The bidding:
NORTH: 1 club, 3 hearts
EAST: 1 spade, pass
SOUTH: 2 hearts, 4 hearts
WEST: pass, pass

Opening lead: Seven of spades.
When you have a choice of taking a finesse in either hand as did South in today's hand with the diamond suit, don't leave it up to fancy as to which way to finesse. A discerning player, a thinking player, can sometimes parley the fifty-fifty chance of a finesse working into a sure bet. With a good player "counting" the opponents hands is like breathing, it's a matter of habit. It is done automatically without effort. To the average player who is not familiar with this particular fine-point of the game, after reading this column it may seem difficult, but once it is practiced you will be amazed at the ease with which it can be done and the rewards it will merit you.

The bidding of the above hand is good and the four heart contract a sound one. With the opening lead of the spade seven, East won two rounds of spades with the ace-king and continued with the nine (signalling for West to return a club) on trick three. Declarer trumped with the ten and West over-ruffed with the queen. West then exited with a club which declarer won the ace.

At this point of play South has already lost three tricks. To make the contract he must take the remainder of the tricks. But what is he to do with the losing diamond? Should he finesse? If so, which way? Or perhaps he should finesse the club jack in hopes of ditching a diamond on the king? Think about it, what would you do?

Declarer decided to play another round of trumps ending in his hand with the ace. When trumps split he knew that West originally held only two spades and two hearts. So, he decided to investigate further before doing something about the diamond loser. South played a club to the king and trumped another club, hoping that the queen might fall. As you can see it didn't. Declarer then returned to dummy via the remaining heart and trumped another club. When West showed out on the fourth round of clubs he knew that since West originally held only two spades and two hearts and three clubs, West must have six diamonds (unless the deck is crooked). Consequently, East can have but a singleton diamond. It is then perfunctory to lay down the diamond ace, just to make sure East doesn't have a singleton queen, before finessing! (a better word should be used) the jack.

Badminton Club
The Badminton Club will meet tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the Tin Can.

Westminster Fellowship
The Student Bible Class will meet at 10 this morning in Room 203 of GM. The Westminster Fellowship of the Presbyterian Church will meet at 6 o'clock in the church annex for supper and a group discussion. The discussion, "Where Do Christian Beliefs Come From?" will be led by Dr. Thomas A. Schaffer of Duke University.

NC State Alumni Refuse

Name List To Kerr Scott

RALEIGH, Nov. 21—(P)—Directors of the North Carolina State College Alumni Assn., voted today not to lift their restrictions on the alumni mailing list.

The action in effect turned down a request of former Gov. Kerr Scott for the names and addresses of his fellow graduates of the college.

Freshman Dance Class

To Hold Final Meeting

The Freshman Fellowship Dance Class will hold its last meeting tomorrow night from 6 to 8 in the Rendezvous Room.

The time has been changed so that freshmen may invite nurses and still get them back to their 8 o'clock study hour.

John Reibel of the YMCA says that this will be the last class, because they are running out of funds to pay the teacher, Miss Margaret Taylor, and also because the 35 boys who turned out have learned to dance so well in the class, they no longer need instruction.
