University's Not Liable For TV Antennas, Says Official

By LOUIS KRAAR

A South Building official made it clear yesterday that the University would not assume financial responsibility for dorm television antennas damaged by Hurricane Hazel.

The official, Purchasing Director J. A. Branch, said the University acted only as an agent for the student Legislature in obtaining and installing the TV sets.

Branch cited the student Legislature bill granting the dorms the TV sets. The bill states in its last article that "after the appropriation (of the sets) the financial responsibility for maintenance shall be assumed by the dorm to which it has been appropriated."

IDC Action

Branch made his statement after an announcement this week by Manning Muntzing, chairman of the Interdormitory Council, that the student dorm group would ask President Gordon Gray for financial aid in the antenna matter.

The IDC voted 23-11 to appeal to President Gray after Bruce Morton, president of Grimes Dorm, presented what he termed "the law of fixtures." According to Morton, a law student, as soon as the antennas were attached to dormitory roofs, they became University property.

Based On Judgment

Morton said he based his argument on a North Carolina Supreme Court case (Wentz v. Fincher) considered in 1851. The decision in that case, Morton said, stated "where one builds a rail fence on property owned by another, the title of the rails passes to the owner of the land."

The IDC, in making its motion, said that Director of Operations J. S. Bennett had officially said the tangled antennas were the responsibility of individual dormitories. However, the student group will base its protest on the theory that dorms have only limited funds and that such repair would exhaust their appropriations.

Muntzing would not say whether or not he agreed with Morton's stand, but he did say he would go along with the IDC's decision to write President Gray. Muntzing also complained that the antennas were poorly installed.

Dorm Council Was Set Up In Autumn Of '35

By NEIL BASS

It was a crisp, sparkling day in the autumn of 1935. In a smoke-filled room in South Building a decision was being made which was to leave a vivid impression on the "Carolina Mode of Life" for a great number of succeeding years. This was the genesis of the Interdormitory Council.

Since this comparatively unimportant beginning, there has been a remarkable transformation. The once unimportant group has become an institution. The council has become the coordinating agent, the very pulse of all men's dorm activities.

The principle in part on which the organization was founded is set forth in its by-laws in these words: "To promote and maintain an efficient system of dormitory government and to foster a wholesome program of social activities."

Not only has the dorm government lived up to its established ideology, but it has gone still further. For by virtue of the group's continued efficiency, and fair policies, it has been vested with the power to speak for the dorm man.

Power

This power evolves from the principle on which the group was originated. . . that the council is composed of representatives from every men's dorm on campus. Each dorm has a voice in the diplomatic affairs of the organization.

Such representatives are duly elected by the individual dorms before Oct. 15 of each year and are required to take an oath stating that they "will work diligently to maintain suitable dormitory conditions" before assuming office.

The IDC is headed by Manning Muntzing, current president. On his executive department falls the task of synchronizing the vast arteries of the organization, the

Creasy Commends Bi-Partisan Handling Of Book-X Problem

Student body President Tom Creasy issued a statement yesterday concerning the bi-partisan committee on Book Store profits.

"One project that both parties have been the Book-X and vending machines profits project," Creasy said.

The three students on the committee are Max Chron (UP), Charlie Hyatt (SP) and Creasy. Creasy lauded Hyatt's efforts in his statement by saying, "he has been on the committee for two years and has put forth continual effort in working for better prices at the book store."

Creasy also announced in his statement that the entire Campus Store Committee will meet this week to further the plans of the student committee.

Another Bouquet

Creasy tossed another bouquet to another committee member, Sam Wells, in the statement. Said Creasy, he "has been invaluable in preparing a case and strengthening the dormitories' argument for having the profits (from vending machines) returned to their respective dormitories."

The president ended his statement with the wish that "these two very important projects be kept out of student politics."

He continued, "Charlie Hyatt and myself have agreed that it has been and will be necessary that both parties work together on the vending machine and Book-X profit project; for only by presenting a united front to the administration and trustees can we hope to accomplish our goals."

