Three dormitories have approved the bill proposing the establishment of "The Brigadoons."

Stacy, Lewis and Grimes have approved the bill and voted to sponsor "The Brigadoons."

John Beshara, social chairman of the Interdormitory Council, proposed the measure to the IDC. In order for "The Brigadoons" to be effective, it will have to be approved by all of the 19 men's dorms by Nov. 17.

"The Brigadoons" is a function of the IDC, created in order to sponsor a dance this year and one such dance each semester beginning with the 1955-56 academic year.

College Presidents Talk Integration

By The Associated Press

Elections of officers and a discussion of how North Carolina college presidents feel about admission of Negroes concluded a two-day meeting of the North Carolina College Conference here today.

Most of the presidents indicated in a survey that they are "undecided" on how to cope with the racial integration problem.

Reactions reportedly ranged from the heads of "three colleges" which now admit "carefully selected" Negroes to their former all-white student bodies to the statement of two presidents that their schools are "categorically opposed" to admitting Negroes.

Dr. Arthur M. Bannerman, president of Warren Wilson College at Swannanoa, who made the survey, said that most of the 37 colleges which are members of the conference "lie somewhere in between" those two extremes. His report, read to the conference in his absence by Dr. L. C. Lamotte of Presbyterian Junior College, Maxton, did not name the three colleges which now admit Negroes.

He said the survey showed, generally, that trustees are inclined to be more opposed to the admissions than the faculties and students, and the faculties are more opposed than the students.

The conference's new slate of officers is headed by Dr. B. Dennis Cooke, president of High Point College, who succeeds Dr. Carlyle Campbell, president of Meredith. Miss Bonnie Cone, president of Charlotte College, was elected vice president and Dr. James Hillman of Raleigh, a member of the State Department of Education, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Members named to the executive committee were Dr. Campbell, Dean R. L. Lee of Mars Hill and Dr. R. D. Wellons, president of Pembroke State College.

Dr. Bannerman's report on integration revealed that 22 college presidents are in favor of beginning integration on a college level, while seven are opposed. Twenty-four indicated a belief that integration will become a reality soon, while six believed it will be blocked for some years to come.

The conference acted to bring teaching of high school and college levels more in step with each other by approving plans for a statewide testing program designed to spotlight college material all the way through the public school system.

UNC Press Books Are On Display

A permanent display of current books published by the University Press is now on exhibit in the lobby of the Library.

As new books are published by the Press, they will be added to this exhibit and the older ones will be withdrawn. By using this method the latest publications of the Press will always be displayed.

Aside from the permanent display, there are numerous exhibits of other books that have been produced by the Press that have won wide acclaim throughout the publishing world.

Among these are numerous books that have won the Mayflower Award, which is presented annually to the resident of North Carolina who writes the most outstanding book in the non-fiction field.

The University Press was founded in 1922 by members of the UNC faculty and board of trustees who believed that scholarship and scholarly publishing must go hand in hand if learning was to flourish.

In its first year of operation, the Press published one paper-bound book and one cloth-bound book, after examining a few manuscripts. Today the Press examines hundreds of manuscripts annually and publishes dozens of books every year.

Since its small beginning 32 years ago when only two books were published, the University Press has, to date, published some 700 books and has distributed tens of thousands of these volumes.

Police Act On 'Note'

Some time between 4 p.m. Wednesday and 10 a.m. Thursday, the ignition key was stolen from the car of Leon Meadows, a grad student in education. According to Meadows, the key was stolen by another motorist who was "dissatisfied" with the way in which the car was parked.

A note was found inside the car. It was a "very profane" note which stated that the writer intended to do away with the car key because he thought the car was badly parked. The police sergeant who investigated the theft thought that the car was properly parked, and that it was blocking no one.

The note is being examined by the police for possible fingerprints. According to a report received by The Daily Tar Heel, "a positive arrest is indicated."

The University Testing Service gave the Scouts personal interest tests last night. Each will be notified of his own special aptitude toward a profession.

There will be a selection and crowning of a Queen at the dance to be held at the UNC Naval Armory from 7:30 until 11 o'clock Saturday evening. All girls and Explorer Scouts are welcome to attend.
