"Good News"

Cast's Energy Variety Show's Main Feature

By Stan Smith

"I want to tell everybody how great it's going to be, but we don't have enough time!"

Bo Benardin, a director in blue jeans, sat cross-legged on the cluttered Memorial Hall stage. She wanted to talk about the Campus Chest Variety Show, "Good News," which goes on tomorrow night.

"Everybody's doing a little bit of everything... painting, putting sets together, rehearsing. It's really wonderful!" She stopped, running her hand through her hair. One of the cast started hammering on a backdrop.

"Last Thursday, nobody knew a line, not a song," she continued. "That night, about half of the cast showed up. We didn't even have a piano."

"Everybody just sat around talking. Lew was telling us we only had a week," (she nodded to Lew Sherman, chairman of the Campus Chest.) "We wondered if it were possible at all to put on a show."

"Then one of the kids said 'What are we waiting for? Let's get going!' That started everybody off."

The show, put on entirely with student talent, will have eighteen different skits, many of the performers appearing in nearly every scene. Miss Benardin designed the costumes and sets.

"The enthusiasm is tremendous," spoke up Lew Sherman. "Why, if these kids didn't know one word or one tune, they'd put on a whale of a show!"

"We've practiced every night," broke in director Benardin, "and all day Sunday. It's been 24 hours a day for me, but we want to give the audience something they'll remember."

"And we're going to do just that, you can bet your bottom nickel on it!"

Tickets for the show will be on sale in Y-Court today and tomorrow night. Admission is one dollar.

ADLAI STEVENSON

Young Demos Give Greeting To Stevenson

By Charles Kuralt

Adlai Stevenson came to North Carolina yesterday. He stepped off his plane at Raleigh-Durham Airport wearing an old blue suit and looking tired, but with a big grin for the Tar Heel partisans who met him.

Carolina students, members of the Young Democrats Club, made up a big part of the crowd of 200 who cheered for the 1952 Democratic presidential candidate. Stevenson is in the state for a 10-day rest at the Southern Pines home of his sister, Mrs. Ernest Ives.

Stevenson faced a big banner held aloft by UNC Young Democrats proclaiming him "Next President of the United States!" He talked to reporters for a few minutes in the jovial manner of a candidate.

Someone asked him if his speech in Charlotte April 2 is to be a "major" speech. "I don't know," Stevenson answered. And he added he didn't yet know what he would say there. Would he answer Senator McCarthy's 20 charges of "treason"? He said he would not.

Southern Pines, a reporter reminded him, is a golf resort. Would he be planning to get in shape for '56? That brought the reply, "Well, I think he (President Eisenhower) has a head start on me!"

Would he be trying to make some Democratic converts in Charlotte, which went for Eisenhower in 1952? "I am always interested in the redemption of sin," Stevenson said.

Then Stevenson moved through the crowd to the waiting official car of Governor Umstead.

Cobb Dormitory Gets Picture On Benefactor Collier Cobb

By Ernest Castillo

Collier Cobb Jr. presented a photograph of his father, for whom Cobb Dormitory was named, to the dorm Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the main social room.

Below the photograph, which is 24 by 36 inches with a gold-leaf frame, is a small plaque that has a condensed biography written by Chancellor R. B. House. It states that "Cobb was a successful newspaper editor and publisher at the early age of ten."

Before coming to the University as Assistant Professor of Geology in 1891, he was an instructor at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The following year he became the first head of the Department of Geology, and after forty years of service, he made it distinguished in America.

When Collier Cobb Jr. presented the picture, he read an article he had discovered while collecting material about his father. The article, which he thought would be of interest, was one that had caused much discussion in the late nineteenth century. It was an item that concerned having Saturday classes and the issue was to be debated by the Dialectic Senate. Cobb then added that his father had quit his job at M.I.T. and had come to Carolina for half the salary he was receiving because of his love for the University.

