Program On Prayer Is Today

Kazuo Chujo of Tokyo, Japan, will be the chief speaker at the Universal Day of Prayer for Students service this afternoon at 4:30 in the Episcopal Church.

Chujo, a Methodist Crusade scholar who is now doing graduate work in English at Duke University, has been active in the student Christian movement in his country.

A day of prayer for students is a long-established American observance, sponsored first by the churches and later taken over by Luther Wishard, first student secretary of the YMCA. This observance paved the way in part for the WSCF Universal Day of Prayer for Students all over the world.

John R. Mott, general secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation, said: "The observance of the Universal Day of Prayer for Students has been successfully promoted in over forty countries."

The service this afternoon, to which the public is invited, is an annual observance of the World Student Christian Federation, and has been planned by a committee of local representatives from the various church and Y organizations which comprise the WSCF.

In addition to Mr. Kazuo, also on the program will be Ed Ramsaur, BSU, from Lincoln; Frank Warren, Canterbury Club, from Snow Hill; Bill Lofquist, Westminster Fellowship, from Asheville; Miss Jackie McCarthy, Wesley Foundation, from Norfolk, Va.; and Jerry Campbell, Lutheran Student Association, from Taylorsville.

'Bird In Flight'

Engstrom To Lecture

By Jennie Lynn

"Over all the years you can see evidence of how birds have so influenced man, in folk beliefs, in ancient rituals, in formal practices and in poetry," Dr. Alfred Engstrom said in referring to his Humanities Lecture to be given Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in Gerrard Hall.

The title of the lecture will be "The Symbol of the Bird in Flight." "I am interested in showing how bird flight has captured man's imagination," the UNC French professor said.

Dr. Engstrom said that if you ask someone what poems he can recite he most probably will have all kinds of wings in his mind.

"If you have ever been at sea, it is an overwhelming feeling to see a bird appear overhead. You will understand quickly how poetic imagination can associate it with loneliness and other moods of man."

He became interested in birds when a boy in Illinois. He and his friends used to go out to watch them and keep records of when they were in flight. His fascination continued, and he still notes the seasonal change in their flights. "I immediately sense an unearthly quality in a bird, especially a flying bird," he said. "The ways various poets use them in their work are almost limitless."

The public is invited to this lecture, to be held under the sponsorship of the Humanities Division of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Dr. Engstrom is author of numerous articles and in 1950 was co-editor with Dr. U. T. Holmes and Dr. S. E. Leavitt of "Romance Studies Presented To William Morton Dey." He is one of the editorial collaborators in the "University of North Carolina Studies in Comparative Literature," a series of books attracting national attention.

No Reduction On UNC Price For Milk Now

If the current milk war in Durham is going to have any effect on University prices, it hasn't been felt yet, according to campus food buyers yesterday.

Officials at the Carolina Inn said they "had no information at the present time," and those at Lenoir Hall could not be reached for comment yesterday. Informed sources said the University buys its milk on a contract basis, and that holders of the contract may or may not hold the University to the specific price.

Durham Dairy Products, whose Chapel Hill branch is located at the Dairy Bar, said yesterday it was cutting prices of wholesale milk three cents per quart, and retail milk one cent.

Long Meadow Farms also announced that as of Saturday their price of milk would drop two cents per quart, and one cent per quart home delivered.

Both dairies serve Chapel Hill, and their price cuts will go into effect here. The cut in milk prices began some two weeks ago in North Carolina when George Coble, Lexington dairy king, cut the price of Coble Dairies milk on the wholesale level three cents per quart.

Women's Athletic Group Closes Two-Day Session

Pfaff's Report Urges Liberal Course Set Up

By Dick Creed

The State of the University Conference suggested this week that the Consolidated University consider segregating freshmen into separate dormitories and restricting them from joining fraternities.

It called for "liberalizing" education and a move away from the "tendency of the whole educational system to reduce learning to accumulation of facts." It called for resistance to the "teaching of basic courses from the standpoint of any particular vocational applicability."

On Friday The Daily Tar Heel will print the complete text of the report given by Dr. Pfaff on the freshman and sophomore years.

It recommended that liberal education during the freshman and the sophomore year be "strengthened." An attempt should be made to view courses offered as "integral" parts of a student's orientation to the world rather than an air-tight, compartmentalized, first course in x-subject," the conference decided.

Report Given By Pfaff

These points were part of the report presented by Dr. Eugene Pfaff of Woman's College at the final dinner meeting of the conference in Lenoir Hall Friday evening. It deals with one area of discussion—students in the freshman and sophomore years.

A host of suggestions were offered by the conference in an attempt to answer the question, "How can the Consolidated University of North Carolina more nearly meet its full responsibility in the areas of instruction and research?" Whether these and the other recommendations are activated here and at the other branches of the Consolidated University depends upon action by the administration.

In making the recommendation restricting the freshmen, the Pfaff report stated that "administrative procedure" in regulating student behavior "appears to be too lax, too inconsistent, too irresponsible, and too ineffective."

It said that a "much clearer" line should be drawn between the area of "student autonomy and the faculty-administrative responsibility." It pointed to "peculiar problems" which transition from high school to college present and said that they are now "inadequately recognized and met."

It called for more dormitory counsellors here and at N. C. State College: "There should be at least a minimum of reasonably developed dormitory controls, student initiated, to instill the basic ideals of community living and to insure adequate study conditions."

Liberal Approach Urged

In urging a "liberal" approach to education, the report stated that under present conditions the students are not required to think. It attacked the "tendency to reduce learning to accumulation of facts, memorization, and passive response to 'poorly designed testing procedures.'"

"The University is not doing what it can to implement the communication skills taught in grammar, logic, etc., by requiring the student to do creative written work in all appropriate courses," the report stated.

Hall, Mayo Give Reports

Two other reports, dealing with students above the sophomore year and those in graduate and extension study, were presented by Dr. Everett Hall of Chapel Hill and Dr. Selz Mayo of N. C. State College. The reports were summaries of the discussion among the more than 200 faculty members of the Consolidated University who came to Chapel Hill Thursday for the conference.

The Pfaff report said that the (See RESTRICTIONS, page 4)