Dating Discussion

Mrs. Arnold Nash, formerly Carolina's marriage counselor, will speak on "Do's and Don'ts of Dating" at the Freshman Fellowship meeting tomorrow night.

The meeting will be held upstairs in Lenoir Hall at 6:15 p. m.

Mrs. Nash will consider questions on dating, courting, marriage and sex that have been asked by members of the Fellowship. There will be a question and answer period following her talk.

Social

The last com., in its initial year has presented one of the most active agendas for social activity that the campus has ever known, and, according to its chairman, "the program is just beginning."

The statement aptly describes the philosophy that the present IDC possesses. As president Muntzing puts it, "The council covers many phases of dorm life, each of which has a definite goal."

Expenses

Itemized expense accounts of the candidates in the fall elections are due by 6 p. m. Monday. They may be turned in at the Student Government Office in Graham Memorial or to Graham Rights in 28 Steele. Any candidates failing to report their expenditures will be disqualified from the election.

Pease Porridge Hot . . .

Twenty weeks old. The Ram, Alexander Dormitory's weekly newspaper, said this week that June 26 "is the date stamped on one shipment of eggs now stored in the basement of Lenoir Hall. The newspaper had previously complained of the color of the dining hall's scrambled eggs.

Notre Dame's Fighting Irish Whip UNC In Top-Heavy Game, 42-13

By FRED BABSON

Parker And McMullen Snag Aerials For Only UNC Scores

NOTRE DAME STADIUM, SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 14 — The mighty Notre Dame legions trotted onto the field and simply outclassed the Tar Heels of North Carolina, 42-13, here today before more than 55,000 fans.

North Carolina, ranked eighth in the nation in pass defense before today, were the victims of a devastating aerial attack, conducted by four Irish quarterbacks, as Coach Terry Brennan cleared the bench after acquiring a safe lead early in the game. The victors gained 213 yards through the air.

Notre Dame's All-America candidate, Ralph Guglielmi, guided the Irish to a 21-0 lead in the second quarter, completing seven of 12 passes, one for a touchdown, then retired for the afternoon.

The Irish also maintained supremacy on the ground, grinding out 185 yards rushing, not counting a kickoff return of 77 yards and a pass interception while Carolina could only manage an aggregate of 64 yards.

In the first half the Irish dominated the activities overwhelmingly, gaining 90 yards on the ground, 175 in the air, and rolling up 12 first downs; while UNC picked up only 29 yards rushing, nine yards passing, in accumulating three first downs. Notre Dame led at the half, 28-0.

Most of the Irish regulars were out of the second half, as Brennan experimented with his sophomores, and not until then did Carolina manage to make two successive first downs. Paul Hornung, 18-year-old, 6'2", 190-pound sophomore quarterback handled a greater part of the signal-calling chores for Notre Dame after Guglielmi left the scene. Hornung, who is being heralded as potentially one of the greatest Irish quarterbacks ever, gained 72 yards in seven carries for a 10.2 yard rushing average, besides running a pass interception back 70 yards. He completed only two of seven passes, but some of the blame for his lack of success in this department lay in his ends inability to hold onto the ball.

Senior halfback Connie Gravitte only carried the ball four times, but gained 41 yards, to lead the losers. Most of Gravitte's yardage came on his 34 yard scamper in the third quarter.

End Will Frye and Center George Stavitski were the outstanding defensive players for the losers.

High Schools Sending Bands Here Dec. 2

A total of 700 high school students are expected to participate in a music festival to be held in Memorial Hall on Dec. 2, according to Milton Bliss, director of music at Chapel Hill High School.

The University, along with the UNC Department of Music, will play host for the event.

The following groups will appear on the program:

The Senior High Chorus, under the direction of Sam Taylor, choral director of New Hanover High School, Wilmington; the Junior High Chorus, led by Mrs. Eileen Nichols, choral director of Lindley Junior High School, Greensboro, and the Senior High Band, directed by Harold Andrews, Duke University band director.

