The Daily Tar Heel

RESIGN

The editor calls for the resignation of Sec'y Wilson. See page 2

VOL. LVII NO. 24

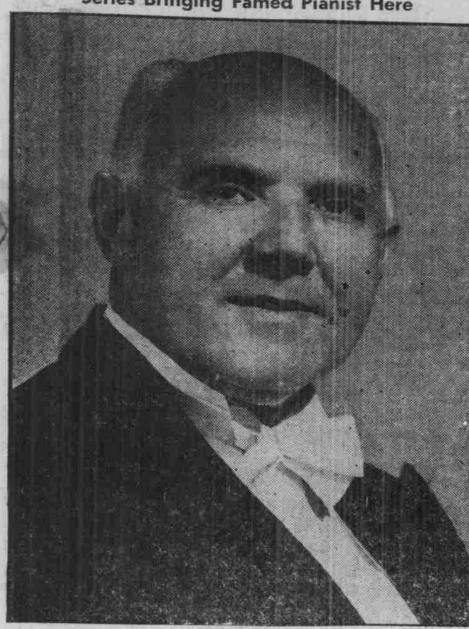

Complete M Wire Service

CHAPEL HILL, NORTH CAROLINA, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1954

Offices In Graham Memorial

FOUR PAGES TODAY

Series Bringing Famed Pianist Here

WALTER GIESEKING . . featured in Concert Series

Walter Gieseking Will Play Here Next March

Tickets for the Chapel Hill He is described by Graham Memo-Concert Series, which will feature rial Director Jim Wallace, as "afamed pianist Walter Gieseking and lone worth the price of the ticket." other artists, went on sale yester- Born in Lyons, France, he rose terim Council, governing body for debate than a legislative as-greatest pianists of all time" will the first European pianist invited Carolina are Joel Fleishman and meeting in December, 1945, pas- 1the guest artist, is a charter memappear on March 31, 1955. Also on to perform in England after World Susan Fink. the concert bill are The American War II. Having an ability to play, The delegates to the legislature Chamber Orchestra (next Wednes- at moment's notice and without will be chosen next week by the day), The Salzburg Marionette The-score, 24 concertos for orchestra, traditional method of having in-College Pi Kappa Delta announ-UNC, has played throughout the atre (Feb. 15, 1955) and Jan Peerce, several hundred sonatas and per-terviews with the selection famous tenor, April 15.

yesterday, 500 student tickets were to three circles of the globe. put on sale. Tickets are $5.00.

says Time Magazine of Gieseking. concerts was announced.

Gieseking, billed as "one of the tion, the Legion of Honor. He was from the University of North The Ninth Annual Assembly, Dr. Mason, who will accompany haps 1,000 shorter pieces, Giese- board. The meetings of the board When the ticket drive opened king has traveled a distance equal will be held on the following sembly. This act on the part of Last year, besides playing for

"Probably no pianist in the Carnegie Hall was completely world could have bettered him," sold out two days after one of his from 9 until 10:30 and Friday aft-

CUSC Meets Here Today

The executive committee of the | tion. and problems facing the organiza- of the three delegations.

Council will meet with President presidents from N. C. State, WC Student Legislature. The appli- ed Earl Fitzgerald of UNC, president identified with musical organiza-

Complete Text Of Bill To Recommend Cheating Leniency

Following is complete text of 'he "leniency bill" introduced recently in the student Legislature by Dave Reid, Student Party legisla-

The bill is being printed in its entirety because this newspaper feels all students should have an understanding of the measure as it was presented to the lawmakers of this student body.

> A BILL TO LIBERALIZE PUNISHMENT IN FIRST OFFENSE CHEATING CASES

Whereas: There has long been a need for rehabilitation and correction instead of mere punishment in first offense cheating cases brought before the Honor Council, and

Whereas: Reform in this area would encourage more widespread participation in the operation of the Honor System since report ing an individual would not necessarily mean automatic

(See LENIENCY BILL, page 4)

To Convene Nov. 18:

State Student Legislature Will Interview Aspirant Delegates

North Carolina have been invited tion.

to receive France's highest decora- between legislature sessions, sembly.

til 10:30. Wednesday afternoon ernoon from 2 until 4:30. All of these meetings will be held in the Woodhouse Conference problem, representatives from the North Carolina Symphony and tione on primarily political top- State, secretary-treasurer.

The next tsession of the North ics when they appear before the Carolina State Student Legisla- selection board. The criteria usture will be held in Raleigh Nov. ed in determining the delegates 18. 19 and 20, according to the will be their interest, the pres- 15 he gave a recital in Steinway Legislature's Interim Council. entation of their information and Hall, and at 18 he was chosen by to send delegations, depending in The first assembly of the size on the enrollment. The del- North Carolina State Student egates gather in Raleigh to de- Legislature was sponsored in 1936 bate issues of educational, state, by Pi Kappa Delta forensic franational and international im- ternity at State College. This both recitalist and guest artist and group was more an oratorical a six-month tour of Europe, in ad-The two members of the In- society which convened annually dition to frequent recitals in col-> sed the Glenn Resolution to addiscussion.

and the Student Legislative As- the country's outstanding artists.

are eligible for membership in sembly. In November the nucleus Chamber Music Guild. Consolidated University Student Members include student body Carolina's delegation to the State group formed a council and elect- Both Wilk and Dr. Mason were Big wooden spoons replacing litle wooden spoons in Graham Mem mial's kitchenette.

