Ford Committee Will Talk With UNC Personnel

The Visiting Committee for the Behavioral Science Survey, sponsored by the Ford Foundation, will meet here Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to consult with UNC personnel engaged in studying the status, problems, and needs of the behavioral sciences at the University.

Members of the Visiting Committee are Wallace Carroll, chairman, executive news editor, Winston-Salem Journal-Sentinel; Theodore Newcomb, psychologist, University of Michigan; John Spiegel, psychiatrist, Harvard University; David Truman, political scientist, Columbia University; John Whiting, anthropologist, Harvard University; and Robin Williams, sociologist, Cornell University.

The Behavioral Science Survey was begun last summer under a $50,000 grant from the Ford Foundation. The University, together with four other universities (Chicago, Harvard, Michigan, and Stanford), was awarded the grant to make a "self-survey of its training and research programs for the scientific study of human behavior." The study is expected to continue for a year.

In addition to members of the Visiting Committee, two representatives of the Ford Foundation, Allen Wallis and Preston Cutler, currently on leave from the University of Chicago, will also be present for the series of conferences.

Di Subject Is Campus Prejudice

The Di Senate will debate a bill to eliminate discrimination in campus organizations, including Greek letter societies, tonight at 8 o'clock in Di Hall on third floor, New West.

Senator Gerald Parker will introduce the bill to deprive all privileges and recognition from any organizations related to the University which do not "strive through their regional or national organizations to remove all discriminatory membership clauses from their charters, constitutions or bylaws concerning race, color, creed or national origin."

However the bill states that "this measure observes the right of specifically avowed religious groups to require their members to accept certain religious tenets."

If accepted, the bill will give organizations until January 1, 1955 to remove such clauses from their charters.

As it stands, the bill would not force the loss of privileges of groups which make an honest effort to make the desired changes. But it does call for all UNC chapters of national organizations to favor the abolition of discriminatory membership clauses. The Di bills are for debate purposes only.

Proponents of the measure say that the removal of the membership barrier is the first step toward Constitutional equality. They feel that "democratic liberalism" does not call for a caste system for American citizens of varied backgrounds.

Opponents to the bill point out that fraternities and sororities are "of a private nature" and thereby have the right to exclude anyone they like from membership. Gentlemen's agreements would continue to discriminate against persons even though discriminatory clauses were stricken from their charters, they say.

Another question to be answered tonight is that of whether a state-owned school has the right to make policy regarding organizations related to it.

Smell of Durham comes to campus as chopped up tobacco waste is spread on grass and around shrubs.

Miss Rahn has sung the title role in "Aida" with San Carlo, Salmaggi and National Negro Opera Companies, has appeared with symphony orchestras as soloist, and as recitalist in concert halls throughout the nation. During the 1950-51 season, she sang with Lawrence Tibbett, Metropolitan Opera baritone, in the modern Broadway play, "The Barrier."

Students will be admitted by presenting their ID cards. Townspeople and faculty members may purchase tickets at the door after 7:40 p. m.

Ivory Figurehead Of Napoleon

Library Has Sailing Ships Exhibit

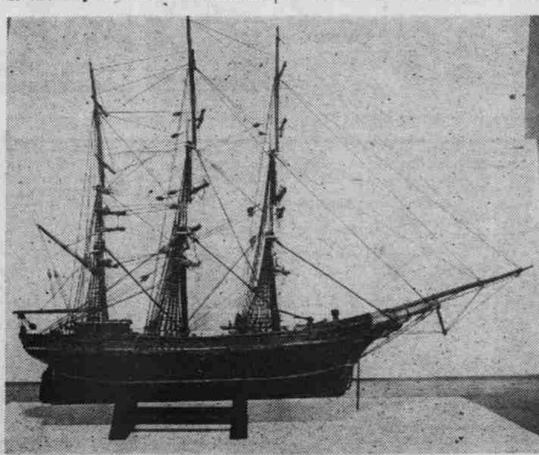

Now on exhibit in the University Library are models of old sailing ships. The models were the property of the late William Meade Prince and were presented to the library by his widow.

Prince, noted artist and author of "The Southern Part of Heaven," used the models when he needed ships in illustrations.

Mrs. Prince has also given the library a number of books on sailing ships and ship models. Her husband spent more than 20 years collecting the books and models in the United States and various foreign countries.

The models range in length from seven and a half inches to 36 inches. The collection covers some three hundred years historically. Types of vessels go from a Dutch galleon and an English battleship to an American clipper ship and a topsail schooner.

The most outstanding piece of craftsmanship in the collection is the tiny model of the British battleship "Goliath." It is considered by experts in the field to be one of the finest models in the world. It was made about 1805 by a French prisoner of war in London. Seventy four brass guns on movable gun carriages are mounted on the model.

A 16-gun brig-o-war built around 1818 carries an ivory bust of Napoleon as a figurehead. The American clipper "Ajax" is another model built in the late 18th century, about the time that its full-size counterpart was being used in commerce.