The picture was received by Charlie Hyatt, president of Cobb Dorm. In accepting the photograph, Hyatt said, "On behalf of Cobb Dormitory, I wish to thank you, and I am sure that the picture will serve as an inspiration to the boys of this dorm." Hyatt later added that he thought that all buildings should have a picture of the person for whom they are named.

Martin Jordan Is Nominated For Vice-President Post By UP

Faculty Evaluation Program Scheduled To Open Today

By Taylor Durham

Faculty evaluation starts today. The first concrete evidences of the program will be seen in the Y and at Graham Memorial this morning.

Rating forms for town students will be available in both the Y and GM from 9 o'clock this morning until closing time at the two buildings. The forms should be returned to either place no later than noon tomorrow.

Sponsored by Student Government, the rating program is the first attempt of its kind in eight years. The program was one of the major planks in the campaign platform of Student Government President Bob Gorham last Spring.

Gorham said yesterday, "Faculty evaluation is a project that has been talked about for four years. Finally, we have set up a system that is going into effect. If the project is to accomplish its aim of improving our teaching level, it is most important that we all think carefully, and be extremely objective in our ratings."

"All precautions have been taken to eliminate pressure on both the instructor and the student," Gorham continued.

Forms for dorms, sorority, and fraternity houses will be distributed around 8 o'clock tonight by the various dorm and house presidents. They will be picked up around 11 o'clock by the same persons who distributed them.

Ed McCurry, chairman of Gorham's Evaluation Committee, said yesterday that he would "appreciate the cooperation and support of every student on campus to make this project a success" he emphasized that it was extremely important for the president of every dorm, sorority, and fraternity to be present at the meeting in Gerrard Hall tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock to receive their forms and be briefed on procedure.

Farrell Steps Down, Assails Student Party

UP Floorleader Calls 'Dorm Improvements' SP Political Move

By Louis Kraar

Martin Jordan was acclaimed the University Party's choice for vice-president last night as party floorleader Bob Farrell stepped out of the nomination race.

Jordan, a junior from Concord, has been on the Orientation Committee for two years, and is in the Student Legislature. He is assistant attorney-general to President Bob Gorham and has served on the presidential cabinet for two years. Jordan belongs to Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Farrell told the 35 party members present that the rival SP would "do almost anything so long as it will get them a vote, or two."

"The Student Party has a two-thirds majority in the Legislature and hasn't done anything but spend money. I'm tired of seeing these political nymphomaniacs running around campus," Farrell said.

The long-time UP legislator said he thought the "dorm improvements" like television sets and Victory Village appropriations recently granted were for political purposes.

He said an "organization other than a dorm" asked the Legislature for some improvements recently, and the SP-controlled body "just put it aside and forgot about it."

Farrell said he would like the vice-presidential post, but had to decline the nomination "for personal reasons."

"Student government has a place on campus, but it apparently hasn't found that place," Farrell declared. He cited the need "for more people in student government."

McNutt Given Gardner Prize

RALEIGH — Dr. Franklin Holbrook McNutt, professor of education and associate dean of the Graduate School of the Woman's College, was presented the sixth annual O. Max Gardner Award at impressive ceremonies at N. C. State College here Monday night.

The award is made each spring to the faculty member of the Consolidated University who, in the judgment of the Trustees, during the current scholastic year, has made "the greatest contribution to the welfare of the human race."

It was provided by the late Gov. O. Max Gardner in his will and carries an engraved citation and a check for the annual income from a $25,000 trust fund set up by Governor Gardner.

The name of the recipient had been a carefully guarded secret until Monday night.

The program was held at a dinner session in Leazer Hall, with President Gordon Gray presiding. Many administrative officials and faculty members of the three institutions were present.

Geologists, Geographers To Meet Faculty Today

Geography and geology students will have an opportunity to meet their professors informally this afternoon at the weekly Student-Faculty Hour in Graham Memorial from 4:30 to 6 o'clock.

Non-major students are also invited to drop by the Main Lounge to get acquainted with the department personnel over a cup of coffee.