Hill Hall Slates Wilk Concert Tuesday Night

A concert featuring Bach, Beethoven and Schumann selections will be presented by Maurice Wilk, American violinist, in Hill Hall Tuesday at 8 p.m. Dr. Wilton Mason of the University's Music Department will accompany.

Wilk will be the second guest artist to be presented at the Evening Concert Series this year under sponsorship of the UNC Department of Music.

The young violinist's entire musical education and training was undergone in New York, with the exception of a tour in Europe last summer when he was the distin guished pupil of Pablo Casals.

His first professional appearance was made at 14 when he played a Bach concerto with the Mutual Broadcasting System orchestra: at All colleges and universities of the factuality of their informa Toscanini for the NBC Symphony, becoming the youngest member of

> In the last few years, Wilk has had three Carnegie Hall recitals, some 15 Town Hall appearances as the United States.

In the fall of 1947 the State Associate Professor of music at the state.

make an all-out effort to revive forming in universities and colleges in the South. After thrashing through the He has appeared as soloist with services during World War II.

Scenes From 'The Crucible,' Which Opens Tonight

SCENES FROM 'THE CRUCIBLE,' The Carolina Playmakers' first production of the season, are shown above. Directly above, John Proctor (Robert Sonkowsky) and his wife, played by Leslie Casey, are shown in a tender moment. At the right, leading man Sonkowsky suspects the truth about rumors of witchery in Old Salem. The play will open tonight at 8:30 in the Playmakers Theatre, and will run through next Monday night.

Pat Hunter Chairman:

Group Appointed To Explain Honor System To High Schools

UNC Student Government President Tom Creasy recently appointed Friday and Saturday mit Negro delegates after much which furnishes accompanists to a committee to disseminate information regarding student council and performances are completely sold traveling artists. Mason, who is honor system functions to all AAA and AA high schools throughout out, and the play is being held

The committee, consisting of Chairman Pat Hunter, Herb Browne, ced that it had dissolved itself Southeast, accompanying many of Nancy Whisnant, Joan Metz, Bob the 1954-55 academic year.

Eberle, Sonia Bergan, Ed McCur- The primary aim of the program ing room will be available at the days: Monday night from 9 un- the State College students result- Leslie Chabay in Chapel Hill. he rey, Rollie Tillman, Lu Ann Thorn- was expressed by Creasy: "I feel ook office for other performed in action on the part of the went on tour with Britain's leading ton, Kendrick Townsend and Carol that too many students come to mees. from 2 until 4:30, Thursday night Debate Council at Chapel Hill to violinist, Alfredo Campoli, per- Webster, will visit each of the University each year with no However, tickets should be system. I hope that by the talks Playmakers business office. 214 high schools at some time during idea of the workings of our honor bought immediately either at the According to Creasy the pro- in various schools, we will not Abernethy Hall, or Ledbetter-State, Meredith, WCUNC and has been both piano and harpsi- gram, which received counsel and only enlighten the students as to Pickard's. All students of the University UNC decided to continue the As- chord soloist with the Raleigh advice from Assistant Director of the workings of the honor system Director of "The Crueible" is Admissions Charlie Brenard, was at Carolina but, I hope also that we Foster Fitz-Simmons, Playmaker begun early last spring but, due may influence the adoption of such staff member. Costumes are by o'clock to discuss various issues and UNC, along with the chairmen cants will be asked various ques- dent, and James Cranford of tions while serving with the armed to limited time, was not carried a system in the schools con-

'Crucible' To Open At 8:30

Last week a cow was running errant through the streets of world created on the stage of the Playmakers Theatre, a lot of cows are wandering through the streets of old Salem, Mass., because their masters are in jail.

The charge for jailing most of the population of Salem is witchcraft and the punishment is death by hanging. Only one man dares to face the truth about the witching panic, and Anthur Miller's play, "The Crucible," opening tonight at 8:30, in the Playmakers Theatre, is

"The Crucible." and electrifying play which promises to keep the audience on the edge of their seats, will play through Monday night.

A few seats and limited standby Charles Jeffers.

Part Of The Story Of Gordon Gray:

The President Of The University And His Students

(Taking note of the most often-heard criticism of President Gray among students-that he's too far away from students and their problems-The Daily Tar Heel sent Reporter Childs to try to find an answer. He talked with Mr. Gray, and came up with this report.-Editor.

By CHARLES CHILDS

He leaned back in his swivel chair, lit a Cavalier and said, "Well, what would you like to know?" So began an interview and investigation of a man few people really know-Gordon Gray. The first thing discussed was his undergraduate days at Carolina. He took undergraduate life very seriously and participated in many student affairs. One of these activities was the formation by Kay Kyser of a new student organization called "Cheerios," and its purpose was to "get school spirit" for athletic contests. Gray seriously explained that he did not consider it immature to have "organized vocal effort at sports." And he felt that things which build school spirit are "not a waste of time."

