God, came to town with the Rev. John W. Cannon for the revival. Tomlinson was jailed yesterday at Murphy, N. C., after swinging an eight-pound sledge hammer at the Eight Commandment, like the other nine spelled in five-foot high concrete letters on Burger Mountain.

Tomlinson went to Murphy with the announced purpose of breaking up the letters—a shrine of the Church of God of Prophecy, another branch of the church headed by his brother, the Rev. Milton Tomlinson of Cleveland, Tenn.

Their father, A. J. Tomlinson, said he saw a vision on the mountain leading him to start the Church of God in 1903.

BISHOP HOMER TOMLINSON stands in his cell in Murphy, N. C. after being arrested when he tried to destroy a Church of God shrine on a mountainside near Murphy. Tomlinson, 61, heads one faction of the church, his brother another. Tomlinson, who claims the shrine he attempted to destroy was an idol, stayed in jail only about an hour. He was then released without bond.—AP Wirephoto.

Tommy Tucker, Long Share Music Duties With Combined Show

By Louis Kraar

Duke alumnus Johnny Long finished a Germans concert yesterday, stopped to chat at a fraternity house, led a Carolina pep rally, and played a dance.

Meantime, bandmaster Tommy Tucker played the first half of the concert, stayed to admire Long's music, and hopped a bus to Salisbury, his wife's home, to rest up for tonight's Germans dance.

The two bandleaders split up Germans concert duties with some contrasting, but equally pleasing music.

"Gosh, I haven't been back to Duke since Choo Choo," Long remarked at the Deke house after the concert. He leaned back on the long leather bench in the fraternity's basement, listening to students appraise his music and, occasionally, Duke University.

"Duke isn't going to mind about you leading this pep rally, are they?" asked one of the students kiddingly.

"I hope not," laughed Long.

The blond, fiddle-playing band leader seemed to enjoy recalling his Duke days. The less-than-20 years ago when he was a student seemed short yesterday as he laughed and talked with the students.

Customarily modest, he treats his musical achievements almost lightly. He was highly successful as an undergraduate bandleader at Duke, but takes little credit for his early success.

"Before I got to Duke, Kay Kyser had already blazed a trail at Carolina. My band got a good start thanks to the success and interest shown in Kay's group," Long said. Kyser lives in Chapel Hill now and is retired.

Tucker, who played the first half of the show, stood in the wings as Long started and admired what he heard. "Long sure has a fine band," he said. "It's not often that I get to hear another band," he added.

Tucker, who started his music making at the University of North Dakota "because I couldn't decide what else to study," emphasized the sweeter side of the concert. Long rocked the auditorium with driving arrangements like "We'll Build a Bungalow" and "Shanty-town."

The show's biggest visual attraction was Tucker's singer, Clare Nelson. Miss Nelson, who sings a pretty good tune, was Miss Pennsylvania. Here "The Man I Love" and "This Can't Be Love" brought enthusiastic applause from the audience.

Cellars Home To Fifty Still, Official Says

Housing office Directors J. E. Wadsworth revealed yesterday that almost fifty students are still living in dormitory basements on the UNC campus. He said, however, that he hopes next week will see enough dorm men move into fraternity houses to finally write an end to the "basement" - living story.

Wadsworth also stated that plans are already complete for closing Alexander, Stacy, and Cobb B basements and efforts are being made to move some of the students into town quarters. All students who do have to remain in dorm basements will be living in Cobb A only.

The overcrowded dorms resulted from an increase in University enrollment. At one time there were more than 115 men living in the three buildings.

EYECATCHING MISS "B"—the sweater girl from Belmont who attracted so much attention at the Maryland game — poses with Bushy Cook and the Rameses. Miss "B", who's 16-year-old Lynda Pope, may not be at today's Tennessee game, but Bushy and the Ram are sure to be on hand.

Tennessee Has Taken Last Four

By Vardy Buckalew

The boys from over the mountains, the Tennessee Volunteers, return to Chapel Hill to renew their old rivalry with Carolina's Tar Heels today at 2 o'clock in a homecoming game which finds the Tar Heels a seven point underdog.

The last time the Volunteers were here they had a team which was contending for national honors and which ended up in the Sugar Bowl. They won easily then, 27-0. Today Tennessee is operating with a new coach, Harvey Robinson, who replaced the ailing great, Bob Neyland, and today's Volunteer team is one which has lost two and tied one.

Carolina on the other hand is also rebuilding under a new coach and has a record of three wins and two losses, those two losses coming on the last two consecutive Saturdays.

A Homecoming Day crowd of about 30,000 is expected to be on hand for the game between these traditional rivals.

Coach George Barclay has spent the week in practice against the single wing offense which the Volunteers use, today being the only time this season he will face such an offense.

The ever-changing Carolina starting combination will be essentially the same today as it was last Saturday against the Bulldogs. The quarterback position, which has seen four different players take the starting role, will be filled again today by Len Bullock, sophomore who came into his own last Saturday.

The Tar Heels today will be trying to snap a four game losing streak in the series with the Vols, a losing streak which began in 1949 with a 35-0 loss here in Chapel Hill. At present the series stands at 13-8 in favor of Tennessee with one game ending in a tie.

The Vols have been having their troubles this year and have won only two games, those wins coming over lowly Chattanooga and Louisville. However they did manage to hold highly rated Alabama to a tie and they have been improving every week.

The Tennessee backfield is led by Jimmy Wade, a triple-threat tailback who understudied Hank Lauricella. The rest of the backfield will consist of Ted Schwanger, Jerry Hyde and Bill Barbish. Aside from Bullock, Carolina's backfield will be the usual Connie Gravitte, Ken Keller, and Dick Lackey. Keller sustained a charley horse in his leg in the Georgia game last week and he reinjured it in practice on Wednesday. However, the Tar Heels' leading ground gainer is expected to be in top shape for the game today.

Gravitte, who had a long touchdown run against Georgia called back for offside, has looked good in practice this week, and he is expected to give a good account of himself today. Lackey, whose 43 yard punting average leads the conference, has also had a good week in practice.

Marshall Newman, who was the first string quarterback in the first game of the season and who was shifted to halfback for several weeks, returned to his original position during practice this week and it will be he who will run the second combination for the Tar Heels today.

Newman was shifted back to quarterback to replace Lou Britt who pulled a cartilage in his left side in the Maryland game. Britt was expected to make a quick recovery but he has not been in full uniform for the past two weeks.

Flo Worrell, a Fleet halfback who dropped out of sight after the second game of the season because of a weakness on defense, has been looking good in practice this week and Coach Barclay has announced that he will probably see action today.

Minimum 314

Train Tickets On Sale

Sponsors of the "On To Columbia" train were still urging students to shell out their $9.15 for tickets yesterday. A minimum of 314 students must sign up for the "choo-choo" ride to the South Carolina game or the train cannot be chartered.

If plans go through to completion the train is scheduled to leave Raleigh at 7 o'clock next Saturday morning and arrive at 11 o'clock or leave at 8 o'clock and arrive at noon. Buses will carry students to the Raleigh station and from the Columbia station to the stadium. The fare for the first ride is included in the $9.15, the latter will be ten cents.

Tickets will be on sale in Y court through noon Monday. The minimum must be reached by that time.