SP, UP Heads Select Kuralt 'Better Man'

Both campus political party chairmen agreed yesterday that Daily Tar Heel editorial candidate Charles Kuralt "is the better man for the job in a political sense, since he is the doubly-endorsed hopeful."

University Party Chairman Jack Stevens and Student Party Chairman Henry Lowet, in a joint statement, declared that they felt Kuralt "will not lean toward either of the two parties we represent, since each of the parties has selected him as its candidate."

"Seldom do our two parties agree on any political matter, but in this case we and our parties are backing the same man, Charles Kuralt, for the editor's job."

"All he has promised to either party is that he will be 'scrupulously fair' in dealing with the parties as in all other affairs, in the pages of The Daily Tar Heel," the two party leaders said.

"We chairmen urge the members of our respective parties to support the candidate nominated by both the UP and the SP," Stevens and Lowet concluded.

Kuralt is running against Tom Peacock, who sought the UP nomination and later went independent.

Subscriptions Being Sought By Tarnation

Tarnation begins its spring subscription drive tomorrow with a new motto: "Risque, But Not Raunchy!"

Ruben Leonard, new editor of the campus humor magazine, announced the motto yesterday along with plans for the subscription campaign. There will be a table in Y Court tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. where students may subscribe to the last two Tarnation issues of the year. Asking price for the two: 50 cents.

The next Tarnation issue will be out about April 10. Leonard said yesterday the staff has set a goal of 500 new subscriptions by then. For those who miss the Y Court table, he said, the Tarnation office will be open from 2-5 p.m. Monday through Friday for subscription-taking purposes.

The following new appointments to the Tarnation staff were announced yesterday: Bill Ragsdale, business manager; Gene Blanton, advertising manager; T. C. Moore, exchange editor; M. G. Brooks and Jon Dawn, co-subscription managers.

Editor Leonard announced there are still several Tarnation positions open for interested campus artists, cut-ups and writers.

IDC To Elect New Officers

The Interdormitory Council meets tonight at 7 o'clock in 203 Alumni Hall to elect its officers for the coming scholastic year.

Walt Gurley, present head of the IDC, said yesterday that tonight's meeting of the Council would be the last over which he would preside.

When asked what he thought had been the most important accomplishments of the IDC during his tenure of office, Gurley said that he thought the Council had made "definite progress" on the problem of establishing a better coed visiting agreement for the dorms.

He pointed out that additional vending machines have been placed in some dorms. Lack of funds, he noted, was the reason that cigarette machines have not as yet been installed.

The Cliche Mill Breaks Down

At political party meetings on campus we occasionally hear words that rise above the clack of the cliche mill and say something that is pensive and true.

The Student Party had such a speech the other night, but we're sure most of its members weren't too receptive to it. It wasn't a compliment to the SP. But it did seem to make up a challenge to student government, one that it'll have to meet in order to survive and win respect from students.

Electability Vs. Ability

Norwood Bryan, an SP member who doesn't always give speeches, had just nominated Joel Fleishman. Everyone knew that Fleishman would refuse, as he did the presidency.

Bryan chided the party for "speaking too much about electability and not enough about ability."

"... We have rarely sought to pick a good-looking, mediocre, but very electable person to run for office," Bryan said to the SP's apparent agitation. "We have not done this because we know that it is a kind of fraud perpetrated upon a student body which is not always in a position to know whom the best candidate should be..."

And What About The Morning After?

We're not down on the SP, or anyone else for that matter. But in order to win respect as well as votes, any group that purports to lead must offer some candidates with leadership. While we're not criticizing the SP choice of candidates (it's their party), why are such obvious candidates like Fleishman left out?

Winning any election is hard work. But after the flair of posters, din of slogans and whatnot is over, there's the job of settling down to do something for the students.

And what we're wondering is whether the "good-looking, mediocre, but very electable" candidate is the one who'll do the most work. We doubt it.