As a sophomore, Gray was initiated into DKE and lived in its house until his senior year. He then rented an apartment with two friends, David Craig now a lawyer in Charlotte, and W. R. Huger, now with the Champion Paper and Fiber Corporation in Asheville. When asked if noise was a factor in their getting the apartment, he smiled and said "I contributed as much noise as the others." Of course, from looking at his record (all A's except three grades), it looks as if neither wind, sleet nor hail had any influence on his studying.

Like several other men, Gray enjoys playing golf. But he confessed that of the Sunday foursome, "I'm the poorest player." Poor to him means a score of 80-95, but he had no other comment on the quality of his golf. Later, one of his weekly golf partners said that Gray had said he was going to give up golf for paddle tennis; each time his score improves, he changes his mind. But in any event, there's a new paddle tennis court being built behind the President's house. Gray is paying for the court, but if he gets many more 37's on the first nine holes, he might turn pro. He hesitates to call himself a liberal because of the myriad of definitions which have come to be attached to the term. Gray prefers being known as a fair and just man. As far as his life outside of his office is concerned, it is full of "homework," TV and a 7-year-old son, one of three. Gray lives a very quiet life with negligible social life!

Suggestions

In reference to his call for suggestions as to how he could get closer to the students. The Daily Tar Heel interviewed more than 60 students and asked for their suggestions. These suggestions were then summarized and separated into four main divisions, which were presented to Grav.

The first suggestion was that he meet with groups of about 300 students and let them ask him questions. Gray's reply to this was that it was a "very interesting suggestion" and that he "will be willing to try to work out such an arrangement." His question about the plan was "would a great number of students be interested or would the meetings be re-attended by the same students?"

The second suggestion was to have his office open to students. "I don't think a student fails to get in if he wants to see me." He explained that this was a "complicated problem since there are 6,000 students here, 2,400 in Greensboro and 4,000 in Raleigh." He does things by appointment, and he said "I do not want to discourage students, and I am sorry that they feel that they aren't welcome." The third suggestion was that he could attend pep rallies. "I have done that-not this year," Gray said, and continued that he could not have attended the State-Carolina pep rally, because the game was between two branches of the Consolidated University. He has not been invited to a State College pep rally. However, it appeared as if he would accept invitations to such student gatherings.

The last suggestion was that he should hold open house and let the students feel welcome. This would lead to complications, he said, because there are three institutions.

Personality

Gray has an easy-going manner which makes people feel that they are not being rushed. But underneath he has a constant drive which is visible only in his work habits. He stays in his office for about eight hours each day and even before he leaves his office, he packs a brief-case with homework. Of his work habits, Chancellor Robert B. House had this to say: "Gray drives himself. . . . He is a late sitter and an early riser . . . and he keeps longer hours than anyone in the University." Dean of Student Affairs Fred Weaver provided some interesting observations which agree with those of other people. Gray has a "fairness and respect for facts which is remarkable," said Weaver. His "work habits are disciplined and yet deliberate, but I have never felt hurried" in talk-

PRESIDENT OF THE CONSOLIDATED UNIVERSITY

. . . do the students know him well enough?

To pople who have had the occasion to either attend school with him, work with him or speak with him, Gray is a very reserved but cordial man.

This quiet nature of Gray was evident while he was an undergraduate. Prof. English Bagby, who taught Gray several undergraduate courses, gave some informing reflections of Gray. He was an "extremely quiet student, talked only when asked questions in seminars, and was very reserve," according to Bagby. Even Grav's desire for facts was very pronounced: "he was always evaluating . . . so many students try to get answers for examinations-he didn't." Bagby never "knew a man who knew so much and said so little."

Bagby said that Gray reminded him of a little 11-year-old girl who wrote an essay. In the essay she said that "one of her brothers wanted to see the queen's palace, another wanted to see some other great thing, but that she wanted to see everything. To me, Gray is like that little girl."

When told that the students did not know the type person Gray is, Bagby said that i was no surprise, because "our contact with him lacks intimacy, so that it is extremely difficult to know what manner of man he is." Since "our behavior towards a person depends upon our definition," we cannot know him because we cannot define him. Bagby continued to say it is unfortunate that more students do not know Gray. He felt that "if it were easier to get access to him, they would find him pleasant, charming but reserved."

The whole question of Gray's relation with the students is tied up in his personality and his job.

His Job And His Students

There are two views of the influence of Gray's job on his relations with students.

The first view is that Gray's job of being president of three institutions requires considerable time and that it leaves little time for him to meet with students. If he took time to see each student he would have no time to run the University. "Gray is trying to get the administration of the university back on the track," say some.

Student contact with the president is desirable, "but is the idea of students seeing the president outdated?" ask others. Running a multimillion dollar institution on a business-like basis requires meetings and records. Gray has done a lot for the University . . . he has for

(See GORDON GRAY, page 4)