The groups will rehearse all day Dec. 2 and climax the day's work with a concert at 8 p. m. in Memorial Hall.

Bliss said the concert will be open to the public at no charge.

Miss Jan Saxon, coloratura soprano who will sing in Graham Memorial's Fourth Petite Musicale tonight, will sing 16 songs, arranged in five groups.

Miss Saxon will sing "Should He Upbraid," "Have You Seen But a White Lily Grow," "Alleluia," "O Del Mio Amato Ben," "La Girometta," "Charmant Papillon," "Je Crains De Lui Parler La Nuit."

Stocking Fund Starts

This year, as in the past four, the Empty Stocking Fund is continuing its service to the Chapel Hill community.

Already this year, requests from 250 needy families in the Chapel Hill area have poured in to fund headquarters. Last year, 500 families received Christmas boxes.

In past years, the Fund has operated on a centralized basis. Gifts, hundreds of them, were collected, sorted and wrapped by the Junior Service League, which sponsors the fund. This year, if the number of donations last year was any indication, the job will be too big for the League to handle. Therefore the program has been put on an individual and group basis, using the adoption method which has been successful in Durham for some time.

Those who wish to adopt families should notify Mrs. G. P. Childress, the chairman of the Fund, at 9-9303 before December 20. Upon notification, the committee will furnish the adopter with the names, ages, sizes, special needs and address of the family adopted.

Education Students To Start Practice Teaching Tomorrow

UNC's School of Education Teacher preparation program will move into the second phase of the fall semester's work tomorrow, as some 55 men and women transfer from the University campus to the classrooms of the state's public schools.

By Jan. 21, the prospective teachers will have completed eight weeks in the actual work of classroom teaching and management under the guidance of competent teachers in the public schools.

Nineteen of the group have prepared for elementary teaching; the remaining 36 have prepared for teaching in various fields of secondary education, including English, social studies, mathematics, Spanish, physical education and music.

State's Brief Is Ready

RALEIGH — North Carolina's contentions on the subject of segregation in the public schools are scheduled to reach the U. S. Supreme Court Monday.

Some 40 copies of the state's brief in the segregation cases were placed in the mail by the attorney general's office yesterday. They will be released to the press of the state in morning papers tomorrow.

In declaring school segregation unconstitutional last spring, the Supreme Court invited states with segregated schools to participate in arguments on how the decision is to be made effective. The court will hear oral arguments in the cases next month. North Carolina was one of the states which accepted the invitation to join in the arguments.

In its brief, the state is expected to ask the court for the longest possible time to place desegregation into effect. It is also expected to urge that federal district courts and local school officials be given wide discretion in deciding the status of particular schools and school districts.

Alleged Red's Bond Has Not Been Set Yet

MIAMI, Fla. — Sam Hirsch, 37, remained under $10,000 bond yesterday awaiting arraignment in criminal court on a perjury indictment.

The Dade County grand jury indicted Hirsch, Biltmore Playhouse director and former drama instructor at the University of Miami, on eight counts of perjury. He was arrested Oct. 22 and released under bond pending arraignment, but no date has been set.

The criminal charges were voted after Hirsch had testified under oath before the jury in the state attorney's office that he had no association with or knowledge of Communist Party activities.

First Piano Quartet Coming Thursday

Rdam Garner, Glauco Di Attili, Frank Mittlere and Edward Edson—better known as the First Piano Quartet—will be here Thursday night in a free concert to students. A spokesman for the student Entertainment Committee, the group that is bringing the quartet here, said yesterday that an overflow crowd was expected for the concert and students were advised to come early. Admission will be made by ID cards and the doors open at 7 p. m.

They Met Again

RALEIGH — About five years ago, the head of the New York office of the FBI made a speech to the N. Y. Rotary Club. The speaker was Edward Scheidt. The president of the Rotary Club was named Luther Hodges.

Friday the speaker and the Rotary Club president met again when Scheidt, director of North Carolina's Motor Vehicles Dept., called on the Governor of North Carolina, Luther Hodges,