The largest model in the collection is that of a galleon, which is probably a 17th century Dutch man-o-war.

Among the books in the collection are "Down to the Sea in Ships," "Wooden Ships and Iron Men," "Whale Ships and Whaling," and a set of French books giving designs and measurements of ships.

Dr. Purks Picked To Succeed Wilson As Consolidated University Provost

Nuclear Physicist To Get Position Pending Approval By Board Of Trustees Next Month

Dr. James H. Purks Jr. will become Provost of the Consolidated University if the Board of Trustees approves the recommendation of the Executive Committee which met yesterday in Raleigh.

Dr. Purks is Associate Director of the General Education Board, New York. He is a former chairman of the Council for the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

The full Board of Trustees is to act on the recommendation at a special meeting to be held in Raleigh December 3. If elected, Dr. Purks will assume his new duties not later than January 1.

The Provost in the Consolidated University organization is the principal adviser to the President on educational matters — plans for educational development of the University and such related matters as promotion policies.

Dr. Purks was strongly recommended to the Executive Committee by President Gordon Gray. If accepted, he will fill the post left vacant by Dr. Logan Wilson, who left the University in February to become president of the University of Texas.

A physicist and former Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Emory University, Dr. Purks is a native of Bartow, Ga., and took his B.S. degree at Emory in 1923. He was awarded his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in physics at Columbia University in 1925 and 1928, respectively.

Following graduation with highest honors from Emory, Dr. Purks taught mathematics at Georgia Tech for one year, and then entered Columbia for graduate work. He became assistant in physics, and after receiving his Ph.D. was named instructor in physics at Columbia. He also served as part-time physicist for the Montefiore Hospital in 1929-30.

In 1930 he returned to Emory as assistant professor of physics and was full professor when he was named Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences in 1938. He remained at this post until 1948 when he became Director of the University Center in Georgia, a position he held until 1950. He was also acting Dean of the Emory Graduate School from 1943 to 1947.

In 1950 he was named Associate Director of the General Education Board. (See DR. JAMES, page 4)

ROY HOLSTEN

Dean Holsten Is To Attend Harvard Meet

Roy Holsten, familiar liaison man between South Building and students, has been chosen from a large number of applicants as one of 25 college administrators to attend a January seminar meeting at Harvard.

Holsten, assistant dean of students here, will spend a week (Jan. 11-16) at Cambridge, Mass., in meetings with some of the nation's other outstanding deans.

The meeting, described as a "deans' workshop," is the first of its kind. It is an experiment in "sharpening administrative technique" through the "education of educators." It is sponsored by the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators with the cooperation of the Harvard Business School.

Holsten, a native of Glen Rock, N. J., became assistant dean of students in February, 1952. While a student here, he was chairman of the Men's Council and member of the Order of the Golden Fleecce. He was president of his fraternity, Delta Kappa Epsilon. He graduated in 1949.

Prior to coming back to Carolina, Holsten was associated with the Vick Chemical Company.

Holsten was nominated by Chancellor Robert B. House to attend the Harvard seminar.

Others maintain that making the Communist Party illegal would enable the F. B. I. to arrest party members and in this way aid in stamping out the party in America. The party, they contend, has already gone underground, and is already working under cover to undermine our system of government. They claim that the Communist organization is not a political party, but is a Russian-supported underground dedicated to the overthrow of our government by force and violence, and is not entitled to Constitutional guarantees of freedom.

The bill to be debated will be introduced by Syd Shuford, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. Visitors are invited to attend and speak on the bill.

Charlie Jones To Talk At Intercollegiate Meet

The Intercollegiate Council, which includes Duke, North Carolina College and UNC, will meet in the Presbyterian Church Annex Friday at 5:30.

Charlie Jones will speak on "What Most Religions Have in Common."

A chicken dinner will be served for 75 cents. Anyone who wishes to attend is asked to make reservations at the Y by Wednesday.

The purpose of the meeting is to have discussion, study and recreation to create better relations between schools.

University Airport Keeps Busy As Football Fans Fly To Game

By Jess Nettles, Jr.

Twenty-eight privately owned light aircraft and a DC-3 type passenger plane descended upon Horace Williams Field, the University-owned airport near Chapel Hill, bringing fans numbered among the 43,000 spectators who converged on the campus for the Notre Dame game Saturday afternoon.

"They came from all over North Carolina and from several other states," commented James Neville, custodian of the field.

"There were four from Asheville, several from Charlotte, Hickory, Salisbury, Greensboro and Winston-Salem, and others who didn't say where they'd flown from," he continued.

Pilots using the field and its facilities are not required to register at the office at the field except to notify the attendant how long they intend to remain there or to arrange for parking or hangar storage.

It was in the Charlie (Choo-Choo) Justice era of UNC football when the airport saw its heaviest traffic. Ninety-seven aircraft, 35 of them from Texas fields, dropped in a matter of only two hours on the date of the UNC-Texas tilt in 1949.
