

One-Act Play Tryouts Tomorrow

Try-outs for parts in student written and directed one-act plays will be held by The Carolina Play-makers at 11 Murphey Hall from 4 to 6.

The three plays chosen for production this semester are: "Frieds" by Joseph Rosenberg; "Doris" by Virginia Ferguson, and "Gomennasai" by Christian Moe, winner of the Frederick H. Koch scholarship awarded promise in playwriting.

Graduate students in the department of dramatic art will direct the plays. They are: Suzanne Kramer, "Gomennasai" and Marjorie Wyde, "Doris."

Student Actors Go On The Boards Thursday

The sign outside says "Carrboro Cash Store," but the only thing inside that's left of the store are a few posters proclaiming the "specials of the week."

It's a white board building just beside the rail road tracks before you get to Carrboro and "Sound and Fury" has rented it for their scenery shop.

Saturday night, the the show's director Bo Bernardin, head scenery artist Hartwell Conklin and crew were working on the sets banded up in all of the warm clothes they could muster and they still swore it was colder in the store than that than it was outside.

Miss Bernardin says that the show is "shaping up very well" and last night the whole cast had a full practice with complete musical score and dance routines.

Music for the show is under the direction of Max Warner (piano) and his combo is made up of Wyatt Dixon (guitar and banjo), Jake Phelps (bass viol) and a drummer who is reported to be a protege of Gene Krupa.

The show will open Thursday night in Memorial Hall under the name of "Scandals of 1955." It is made up of "takeoffs" on two Broadway shows, "Pajama Game" and "Can Can."

Tickets for the show, which boasts and all-student cast of 45, are on sale today, tomorrow and Thursday at Graham Memorial and the Y-Court at 50c a throw.

Hilltop Trees Dormant; Low Pressure's Back

The high wind today is predicted to be in the low 40's, said officials at the Raleigh-Durham airport, yesterday. The weather conditions persisting now are caused by a low pressure center located in Georgia, and moving slowly eastward.

HILLTOP TREES

Dr. J. N. Couch, Professor of chemistry and botany, says "Weeks of cold weather would not harm the trees".

He went on to explain that most of the trees in this climate, even the holly, are dormant now. At the dormant stage, there is little water in the sap, and therefore no growth occurring. He said that if a cold spell had happened in the spring after more water had gone into the sap and growth were taking place, then the trees would be harmed.

Even such trees, he said, as the Japanese magnolia which is due to bloom after Christmas, will not be affected by the cold weather. There is a Japanese magnolia located in the north east corner of the Arboretum.

The only way this type of weather could harm the trees, he said, would be for the water on the trees to freeze. The weight of the ice would cause the limbs to break off.

-Resolution Coming Up-

West Dorn ...

Taylor gave Horner's attack on the Old West resolution as the main reason for the resolution which he will bring up.

The sports editor of a paper in a near-by town put in his column that Old West and University students do not have the right to express themselves as that, and so the first reason I am bringing up the resolution is to remind people that they have the right and that if they do not use it people will assume as he did that we don't have it," said Taylor.

The president of Old West, in giving other reasons for his resolution, said, "Many students think that the people of the state have the wrong idea of what students think here. They say that The Daily Tar Heel and the Di and Phi express opinions which resolutions (such as the one brought up the meeting of Old West) give the average student in opportunity to make known his ideas.
